The AMERICAN desires to emphasize the statements appearing above—that these figures represent the actual cash paid for circulation by days.

Also, the AMERICAN desires to state prominently that any and every advertiser is welcome to make his own audit—a close inspection of the AMERICAN'S circulation books—if desired.

35 FIREMEN OVERCOME; SAVED BY COMRADES

Two District Chiefs Among Victims of Smoke and Gas Heroically Rescued at Blaze on Ferry Street, North End

Unconscious Men Rushed to the Relief Hospitals; Captain Riley and Lieutenant Long Lead in the Work of Rescue

Thirty-five firemen, including a chief, an acting chief and several other officers of the department, were overcome by a peculiar combination of chemical gases and smoke while fighting a fire in the basement of the building at Nos. 12 to 28 Ferry street, North End, shortly before midnight, last night. While the fire did damage estimated at only $2,500 and only one alarm was sounded, the apparatus remained at the scene for nearly three hours.

The flames originated in a pile of excelsior and backwater up the greater part of the oxygen in the room before the firemen arrived. The basement has no windows and no means of ventilation, the only entrance being through a door leading from the first floor.

When the air was dissolved by the flames, causing almost a vacuum, the illuminating gas pipes burst and the fumes escaped. To make matters worse, ammonia pipes connected with a cold storage plant beside in three of four.

FIREMEN OVERCOME.

It was this condition, no air and the chemical combination of gas and ammonia fumes, that met the firemen when they carried the first line of hose into the blazing basement.

One by one the firemen were overcome. Several were brought out unconscious, and while other firemen took their places, only to be overcome themselves, policemen, newspapermen and citizens worked over those who had been rescued and lay on the sidewalks.

On both sides of the building and on the sidewalk opposite the fire, firemen lay in doorways or leaned against buildings and finally collapsed in the street.

Nearly a score of the men overcome were treated at the relief station, while others were given first aid treatment by physicians who had been called to the scene by the police.

When the firemen were brought out of the building, some in the arms of their comrades, others thrown over the shoulders of firemen on the backs of collapsed, they were laid on the sidewalks.

CHIEF'S SON OVERCOME.

Edward McDonough, son of Chief Peter McDonough, and his aide, went into the basement and was overcome. Dropping his lantern Chief McDonough fell to his knees side as he came to the street in a state of collapse. The young fireman fell in a swoon in his father's arms. A stretcher was hastily procured, the latter and he was taken to the hospital.

Among those treated at the Relief Station were Chief Sennett, Acting District Chief Gillin, Captain Ryan of Engine 25, Captain Hines and Lieutenant Rose of Engine 3; Lieutenant Swift, Protective Department; Roemer, Maguire, Steele and Holland of Engine 1; Lieutenant Carroll, Andrell and Pursley of Ladder 17, and Hostetter, Murphy, Montgomery and Griffin of Engine 27.

When the powder combining gas discovered arms was sent to Station 1 and Captain Kimball ordered every ambulance in Boston to the scene, finally calling upon Charlestown for assistance.

In the meantime police Surgeon William J. Dolan and Dr. Richard Hooking had arrived and lent relief. Able assistance to the men on the sidewalks. The doctors declared that the men had been overcome by carbon monoxide fumes.

As soon as the men reached the

CHOIR SINGER IN SIEGEL CASE

Mrs. Diana ("Dolly") Eddy, Dorchester woman named by Mrs. Siegel in divorce suit against Henry Siegel, also wanted by District Attorney Pelletier to tell what she knows about Siegel's affairs.

ON TRAIL OF SINGER IN SIEGEL TANGLE

Police, Armed With Warrant, Trace Mrs. Diana Eddy, Named by Wife of Bankrupt Merchant, to Apartments in Providence

Officials, However, Arrive Too Late to Find Woman Sought by the District Attorney in an Effort to Clear Up Case

Mrs. Diana E. (Dolly) Eddy, a well-to-do and engaging Dorchester widow, named by Mrs. Henry Siegel in her divorce suit and sought by District Attorney Pelletier for information as to Henry Siegel's financial affairs, was traced last night by Boston and Providence police inspectors and a Pinkerton detective to a fashionable apartment house, the Minden, on College Hill, in Providence.

Mrs. Eddy, who left Boston the day that Mrs. Siegel's divorce suit was made public, has been the guest of Mrs. James Brown, a wealthy widow who lives in an eighth floor suite in the Minden with her two daughters and her son James Brown, II. It is common talk in the Minden that Mrs. Eddy and James Brown are engaged.

[illegible] reporters were sent to the Minden [illegible] Providence, but when they arrived there was no use in their efforts. The manager of the Minden told a AMERICAN reporter that Mrs. Eddy left the hotel yesterday [illegible] and did not [illegible] in.

PELLETIER DETECTIVES TRACE DIANA EDDY, CHOIR SINGER, TO PROVIDENCE

Reported Engagement of Widow to Scion of Manufacturer Stirs Up New Interest.

Mrs. Eddy, when they believed to be at a certain address, Justice Nathan called to Presiding Justice Frederick Bruckner, who asked who is known in Rhode Island as a witness summons to Inspector Caffrey.

This kind of a summons is issued in Rhode Island in case of request from an officer of another State in the United State, to permit the serving of a summons from another State.

ARRIVE TOO LATE.

Meanwhile Inspector Wade had not to touch with a motor detective while the Inspector to meet him outside the apartment hotel, the Minden, at No. 121 Waterman street, one of the best residential districts of the city.

This detective had traced the pretty choir singer by the address on her trunks when she left her boarding-house in Hyde Park early on Monday morning. At the Minden, Inspector Caffrey met the Tiverton detective just outside the Minden and entered the hotel. They went up to the eighth floor, where Mrs. Susan Brown, widow of the late James Brown, lives.

A few words in connection with the Minden said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"Mrs. Eddy was here up to this morning, when she went away. She was the guest of Mrs. Brown, who has been here several times before. Mrs. Brown has just told the officers that Mrs. Eddy is out now and that there is no use in waiting for her."

The officer went to chairs and sat down in the hallway of the eighth floor to wait for Mrs. Eddy, but there seemed slim chance of finding her.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle is in charge of the search, for the District Attorney is absence of Mr. Pelletier in New York. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Lavelle gave Inspector John J. McCarthy of detectives for a flock Bay man who is said to have conferred with Mrs. Eddy just before she left Boston.

Before Mr. Pelletier left for New York he said:

PUZZLED BY SECRECY.

"Mrs. Eddy acts as if she had something to conceal. Why does she refuse to tell this secrecy if there is nothing to hide. I want to talk with her. There are many things that I want to ask her. She will go to Mrs. Eddy and will talk with her if I have to send an over the country to do it. I am going to get to the end of the rope on this matter. No leniency can be looked for in Boston, and I am going to make an all out fight in this case until it is all uncovered."

Mr. Pelletier is interested in the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Siegel only as it may shed more light on Henry Siegel's financial standing. He seeks information from all people who have been in close touch with Siegel.

The Pelletier Attorney has made up his mind not to rest in the prosecution against Siegel—also against Frank E. Chapell, whose arrest also will be pushed just as hard here and in New York.

And he is particularly determined that, in case Siegel and Vogel secure immunity in New York, that the New York depositors are paid up, the depositors in the Siegel bank in Boston shall also be reimbursed.

Private detectives from New York are also trailing Mrs. Eddy. They are thought to be in the services of Mrs. Siegel, who wishes to keep track of the woman against whom she has publicly brought one of the most serious accusations that one woman can make against another.

Mrs. Siegel said in her divorce suit that her husband met Mrs. Eddy while she was a soloist at the church in Mamaroneck, N. Y., where the Siegels' Summer home was located.

District Attorney Pelletier has been informed that Mrs. Eddy and Siegel did meet at Mamaroneck, and also in New York, and the District Attorney's office the conference was held that Mrs. Eddy might be no conversation with Siegel's counsel in fairs that she would know something of those "compromising letters" which Mrs. Siegel charges are in the hand, in addition to her other accusations.

FRIEND OF DAUGHTER.

It was learned yesterday that Mrs. Eddy is an intimate friend of the Siegels' daughter Julia, and a friend of the real William Cavendish, one of the survivors of the Titanic disaster.

This puts an even more extraordinary complexion upon the charges Mrs. Siegel makes against Mrs. Eddy—her own daughter's close companion.

Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. Cavendish are "Julia" and "Dolly" to each other. Mrs. Eddy is called "Dolly" by her intimate associates.

The two women exchanged visits. They often have been seen together in Boston. Only last year, when Mrs. Cavendish was visiting Mrs. Eddy at her Dorchester home, a reception was given at the Professional Women's Club by Mrs. Eddy in honor of Mrs. Cavendish. Mrs. Eddy is one of the leading members of that club. Her activities in its annual theatricals, constitute a chapter by themselves.

Mrs. Eddy visited Mrs. Cavendish in New York. Mrs. Eddy's friends said yesterday that the intimacy between Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. Cavendish would naturally bring Mrs. Eddy much in contact with the Siegel family, and that there might be plenty of perfectly legitimate occasion for Mrs. Eddy to see much of Mr. Siegel —her friend's father.

WATCH HOUSE NOW.

The reason why Mrs. Eddy was able to get away from home before a summons was served on her there is because the District Attorney's office did not know in time that she was the "Mrs. Eddy" named by Mrs. Siegel.

When the District Attorney's office learned of the Dorchester trail and arrived at No. 32 Parkman street, the comedy soon had gone.

Now the house is being watched night and day, against the possible return of the fair escapee.

Mrs. Eddy took with her when she went to enable her to be away quite a while. The baggage—two large trunks, an English traveling bag and a heavy suit case, were carried into a taxicab which sped away. Meanwhile a detective ran to the house, and, as he speaks, in the minute departure.

Mrs. Eddy's household consists of herself, her two boys and their nurse. But on the day of Mrs. Eddy's departure a third dark trunk was seen in evidence. Mrs. Eddy called him Jack.

He directed the shipping of the baggage. He was asked at that time if Mrs. Eddy was in the house. He answered:

"She has left town. I know nothing in connection with the Siegel case, and if I did, I wouldn't tell you."

With which excitement he shut him into the house in the face, refusing to be reopened with Mrs. Eddy. The widow was unusually fetching in a close-fitting gray tailored suit and dark plumed hat. She was animated. She chatted gaily with the baggage man, smiling at every other word.

NO SIGN OF WORRY.

The two did not come out the front door, but the back door. They entered the back yard to the home of a neighbor. The limousine, which had been awaiting the start, rolled up to the front of the neighbor's home. Mrs. Eddy and her companion, still chatting gaily, stepped in and were whirled away. They didn't seem afraid or worried. The trip must have been motoring to an afternoon of bridge, for all the concern they showed.

Mrs. Diana E. Eddy, to use her full name, is the widow of the late Robert Eddy. He was a man of wealth. Son of No 27 Parkman street, Dorchester, Mass., he was for many years head of the refrigerator company which bears his name.

Robert Eddy went on the road for the Armour Packing Company of Chicago. He was assigned to look up the foreign market and met the future Mrs. Eddy. She was an Englishwoman.

They were married in England and Mr. Eddy brought his bride back to this country. The two boys were born to them. Mr. Eddy died. Mrs. Eddy continued living in the Parkman street home, now owned by the heirs of her late husband's own relatives.

There is a regular "Eddy group" of homes on Parkman street. Mrs. Diana Eddy lives in No. 32. Her sister-in-law is the resident of Lodge Eddy, her husband's brother. Two more brothers, other way—at No. 27—is the residence of Lewis Eddy, her father-in-law. Across the way, at No. 26, lives Lewis Eddy's sister, Miss Lydia Eddy.

MODEL MOTHER.

The unimpeachable domestic reputation which these home associations would give a woman is fortified by the church and club ties which Mrs. Diana Eddy easily wedded for herself through her vocal ability, her personal magnetism and her own unquestionable beauty.

She is thirty-five years old and—as her women friends ungrudgingly admit—looks twenty-five.

She is of petite but finely molded figure. She is a blonde. Her voice is sweet, flexible and highly trained. She has the personal presence which comes from much appearance in public.

She is spoken of by her friends as a woman who has given her two boys, Lewis and William Abbott Eddy, a splendid home. She has devoted in addition to their training. In fact, a woman who has seen much of Mrs. Eddy and her boys of late yesterday with naturally indignation.

"No woman who is the mother of two such splendid young boys could have anything but wholesome thoughts."

Mrs. Eddy joined the Thursday Morning Portfolio Club, one of the leading literary organizations of the city.

She also joined the Professional Women's Club—to which her singing ability made her eligible. Right after she joined the club Mrs. Eddy seemed to find more pleasure than necessary as she is regularly engaged in her own right.

She is also singing for the professional Women's Club that Mrs. Eddy is best known to the general public. She modestly took the part of one of the foresters in the club's production of "As You Like It," three years ago. The next year she took up in the chorus of the club production of "The Mikado."

When the club prepared for amateur theatricals again last Spring through the generosity of Mrs. Eddy in 1913, Mrs. Diana Eddy was among the principals. Her charm and talents were not to be denied.

SANG IN MANY CHURCHES.

There annual productions of the Professional Women's Club are given under the patronage of some of the most aristocratic and conservative members of the Back Bay set, such as Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. William Appleton and so on.

Mrs. Eddy was a much admired and much petted member of the club casts and had the entree to some of the most typical Back Bay homes.

To put the seal of respectability upon the accused woman there have been many applications. One came in an Allston church, later in the Hyde Park. They she was engaged for the choir of the Hyde Park Methodist Church, where she was soon up to a week ago. She was engaged by Frank Baffer, chairman of the music committee, on whose recommended as a

Mrs. Eddy paid careful attention to her voice and took lessons of a Back Bay instructor in vocal music. That instructor, a woman, said last night:

"I never saw anything in Mrs. Eddy to indicate that she was particularly interested in any man, let alone Henry Siegel."

The teacher added that she heard Mrs. Eddy speak often of Mrs. Henry Siegel, but never of the husband.

Mrs. Eddy had a charge account at the store formerly conducted here by Henry Siegel. She was liked by the clerks on account of her amiable manner, and she was a discriminating buyer. The clerks in the departments catering to feminine needs recognized her as a patron who wished to dress well but conservatively.

Such an engaging widow was not without admirers. Of the sentimental side of her life her friends refuse to talk with less exactness for the obvious reason that Mrs. Eddy did not wish to be a target for shafts of sleet. She was no ingenue but a woman of much knowledge of men as well as of women, and her quiet but material charms would naturally assimilate. She knows what it is to be ardently sought.

WOOED BY NAVAL OFFICER.

A year ago, when one of the United States battleships was at Charleston Navy Yard, one of the officers,

Southern of fine family, met Mrs. Diana Eddy at a musical function and promptly fumbled head over heels in love like the officer and the gentlemen that he was. He wooed her Dixie-fashion, that is, warmly and gallantly, but he failed. Receiving the usual "no" he proceeded firmly. The naval man sailed away without having received more encouragement than beautiful sirens in the "Navy set."

One reason—and a first-class one, too—which Mrs. Eddy's friends give to help account for the naval officer's failure, is the supposition that she was then more interested in the prominent man to whom she is now reported to be engaged.

Mrs. Joseph Siegler, wife of the pastor of the Hyde Park church, said:

"Mrs. Eddy was in our choir for a year. Her work ended last Sunday under the arrangement made with her. She was always very nice and ladylike."

SIEGEL BANK ABLE TO PAY 80 PER CENT.

Latest Estimates Place Total "Dividends" at Two Millions of Dollars.

NEW YORK, April 4—Latest estimates place the total "dividends" which will be repaid depositors in the failed Siegel bank at $2,000,000. This is about 80 per cent. of the deposits and far exceeds the first estimates. It was said that the creditors of the institution could depend upon receiving this amount from the wreck, regardless of whether the criminal actions against Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel were pushed or not.

Friends and relatives of the indicted men have raised an additional $300,000, but it has been broadly hinted this will be converted into a defense fund if the prosecution is not stopped. Should this be added to other assets, the depositors will receive dollar for dollar.

Henry Melville, receiver of the bank, said today there was a feeling of nervousness on the part of interested interests that the $2,000,000 in common stock which he holds as security for loans from the bank to the stores may get into "unfriendly hands."

It is explained that this stock controls the Siegel Stores Corporations and thus the Chicago store of the same name. Last year this shows a profit of from $300,000 to $400,000. Interests friendly to Siegel control enough more of this stock to make the receivers' stock worth at least $1,000,000 more than par, and this said he had bid for this stock, but information were there was to be a contest for it.

700 Vermonters at 'Sugaring Off' Party

Hot Maple Syrup Served to Merry-makers on Snow.

Loyal sons and daughters of Vermont to the number of 700 attended the annual "sugaring off" party of the Vermont Association of Boston in Horticultural Hall last night. They ate hot maple syrup on snow with relish, and enjoyed the dance which continued for nearly four hours.

Colonel Everett C. Benton of Belmont was the life of the party as the entertainment committee were: George M. Dimond, Charles F. Hurlburt, Henry W. Blodgett, Jr., A. J. Dame, Harry F. Robinson, Orrin S. Mann, Martin A. Brown and Myron Cochran.

State House Dome Badly Lit, He Says

Art Expert Also Calls Those at Symphony Hall Unartistic.

Huger Elliott, art expert, connected with the Boston Art Museum, said in a lecture yesterday:

"The lighting effect on the State House dome couldn't be worse. The dome should be lighted in a way to show the gold surface instead of by horizontal lines of lamps.

"The lights in front of Symphony Hall are anything but artistic, but the bracket lights at the entrance to the Public Library are finely arranged and artistically designed.

Oh! Joy! for "Uncle Joe," Who Sails with 150 Beautiful Girls

Former Speaker Young and Happy on Trip to Bermuda.

NEW YORK, April 4—"Uncle Joe" Cannon, former Speaker of the House, and 150 beautiful young girls were among the passengers on the liner Arcadian when she sailed for Bermuda today.

Mr. Cannon looked sprightly, with a carnation in his lapel, and when asked how he felt he said that the interviewer might divide his seven-score years by two.

He refused to be interviewed on political topics, but said that the Arcadian around like a light ship and that he was quite picked her, and that he had learned to tango before going on board.

President Joins in 'Go-to-Church' Day

WASHINGTON, April 4—Everybody from the President down on the dancing is popular dancing halls here have been asked by the promoters of the "Go-to-church" day tomorrow to make April 5 a record-breaker in point of church attendance here.

President Wilson has promised to make a start by going. His Cabinet have fallen into line and the ministers approached have also pledged themselves to be present. Only last night over twelve hundred dancers held up their hands in promise to go to church tomorrow.

Old Tunes to Be Taught in Schools

Director M'Laughlin to Do Away With Present System.

Boston school children are to be taught to sing the tunes that were popular a generation ago, James McLaughlin, director of music, has a scheme to do away with the system of singing now taught in the schools.

A selection of about fifty songs is being made up and these will be distributed in the various grades. The children will learn the songs, then history and the life of the author. The plan will be put in operation next year.

OUST HEADS OF CHARITIES, SWIFT SAYS IN PLEA

Boston Officials Out of Sympathy With Social Conditions, Declares Leader of Jobless.

Morrison I. Swift, in his speech before the unemployed of Boston on the Common yesterday, declared that the heads of the various charity departments of both the city and the State should be removed and persons more familiar with the social conditions be appointed in their stead.

The meeting yesterday was the largest of its kind ever held on the Common. It was also the first pleasant Saturday since the meetings began, and while it was chilly, nearly 1,000 persons, about 150 of whom were out of work, stood around and listened to the speakers.

Mr. Swift, in denouncing the heads of the charitable institutions, stated that they were not in sympathy with the unemployed, did not work for the benefit of the unfortunate and that by their action had clearly shown that they lacked the proper knowledge to successfully fill their positions.

A resolution to ask the authorities to remove the charity department heads was passed.

Another resolution, which Mr. Swift will present this week and which was passed yesterday, was for the forming of night schools in cities of 10,000 or more population throughout the State for the further study of social conditions.

It was Mr. Swift's idea to have these schools attended by the Mayors and Governors and also have competent lectures delivered by professors of sociology. In order to make sure that the Mayors and Governors attended was passed providing that Mayors and Governors from cities during their first six months of office when it is proposed to hold these lectures.

Keep School Children's Heads Clean
There is always more or less trouble keeping the heads of children free from vermin. No wonder mother sees a fine-tooth comb and bottle of kerosene oil. Simply ignore these things or drop a few teaspoonfuls of Parisian Sage into the shampoo water, and the trouble is over.
As a preventive of lice, nits, dandruff, scalp diseases, which are contagious, Parisian Sage has been adopted by school & health authorities, should be followed once a week by every member of children. Wet the hair with water & wash thoroughly with Parisian Sage. Full directions can be obtained of any druggist. This scalp will form a thin, sudsing lather, which will dissolve and remove dandruff, dirt, excessive oil, & dust, no matter how fast it may have collected. Then rinse the hair in clear water and it will be exceedingly soft, fluffy, lustrous and free from dandruff. Parisian Sage Co., Buffalo, N. Y., will send you full size package for 50c, if your druggist cannot supply you.

ARMORY BOUT DECLARED OFF IN CAMBRIDGE

Promoters Now Wonder What's to Be Done With That Surplus $400 Cash.

AND WHO GETS SPARKLER?

The much-heralded fistic tournament that was to have been given by the Athletic Club connected with Company E, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., of Cambridge, is off.

And the promoters are wondering what to do with the $400 in cash in excess of expenses from the proceeds of 1,000 tickets at $1.50 per, and above all the ring with the sparkler that was to have been given to the winner in the star ten-round bout between Jack "Twin" Sullivan and Porky Flynn. The preliminary expenses were $425, which went for nothing.

Now, if the men of the company attend the "blow-out" in June of the Sixty-second Fusiliers at St. Johns, N. F., they will have to draw on their individual bank accounts or hold a musical ball or "tango tea." Military boxing bouts, with or without lady spectators, are tabooed.

Colonel Frank A. Graves of Marblehead, consented to the use of the Cambridge Armory last Thursday night, and then revoked his permission the day before the bout. Sergeants McDade and Avery, both named "Bill," made a night trip to Colonel Graves' house and pleaded until 3 a. m., but in vain. At 5 they discovered Marblehead had no Winter hotel. They had to sleep in the town lock-up all night.

The members of the Athletic Club didn't know what to do. It was felt that "pole" interested in the Riverside Club which had a bout slated for the same evening, were responsible for much of the opposition in official quarters. Then Morrison I. Swift thought it wrong to use a State armory for boxing when unemployed men had no beds.

Friends suggested that the Fifth Regiment armory in Charlestown be used Monday night. Colonel Cutting did not object. It was necessary to get the consent of Adjutant-General Pearson. He declined to take a stand because of friction with Governor Foss. The whole muddle was in the air when certain militia officers met last night at Young's and decided that it was best to cancel the bout altogether.

Report Thaw Case Decision Is Ready

U. S. Court Clerk at Concord, N. H., Maintains Silence.

CONCORD, N. H., April 4.—A report was current here tonight that Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States Court was ready to hand down his decision in the Harry Thaw case; that, in fact, the decision was already in the hands of the clerk of the court, Burns H. Hodgman.

Mr. Hodgman said tonight that he was absolutely nothing to say in regard to the matter nor did he expect to have in the near future.

Dartmouth Man Weds Brookline Girl

Many Guests See Stevens-Brett Nuptials.

Miss Martha Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Stevens of Brookline, and Carleton Sweet Brett, Dartmouth, '09, of Boston, were married at the home of the bride's parents, No. 1768 Beacon street, Brookline, in the presence of many guests, last night. The Rev. Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon officiated.

Miss Marion Stevens was maid of honor and the best man was George L. Brett, Jr. The ushers were: Richard W. C. Frank H. Stevens, Jr., Donald Talbot, Herman Billingham, Warren Peck and Fred Bracket.

A reception was held at the Hotel Beaconsfield. After a wedding tour of the South the couple will make their home in Allston.

Taber Investigates Shoe Factory Fire

Locks Into Cause of $25,000 Blaze on Congress Street.

District Chief Taber has begun an investigation into the cause of the fire in the W. H. McElwain shoe factory, Nos. 348 to 358 Congress street, which did $25,000 damage on Friday night. When the firemen went through the building it was found that the big fire doors which should have been closed were open. The fire started headway, due partly, it is said, to this fact, the open doors causing a draught.

Miss Cudahy Works in Hospital

Sweeps Floors and Makes Beds

Begins Duties as a Nurse

MISS HELEN CUDAHY, daughter of millionaire beef packer, who is learning to be a nurse at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Miss Helen Cudahy, college graduate and heiress to the millions of Patrick Cudahy, the Chicago and Milwaukee beef packer, was one of the most tired girls in Boston when she finished her third day of duty as a probationer nurse in ward 23, surgical ward, at the Massachusetts General Hospital, last night.

She admitted to her girl chum that she was about "all in." But after having spent several years persuading her mother to consent to her learning to be a nurse, Miss Cudahy doesn't intend to quit.

Her lips tightened a little in the afternoon, but she was happy last night when she slipped into her simple white iron bed in the nurses' home on Fruit street and dropped off into dreams.

A millionaire's daughter who has always had a maid—two if she liked—would naturally be expected to ask a few favors like extra hours off and table delicacies, but Miss Cudahy will be treated like all probationers.

"No favors for anybody is the rule of the nurses' house, and it is very strictly kept," said Miss Parsons, the superintendent, last night.

Miss Cudahy was given a little room on the third floor as her future home at the hospital. One of the first things she did when she entered the room was to carefully lay aside her jewels. A diamond pendant in her hair, a handsome brooch on her throat and a pair of engraved bracelets were placed in her trunk and she began her first duties in the usual simple costume of a nurse.

After a strenous few days at her work, Miss Cudahy went to Church of the Advent Friday night, where she remained for an hour. Returning to her room in the hospital she retired for the night.

Miss Cudahy Rises at 6 O'clock.

Yesterday morning, after rising at 6 o'clock and eating breakfast at 6:30, Miss Cudahy, with her chum, walked through the subway that leads under Fruit street from the nurses' home to the hospital yard. She was dressed in the probationer's simple and effective costume, a plain blue waist buttoned in front, simple short blue skirt, wide white collar, white apron and tan shoes. She will not wear a nurse's cap until she has passed her first three months of probation. Over her regular costume Miss Cudahy wore a rose-colored lamb's wool sweater. Jaeger pattern.

At 7 o'clock Miss Cudahy was assigned to work by the nurse in charge of the probationers. Her duties for the day consisted of helping sweep the ward, take up the beds and carry trays of food to the patients. All the while she was expected to keep her eyes open and learn by experience and observation what will be required of her when she becomes a regular nurse.

Interested in Her Work.

Miss Cudahy seemed much interested in her work. "It was all new to her," said a nurse who watched the heiress going about in the ward, "and she seemed to have the patients always in mind. She has already been taught to make up beds, and I hear she does it very well. She will be taught how to prepare simple diets, to take the pulse of patients and to help sweep and keep the wards clean."

For three years her life will be filled with tasks which would make the average society girl shudder. One of the most trying regulations to the youthful probationer just now is rising at 6 o'clock in the morning. For three years she will have to follow this rule and work from ten to twelve hours a day in the hospital, besides devoting two hours a night to study.

MT. HOLYOKE GIRL ELOPES WITH A CLERK

Telegram to Father Fails to Bring Forgiveness After Wedding at Lawrence.

Dorothy Frances Bronson, a nineteen-year-old Mount Holyoke College girl and daughter of J. Harmar Bronson, a wealthy New Haven business man, and Esther Raymond Kumm, son of Ferdinand Kumm, also of New Haven, were enjoying their honeymoon in Lawrence yesterday. They were married in that city with the aid of the bridegroom's friend, Daniel Barry, after an elopement through three States.

Kumm, who is twenty-two, works for $10 a week in a New Haven hardware store. His father is proprietor of a New Haven engraving concern.

Mr. Bronson, when he learned of the wedding yesterday, said he was through with his daughter and declared he would force Miss Kumm into the family.

The wedding took place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in Lawrence and was performed in the office of Justice of the Peace Lewis H. Schwartz.

Kumm's father, who lives on Derby street, New Haven, learned for the first time of the elopement when he received a telegram from the couple stating that they would be back home last night.

The couple first tried to take out a marriage license in Providence, but learning that the new law there would cause a five-day delay, they appealed to Barry in Lawrence to secure a marriage license for him there.

Mr. Barry got busy and secured the license; the happy pair came to Lawrence and the marriage took place.

Miss Kumm, the groom's sister, stated that Dorothy had known her brother for four years. They met at a party. Mr. Bronson said that if the romance had been going on for four years it must have been principally by telephone with conversations limited to five minute intervals.

CHIRURGS MUST RETURN ESTATE TO MRS. AMES

Judge Dana Settles Case in Equity That Had Been in Courts for Eight Years.

A bill in equity, brought in the Suffolk Superior Court, eight years ago, and which has been hanging fire since then, was settled yesterday when Judge Dana decided that Dr. Michael Chirurg, a prominent Boston physician, and his wife, Martha Mabelle (Ames) Chirurg, must convey to the latter's mother, Mrs. Abbie S. Ames, a half interest in the estate at No. 24 Holmes avenue, Brighton, and to deliver to Mrs. Ames the title to the estate.

The case, which has involved many interesting legal tangles, stirred much public interest at the time it was filed, and lawyers and judges throughout the State have been waiting for eight years for a decision which would be a precedent for other cases.

Dr. Chirurg, who has an office at No. 178 Beacon street, and lives in Newton, is a well-known physician of high standing.

His wife is prominent socially in Newton. They were married in 1902. Mrs. Chirurg formerly lived in Illinois.

BEGAN ACTION IN 1905.

On March 6, 1906, Mrs. Ames first took action against her daughter when she brought a bill in equity against Dr. Chirurg, his wife and Fred Raymond. She claimed that in April, 1905, her daughter, who had just become of age, purchased some land in Palo Alto County, Iowa, and gave her a half interest for life in it.

Mrs. Ames further claimed that her daughter agreed, on selling any part of this land, to convey to her mother an interest in any other property purchased with the proceeds.

A few years later Mrs. Ames and her daughter moved to Boston, and a part of the Iowa lands were sold, the value having increased greatly in value. In 1902 Miss Ames purchased the estate at No. 24 Holmes avenue, Brighton, where she lived with her mother until October 16, 1906, when she married Dr. Chirurg.

Mrs. Ames claimed that her daughter never conveyed any part of the Brighton property to her as she had agreed to.

On November 2, 1905, Mrs. Ames alleged that her daughter and her husband, with fraudulent intent, and apparently to put the property out of her daughter's power, made a pretended conveyance of the Holmes avenue estate to Fred Raymond by a quitclaim deed. On the same day, it was alleged, Raymond executed a conveyance of the estate, in mortgage to Dr. Chirurg to secure the payment of $2,500.

ENTITLED TO HALF INTEREST.

About three weeks after this transaction, Raymond notified Mrs. Ames to vacate the property and sought a writ of ejectment in the Municipal Court. It was this first suit that Mrs. Ames sought to have restrained by her equity bill.

In his decision Judge Dana declared that Mrs. Ames was entitled to an undivided half interest in the estate and stated that the conveyances of Dr. and Mrs. Chirurg to Raymond as well as the mortgage of Raymond to Dr. Chirurg were fraudulent and void as against the plaintiff and her life interest.

The decree orders the physician to discharge the mortgage as without consideration and orders Raymond to reconvey the property to Mrs. Chirurg, subject to a mortgage of $5,000 on which $2,000 is unpaid, within fifteen days.

It further orders that an undivided half interest be conveyed to Mrs. Ames for life.

'Toll Dodger,' Backed by Wilson, Is Beaten

Republicans Fighting Now to Beat Socialist for Congress.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 4.—The Congressional battle to be decided by the voters of Passaic County, in the special election on Tuesday, has narrowed down to a bitter fight between Republicans and Socialists.

"Toll Dodger" O'Byrne, the Democratic candidate, is practically eliminated from the race. The fight is now being waged by the Republicans to save the district from the Socialists. The county is normally Republican by 2,500 votes.

James J. O'Byrne, though backed by the Wilson administration, refused to take a stand on the Panama tolls repeal bill.

Co-operative Hospital to Be First in U. S.

New Institution for Curing Ills of Entire Family Opens Tomorrow.

The first co-operative hospital in America will open tomorrow morning at No. 491 Marlboro street—the most ultra modern step that has yet been launched in the medical profession.

By the payment of $25 each month, any resident may receive treatment at the hospital. If he is in married members of his family up to the number of nine, besides himself, are entitled to treatment for one year. All cases except contagious ones are received. Emergency patients are taken.

The hospital is under the management of the Massachusetts Co-operative Hospital Association, incorporated by Andrews Parker, chairman of the general appropriations committee; Walter Young is assistant superintendent, George A. Hopkins is treasurer and Lindley Cook secretary.

Dr. Christian says that every physician to whom he has explained this plan, including Dr. Richard Cabot and Dr. Herbert L. Vickery, has heartily endorsed it.

'DEAD OR A CAPTIVE,' SAYS SUITOR OF JULIA HARLOWE, MISSING DORCHESTER GIRL

Friends and Employer Share His Belief That She Could Not Have Committed Suicide

Laura, my heart is breaking. Please let your friends know where you are. This awful suspense is killing me. No matter what the reason was for your leaving us, we gladly forgive everything and want you to come back. Please communicate with us at once. Your grief stricken and anxious friend, JOHN.

The above appeal was made last night by John Swift, of No. 29 Charles street, Fields Corner, the suitor of the missing Dorchester girl, Laura Harlowe, who disappeared on the evening of March 31 after changing cars for Neponset at the Fields Corner car barn, Dorchester.

I am so broken up over Laura's going that I don't feel like talking to the papers, said Mr. Swift. I can't understand it at all. She never committed suicide. She wasn't that kind of a girl, and besides, she had too much to live for.

Laura and I were to be married soon, and we were both as happy as could be. I know she was in the best of spirits, because when she left me Tuesday night she laughed "good-by" to me and said she was going to her milliner's at Neponset.

FEARS FOUL PLAY.

All I can think of is that she must have been attacked and murdered, and her body concealed or thrown into the river. She would never have taken her own life.

She may have lost her mind. I have read of such things happening to girls. If that is so, she may have been taken away by some unscrupulous man and kept against her will. Anything is possible, at least.

Nothing has been heard of Laura since I saw her that night. I have talked with John Tarr, a brother motorman, and, though he ought to know Laura, she lived in the same house with her for over a year, I think he must have been honestly mistaken when he says he saw her on Washington street, Boston, as her clothing does not tally with the clothes she wore.

I want her to come back. No matter what she may have done, I still love her and would forgive her.

Herbert Cook, at whose home the missing girl roomed at No. 73 Southern avenue, Dorchester, has turned detective and given up business temporarily in order to devote all of his time to the search for the missing girl.

Miss Harlowe's whereabouts is as much of a mystery to me as ever, he said last night. An officer was here to see me this morning. We talked over the case, but were unable to come to any conclusion. I cannot think what motive Miss Harlowe had for going away.

MODEL YOUNG WOMAN.

She had boarded with us for two years, and was a model young woman. John Swift, her suitor, was the only gentleman who ever called upon her. Her habits were exemplary. She was what everybody called a "quiet" girl, and generally appeared cheerful beyond the ordinary.

I scout the suicide theory, because Mrs. Cook and I knew the girl so well. Nor do I think she is held a captive by white slavers. She has either been attacked and murdered or else she has suddenly lost her mind. She would never have gone away without leaving word for us, even if she was in deep trouble.

Miss Annie Harlowe of No. 15 Algonquin street, Dorchester Centre, a sister of the missing girl, made this statement yesterday:

I am at a loss to account for my sister's sudden disappearance.

I cannot understand it. Laura was always a cheerful girl and had few men friends. I know what people will say, but there is no foundation for such reports. If I knew anything I would tell the police first. But I haven't the slightest idea why Laura went away or where she is.

At the store at No. 1323 Dorchester avenue, where Laura worked, her employer said:

Laura was a most conscientious worker. She worked here for two years and, during all that time, never missed a day and was never late to work. She was a girl who didn't talk much and minded her own business. She had the respect and good will of everybody who knew her.

IN LOVE WITH SWIFT.

I would be the last to believe that Laura Harlowe intentionally took her own life. She was in love with John Swift, and girls who are going to get married never commit suicide. She was an attractive girl and had lots of compliments paid her.

I fear that some one followed Laura to Neponset, and in a dark place attacked her and threw her body into the river. Or she may have gone crazy and wandered away.

I don't believe Mr. Tarr saw Laura on Wednesday. From his description the girl he saw could not have been Laura. Laura never had a short, brown coat like the one the girl Mr. Tarr said she had on.

We have had to get another girl to take Laura's place here. We never knew what a good worker she was until she went away.

Poor John Swift is all cut up over this affair. He stops in front of our door every now and then and asks if we heard anything new about Laura. Everybody pities him.

CLEW PROVES FALSE.

A Massachusetts avenue lodging house keeper called me up last night and said Miss Harlowe was stopping at her house. I asked her to describe the girl, and when she did so I knew it couldn't possibly be Laura. Lots of people get excited at a time like this and imagine a lot of things. I'll have to see Laura before I'll believe that she is alive and well, after all that has happened.

Police Captain Michael H. Crowley of Station 11 said:

We have learned nothing of any importance as yet. There is nothing to work upon. I have questioned all those who know Miss Harlowe, and there seems to be no discrepancy in their statements. It is a baffling case, and I can see as much as see as anyone. Of course, I have my theories, but in a case of this kind they are without any foundation of fact. I am waiting.

Roxbury Husband Drops from View

"I'll be back in ten minutes, dear," are the last words of Harry Freeman Beach, twenty-six, of No. 12 Whittier place, Roxbury, to his young wife and five-year-old boy Kenneth, before he "stepped across to the store" on Sunday afternoon, March 15.

Mrs. Beach has been obliged to give out this statement to her friends at No. 29 Kent street, Roxbury, where Kenneth will be cared for while the young wife works as a waitress in a restaurant.

"He was very kind at home," she said yesterday, "I have notified the police and done everything in my power to let him know that I want him to come home. I cannot imagine what has happened."

Beach had been employed as a cook in a Chelsea restaurant. He drew his salary the day before he disappeared.

To Sore Feet Victims Here Is Welcome News

Half-Price Sales of Strictly New, Correct Merchandise

W. & A. Bacon Co. desire to emphasize the fact that they have no old, shopworn, out-of-date stocks to offer at so-called low prices.

During the past three weeks we have purchased over one-half million dollars' worth of new goods, much of which is priced as low as 50 cents on the dollar. Consider the fact that our styles are the latest and that everything in our entire store is marked at the lowest possible price. Old and undesirable merchandise is dearly bought at any price. We refer you to our Spring Sale for values that cannot be duplicated.

Why not buy brand new, up-to-date merchandise at Bacons' low prices, in preference to buying, at a discount, the mistakes of others.

BACKWARD STEP, SAYS MARTIN OF CURLEY'S ATTACK ON SCHOOLS

Former Secretary of State Board of Education Sharply Criticizes Mayor's Attempt to Cut Down Appropriation — Deplores Ignorance of Public Officials Who Hammer at the Cost of Teaching

Mayor Curley's efforts to handicap the growth of Boston's public school system by cutting $147,000 from the school appropriation are sharply criticised by Former Secretary of the State Board of Education George Martin.

Former Secretary Martin calls the Mayor's move not only a great mistake but says he considers it a backward step in education. He attacks public officials who he declares "like to hammer at the school funds and get as much reduction as possible from them." Mr. Martin says:

This is a great mistake. Boston needs every cent given it for new school buildings. With the increase of pupils in the coming Fall, it must tax the School Committee to provide for all the children and give them the right and desirable quarters. So much depends upon good school surroundings.

We can't spend too much money upon our school accommodations, and Massachusetts has always been proud of her history in this respect.

Boston should not allow that $147,709 to be taken from the appropriation for new buildings or land. This is just as important now and more so the coming school year than ever before.

Why do public officials like to hammer at the school funds and get as much deduction from them as possible, when, comparatively speaking, very few public officials in Boston or elsewhere understand the real needs of our schools?

This mistake will be more apparent in the Fall when the needs of Boston schools for larger accommodations are made evident. If expenses are to be cut, let the schools alone. That is my candid opinion and I've had fifty years or more experience.

Need Diplomacy of the First Order

Tilden Has Hard Task at Reception of Mayflower Descendants.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Enough diplomacy to settle the foreign policy of the nation is to be exercised at Delmonico's on the afternoon of April 25, and John P. Tilden is the diplomat-to-be. Mr. Tilden is the man in charge of the arrangements for the reception by The Society of Mayflower Descendants, and it will be his duty, among others, to keep harmony among the descendants of the "very first man to alight on Plymouth Rock."

There will be music and dancing, and the latter is slated to be tangoing, even if these are Mayflower descendants.

Workman Falls to Death in Building

Costanti Sengle of No. 17 Prospect street, West End, was killed yesterday afternoon by falling fifteen feet through a hole in the second floor of the building at No. 42 Staniford street, where Costanti was helping to tear down the building. He passed his companions a board and stepped to a hole in the second floor, leaned over, lost his balance and plunged head foremost into the empty room below.

Only 121 New Cases of Scarlet Fever

Only 121 cases of scarlet fever were reported to the Board of Health last week. Two of the cases were fatal, making a total of twenty deaths since December, when the disease first commenced to assume unusual proportions. There are now 555 cases under treatment.

36 Take Tests for Court Stenographers

Examinations for positions as court stenographers were held yesterday in Suffolk Superior Court. Twenty-two women and twelve men were put to a severe test in "taking" dictation in the form of testimony and a judge's charge.

Mother Now Thinks Arlin Girl Is Dead

Believes Body Will Be Soon Found in Pond.

Mrs. Jane Arlin, mother of Miss Mertie Eleanor Arlin, the Brookline girl now missing since last January, now believes her daughter is dead, according to Dr. Edward A. Rogers of Brookline.

Relatives are daily expecting to learn that her body has been recovered from some one of the ponds in and around Brookline.

Dr. William J. Rogers and his brother, Dr. E. A. Rogers, whose family is related to the Arlin family by marriage, are convinced that Miss Arlin committed suicide and believe the body will be found in one of the ponds this Spring.

Secretary Daniels Again Plays Cupid

Figures in Romance in Which Ensign Palmer Is Wed.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Another naval romance in which Secretary of the Navy Daniels played Cupid, had a happy ending today when Miss Emma G. Reed married Ensign John Roy Palmer, U. S. N., in Eastern Presbyterian Church.

Secretary Daniels cruised Ensign Palmer from a vessel in Mexican waters in order that the latter might attend his own wedding. He is now on the Delaware, which is in dry dock at Norfolk, Va., and the honeymoon will be spent in the quaint Virginia city.

Baby Storeroom Is Opened at Church

Little Ones Care as Mothers Attend Services.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Father Francis P. Duffy, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Savior, has established a store room for babies.

The scheme is a great success, according to Father Duffy. A mother can check her infant at the storeroom and the child receives competent care from a trained nurse while she is in church. The church maintains the room and makes no charge for the service.

SOAP ON HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF, SCALP GETS DRY, HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25-cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse."

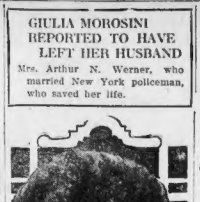
After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and grime it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil in a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness and silkiness.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is the ideal hair tonic for growers of rain and sunshine are in great demand. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and refreshing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Don't Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

GIULIA MOROSINI REPORTED TO HAVE LEFT HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Arthur N. Werner, who married New York policeman, who saved her life.



Broken Romance for Morosini Heiress

Millionaire's Daughter Said to Be Seeking Separation.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The romance that was heralded from New York to the Pacific Ocean in 1911, when Miss Giulia Morosini, heiress of the Morosini millions, married Arthur N. Werner, a mounted policeman who heroically saved her life, has been wrecked, according to a story printed in an evening paper today.

It says that the young couple have separated and that armed detectives have been placed about Elmhurst, the beautiful palace built at Riverdale, to prevent Werner entering. The detectives were engaged by Mrs. Werner.

The differences between the couple are said to have arisen from visits Werner is reported to have paid to his first wife, from whom he was divorced not long before he married Miss Morosini.

Capital Merchants Score Miss Wilson

Piqued Because, Like Sister, She Shops Out of Town.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Washington merchants are piqued because the woman members of the President's family patronize out of town instead of Washington merchants.

Miss Jessie Wilson's trousseau for her wedding to Francis Dewey Sayre last November was purchased in Baltimore and New York. Miss Eleanor Wilson is following her sister's example and besides shopping tours to New York, goes over to Baltimore in the White House automobile almost every day to shop.

COL. PARKER TO BE 'FIRED' BY THE MAYOR?

Gossip Says G. A. R. Veteran, Collector, Must Go to Make Place for Boyle.

NOW HEADS CIVIL SERVICE

Colonel Bowdoin Strong Parker, city collector at a salary of $5,000, has to go.

Curley, it was reported last night up and down the political avenues of the town, wants the place for his friend Tom Boyle.

Boyle is chairman of the Civil Service Commission, an office which may be given considerable absent treatment but which nevertheless pays $2,500. Mr. Boyle lives in Beacon street. He runs a South street leather business.

Bowdoin S. Parker is one of the last of the Grand Army "boys" in the public service. In Civil War days, Colonel Parker was a member of the 22d Massachusetts Volunteers. He resides in Dorchester. He is an honored member of Post No. 112, G. A. R.

Boyle landed in present place on the Civil Service Board through the kindness of former Governor Foss. He was appointed to the Board in the Summer of 1911. Up to that time he had never been heard of in politics.

WAS OPPOSED BY SULLIVAN

It was recalled last night, as peculiarly fitting into the present crazy-quilt scheme of city politics, that Boyle's appointment by Foss was made in the teeth of spirited opposition on the part of John A. Sullivan, then chairman of the Boston Finance Com. and today—by grace of a change of heart and a few other things on the part of Jim Curley—the Mayor's Corporation Counsel at a salary of $5,000.

Colonel Parker went to City Hall three years ago, at the invitation of Mayor Fitzgerald. He was Fitzgerald's second choice for the place the Civil Service Commission having rejected the first.

That first choice of Fitzgerald, it was recalled last night, was the late George A. Hibbard, former Mayor. The Hibbard appointment had been turned down by the Civil Service Commission.

Before the Parker-Boyle story came out, last night, gossip had been saying that Curley meant to place Tom Boyle at the head of the new and "enlarged" municipal supplies department, increasing the salary to fit Mr. Boyle's bigness.

KIND TO CURLEY.

The city collectorship story was accepted as more likely.

Tom Boyle, at all events, appears to be slated for something good from City Hall without much watchful waiting.

And, some said, this is as it should be, as hasn't the Civil Service Commission, under Boyle, been extremely kind to Mr. Curley and every one of his appointments?

RANTOULS IN BITTER FIGHT OVER CHILDREN

Court to Hear of Constant Friction Between Parents Over Care of Young.

NURSE STOPPED DAILY 'DIP'

When Edward L. Rantoul wanted to give his little daughters, Mabel and Harriet, green corn on the cob, dripping with butter, and when the "kiddies'" mouths just watered for it, Miss Charlotte Richardson, the governess nurse, engaged by Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, objected, and —the children didn't get the corn.

When Mr. Rantoul thought he water and the air were fit for the children to go sea-bathing, the nurse did not, and the "kiddies" didn't get their morning dip.

When Dr. Randall thought it was all right to give the children sweets, Miss Richardson did not.

When the father thought tarts and blackberries were all right, the children didn't get them because their nurse objected.

When the nurse felt either child needed a doctor, she sent for one without consulting or notifying Mr. Rantoul, according to Mr. Rantoul's charges, and then the tempest broke at the Rantoul cottage at Beverly Farms last Summer.

These are only a few of the disagreeable features in the domestic life of the Rantouls relating to the custody of Mabel Lowell Rantoul, aged nine, and Harriet Charlotte Rantoul, aged seven, which will be threshed out before Judge McIntyre in the Probate Court at East Cambridge when Mr. and Mrs. Rantoul start their fight for possession of the children on April 16.

The calling of a doctor without Mr. Rantoul's knowledge resulted in a scene so acute that Miss Richardson was ordered to leave the house. Miss Richardson replied that she felt she was within her rights as she was following Mrs. Rantoul's instructions and that the mother enjoyed legal authority under Judge Hall's interlocutory decree.

Mr. Rantoul didn't think so. Miss Richardson is reported to have been so obdurate that she was finally told if she didn't leave by Friday "one would be elected by an officer of the law," and she went.

The fuss with the nurse caused Mrs. Rantoul to complain that her husband was not living up to Judge Hall's decree. The court appointed Attorney Henry P. Hurlburt to hear the matter as master. Master Hurlburt's report, covering more than thirty typewritten pages on file in the Superior Court at East Cambridge, upheld Mr. Rantoul in the major features.

Boston Man Had to Walk in Barrel

Somebody Carried Off His Wardrobe from Worcester Hotel.

WORCESTER, April 4.—Gilbert T. Reynolds, who said that he lived in Boston, barely escaped taking a trip to the police station attired in a barrel. He had the barrel, but two kind-hearted reporters finally dug up for Reynolds a pair of overalls and a rubber coat. Reynolds told the police that he woke up in a Worcester hotel to find that some one had entered his room in the night and taken everything belonging to him; suitcase, $21, clothes, all except one of his socks.

GLOUCESTER SUSPECT HELD

GLOUCESTER, April 4.—In court here today John D. McNair and Carleton E. Goldthwait were held for the grand jury in $500 each for breaking into the office of C. W. Rich & Co.

WOMEN HURT WHEN POLICE CHARGE I. W. W.

Battle Starts When Detectives Tear Down Banners Demanding Tannenbaum's Release.

CLUBS ROUT THE BIG MOB

NEW YORK, April 4.—The meeting of members of the Industrial Workers of the World in Union square was postponed this afternoon and in its place the turbulent labor fanatics created a riot that called for drastic police action before it was quelled.

The rioters were clubbed and driven into side streets. Many men and women were knocked down by the horses of the mounted police who answered the call for aid raised by three detectives attacked by the mob and charged the belligerent "army of unemployed."

The riot started after Alexander Berkman had announced that the meeting would be postponed until next Saturday. Members of the I. W. W. shout 600 strong, started west in a body at the north end of the square raising aloft banners bearing the inscription "Tannenbaum must be freed."

Detectives Gildea, Gegan and Sullivan dashed into the crowd and pulled down the banners. The detectives were attacked, and before the onlookers realized what had happened a squad of mounted police crashed into the surging crowd.

The mob, shouting and cursing, struggled against the police until the mounted men charged them with their clubs. The bluecoats swung their clubs with deadly effect, and the army scattered in every direction. Two men were arrested, Garibaldi Lapolla being charged with obstructing traffic, and Joseph J. Gans with leading a parade without a permit.

Anna Held's Advice to Beauty Seekers

The formulas given here by Miss Anna Held come direct, as important factors in the acquirement of beauty for those who desire unwonted results. They are extremely economical. You may have them at home, and you then obtain an article of unquestioned superiority, at a cost far less than the high cost of prepared articles which are never so effective.

Miss Held invites you to answer correspondence by mail but you will likely find below the answer to the very question you have in mind.

PHYLLIS M.—The striking features of the following wrinkle-removing formula, are its prompt results, its simplicity and great economy. Thousands of women would give the world to know about this preparation. By a generous use of this formula, the skin will lose its many appearances, lines of age, baby lines, crows' feet and wrinkles lag and little will leave your face, and a more youthful, plump, vigorous skin condition be the result.

Mix together two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, two ounces of cerol and a pint of hot water. This makes up the cream, to be used every day regularly.

LACKING—The one of merchandise emphasizes in an extensive degree the fact that we are now the actual leaders in development through strides of injury. It is wise to have nothing to do with such assertions. Science has proven that the most efficient way to produce a normal hair development is the Vaniaire method. Mix together one ounce of pulled, half a cup of sugar, and half a pint of cold water, and of the tonic two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime. This mixture is absolutely safe.

THEODORA—If you want to give your hair the fullest opportunity to grow, it is necessary to remove from the scalp the filmy accumulations which not even good soap will thoroughly remove. As a scalp cleanser, nothing is as good as cerol. Put a teaspoonful of cerol in half a cup of hot water. This makes the most exquisite shampoo you will ever wish to experience, and leaves the hair in beautiful condition—silky, thoroughly clean and easy to do up.

H. G. T. R.—Astonishing results have been obtained in removing every blemish from the skin and giving the complexion a beautiful, delicate tint, by the use of a cream made by mixing two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and one ounce of almarol, in one pint of water. Precede all the "smallness," light lines, and red veins that you desire to make up a new complexion, unsurpassed in remarkable way. This cream costs many times less than preparations of little efficacy now in use prepared from. Mix this formula at home yourself. It takes but a few minutes.

JULIETTA L.—You will find in the following formula for growing hair a most astounding remedy for hair falling. It has an extraordinary effect in forcing hair to grow. The difference in the length and thick growth of hair becomes very marked. To half a pint of water, add one ounce each, tincture and half a pint of alcohol, or use hot rum if you wish, instead of the tonic and alcohol, and apply this liberally and often. There is no connection between the results of this treatment and those of the ordinary hair remedies sold. This makes a clean, odless liquid, and is very economical to use.

MISS HAIRFUL.—To "throw" hair off by the ordinary hair removers leaves the complexion, and leaves spots of redness where the remover was applied. There is no sorer or smoother method than the use of powdered cerol. This can be applied to the tenderest skin without producing the slightest irritation, and it removes not only the soft "down," but the heavy, thick hairs as well. It leaves the skin, also, smooth and soft. It never fails to give satisfaction. G. T. R.—Astonishing results have

Form Company to Sell United Coupons

$500,000 Concern to Supply Big Cigar and Drug Stores.

NEW YORK, April 4.—United Cigar stores interests are organizing a new company with capital of about $500,000 which will sell coupons to the United Cigar Stores, Riker and Hegeman Drug Company and other customers. W. T. Posey, vice president of the United Cigar Stores Company, will probably head the new company and stock will be distributed to preferred and common stockholders of the United upon the payment of $1 a share.

Reports current in the financial district said the corporation was being formed to evade legislation pending in Washington against the distribution of coupons, but C. A. Whelan, president of the United, said this was not true.

'DEAD OR A CAPTIVE,' SAYS SUITOR OF JULIA HARLOWE, MISSING DORCHESTER GIRL

Friends and Employer Share His Belief That She Could Not Have Committed Suicide

Laura, my heart is breaking. Please let your friends know where you are. This awful suspense is killing me. No matter what the reason was for your leaving us, we gladly forgive everything and want you to come back. Please communicate with us at once. Your grief stricken and anxious friend, JOHN.

The above appeal was made last night by John Swift, of No. 29 Charles street, Fields Corner, the suitor of the missing Dorchester girl, Laura Harlowe, who disappeared on the evening of March 31 after changing cars for Neponset at the Fields Corner car barn, Dorchester.

I am so broken up over Laura's going away that I don't feel like talking to the papers, said Mr. Swift. It can't understand it at all. She never committed suicide. She wasn't that kind of a girl, and, besides, she had too much to live for.

Laura and I were to be married soon, and we were both as happy as could be. I know she was in the best of spirits, because when she left me Tuesday night she laughed "good-by" to me and said she was going to her milliner's at Neponset.

FEARS FOUL PLAY.

All I can think of is that she must have been attacked and murdered, and her body concealed or thrown into the river. She would never have taken her own life.

She may have lost her mind. I have read of such things happening to girls. If that is so, she may have been taken away by some unscrupulous man and kept against her will. Anything is possible, at least.

Nothing has been heard of Laura since I saw her that night. I have talked with John Tarr, a brother motorman, and, though he ought to know Laura (he lived in the same house with her for over a year), I think he must have been honestly mistaken when he says he saw her on Wednesday. His description of her clothing does not tally with the clothes she wore.

I want her to come back. No matter what she may have done, I still love her and would forgive her.

Herbert Cook, at whose home the missing girl room-ed at No. 72 Southern avenue, Dorchester, has turned detective and given up business temporarily in order to devote all of his time to the search for the missing girl.

Miss Harlowe's whereabouts is as much of a mystery to me as ever, he said last night. An officer was here to see me this morning. We talked over the case, but were unable to arrive at any conclusion. I cannot see what motive Miss Harlowe had for going away.

MODEL YOUNG WOMAN.

She had boarded with us for two years, and was a model young woman. John Swift, her suitor, was the only gentleman who ever called upon her. Her habits were exemplary. She was what everybody called a "quiet" girl, and generally appeared cheerful beyond the ordinary.

I accept the suicide theory, because Miss Cook and I knew the girl so well. Nor do I think she is held a captive by white slavers. She has either been attacked and murdered or else she has suddenly lost her mind. She would never have gone away without leaving word for us, even if she was in deep trouble.

Miss Annie Harlowe of No. 15 Algonquin street, Dorchester Centre, a sister of the missing girl, made this statement yesterday:

I am at a loss to account for my sister's sudden disappearance.

I cannot understand it. Laura was always a cheerful girl and had few men friends. I know what people will say, but there is no foundation for such reports. If I knew anything I would tell the police first. But I haven't the slightest idea where Laura went away or where she is.

At the store at No. 1833 Dorchester avenue, where Laura worked, her employer said:

Laura was a most conscientious worker. She worked here for two years and, during all that time, never missed a day and was never late to work. She was a girl who didn't talk much and minded her own business. She had the respect and good will of everybody who knew her.

IN LOVE WITH SWIFT.

I would be the last to believe that Laura Harlowe intentionally took her own life. She was in love with John Swift, and girls who are going to get married never commit suicide. She was an attractive girl and had lots of compliments paid her.

I fear that some one followed Laura to Neponset, and in a dark place attacked her and threw her body into the river. Or she may have gone crazy and wandered away.

I don't believe Mr. Tarr saw Laura on Wednesday. From his description the girl he saw could not have been Laura. Laura never had a short, brown coat like the one the girl Mr. Tarr said she had on.

We have had to get another girl to take Laura's place here. We never knew what a good worker she was until she went away.

Poor John Swift is all cut up over this affair. He stops in front of our door every now and then and asks if we heard anything new about Laura. Everybody pities him.

CLEW PROVES FALSE.

A Massachusetts avenue lodging house keeper called me up last night and said Miss Harlowe was stopping at her house. I asked her to describe the girl, and when she did so I knew it couldn't possibly be Laura. Lots of people get excited at a time like this and imagine a lot of things. I'll have to see Laura before I'll believe that she is alive and well, after all that has happened.

Police Captain Michael H. Crowley of Station 11 said:

We have learned nothing of any importance as yet. There is nothing to work upon. I have questioned all those who know Miss Harlowe, and there seems to be no discrepancy in their state ints. It is a baffling case, and I am as much at sea as anyone. Of course, I have my theories, but in a case of this kind they are without any foundation of fact. I am waiting.

Roxbury Husband Drops from View

"I'll be back in ten minutes, dear," were the last words of Harry Freeman Beach, twenty-six, of No. 12 Whittier place, Roxbury, to his young wife and five-year-old boy, Kenneth, before he "stepped across the street to the store" on Sunday afternoon, March 29.

Mrs. Beach has been obliged to give up her home and has gone to friends at No. 29 Mount ast, Roxbury, where Kenneth will be cared for while the young wife works as a waitress in a restaurant.

"He was very kind at home," she said yesterday. "I have notified the police and done everything in my power to let him know that we want him to come home. I cannot imagine what has happened."

Beach was employed as a cook in a Chelsea restaurant. He drew his salary the day before he disappeared.

Bird Exhibit in Brookline Library

A remarkable collection of birds is to be seen in the basement of the Brookline Library. It is exhibited by the Brookline Bird Club, assisted by the Brookline Forestry Department, to demonstrate ways and means of attracting and protecting the native wild birds. The exhibition will be formally opened tomorrow.

To Sore Feet Victims Here Is Welcome News

The following is absolutely the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts. The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly and the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Prepared by Medical Formula Co., Chicago, Ill., and Dayton, Ohio.

BRYAN TARGET OF RIDICULE IN HOUSE DEBATE

One Member Would Raise His Salary to $25,000 to "Get Better Results."

HIS DEMAND FOR FOOTMAN

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Secretary Bryan was made the butt of humorous criticism for his lectures and his "luxurious habits" this afternoon during debate in the House on the legislative and executive appropriation bill.

Representative Humphrey, 2nd, of Washington, offered an amendment to increase the secretary's salary from $12,000 to $25,000 a year. It was defeated.

"I did not have in mind the idea that the Secretary of State should be paid a large enough sum to keep him here," said Mr. Humphrey.

"I would not keep him in Washington, for I believe he performs his best services to the country when he stays away from the State Department. But I am sorry we can't say this afternoon that higher salaries should be paid in the government service to insure better results. We certainly ought to pay more money to the Secretary of State if there is a chance to get better service in the State Department.

"We ought to have a Secretary of State who would not sell something to England and wonder his party platform in order to exculpate himself and the country from the difficulties into which it had fallen through him."

"I am sure the Secretary of State is not going to do any more lecturing," said Mr. Mondell of Wyoming. "Mr. Bryan says he has used an employ of the State Department as a footman, while returning calls and that while the employe was so engaged as a footman, Mr. Bryan paid him for the time and the government saved that much. About $1.37 annually has been saved to the government.

"If the Secretary of State finds it is not possible to get along with the money from the State Department while he is acting as the Bryan footman, then I am sure that at the end of the year the proper accounting official will inform us that Mr. Bryan has turned back into the treasury an amount representing the time he was absent from his post. This amounts to about two-thirds of the time. So the Secretary of State probably will stop lecturing altogether.

"Don't let us frown on the employment of a footman for the Secretary of State," said Mr. Sloan of Nebraska. "It is evident that the Secretary of State wants to reduce the army of the unemployed under this administration and if he can do it to the extent of one footman or coachman don't discourage him.

"Out in that great and glorious region from which the Secretary of State hails," said Mr. Murdock, 'the coachmen wear no gold braid and the footmen wear no livery, and the gardener when he is called into the leading homes of Wichita to act as butler on the infrequent receptions, looks like a gardener and nothing else."

New Hasty Pudding Star

'Julian Eltinge of Harvard'

VINTON FREEDLEY, who wins title of "Julian Eltinge of Harvard Square" by his clever acting in the Hasty Pudding Club's annual musical comedy.

NEWMAN PHOTO

The Harvard Hasty Pudding Club's annual musical comedy—the one this year is "The Legend of Loravia," last night shot into fame a new star—the "Julian Eltinge of Harvard square"—none other than Vinton Freedley, of the class of 1914. Mr. Freedley not only composed the music of the comedy, but played the part of Isabelle Rankin, a rich American heiress, in a way that was as rich as the lady in question.

J. K. Hodges, also a senior, played the dual parts of Prince Louis and Prince Ferdinand—twin brothers and lords of Loravia, one of the twins is simple minded and soundly hated, the other is dashing and lovable. The play deals with their rivalry for the throne after the death of their father.

The performance was given under the auspices of a long list of patronesses, which included the most prominent women in Boston society.

Everett Now Has Suffrage League

Work Started Under Leadership of Mrs. S. A. Wallace.

For the first time Everett has an organized society working for equal suffrage. It is the Everett Equal Suffrage League. It remained for a California and Washington woman, Mrs. Samuel A. Wallace, to successfully launch a campaign and establish an organization in the town.

At the organization meeting held at the home of Mrs. Alfred G. Abbott, No. 88 Waverly street, the house was crowded.

These officers have been elected: President, Mrs. Samuel A. Wallace; vice presidents, Mrs. Christopher Thore, Mrs. Joseph Saunders; secretary, Mrs. Frank Hall; treasurer, Mrs. Alfred Abbott; chairman of standing committees, Mrs. Joseph Norton.

FIREMEN RISK THEIR LIVES TO SAVE COMRADES

fresh air, they careened and acted like persons intoxicated. For nearly two hours the men were overcome and rescued. The sidewalks were strewn with the unconscious forms. It was sometime before many of them were taken to the hospital.

RESCUERS RISK LIVES.

The work of rescue was led by Captain Riley of Engine 4 and Lieutenant Long of Tower 1. Several times these men risked their lives when they rushed into the basement to bring out their comrades.

The first company to send men into the basement was headed by Captain Dan Ryan of Engine 25. With him were Hoseman Murphy and Martell. Chief Sennott was in the lead. The chief ordered the first line to be played on what appeared to be a small fire.

Large clouds of thick black smoke began to curl up through the windows. The voices of the firemen on the inside began to grow weaker.

Captain Riley, who was on the outside, fearing that the men might be in danger, ordered Lieutenant Long to enter the building with him; several members of engine crew 4 and tower 1 followed.

HARD FIRE TO FIGHT.

Passing automobiles, hose wagons, carriages and teams were pressed into service to carry the men to medical assistance.

It was one of the worst fires from a fire fighting standpoint in the history of the department.

The street was thronged with people. Many of them were residents of the district, who, not knowing what was the matter when they saw the unconscious forms of the firemen being taken away to the hospitals, became alarmed, and it took the combined efforts of the police and the calmer ones to prevent a panic among the tenants.

The basement was filled with paper boxes in large crates and paper stock, making it difficult for the firemen to find their way about. Captain Riley found Chief Sennott unconscious, and picking him up carried him to the street. Lieutenant Long took care of Gillen, while members of the engine crew took the others whom they found lying on the floor gasping for air.

From some cause unknown the illuminating gas began to escape and from another direction came the strong fumes from the ammonia pipes of the cold storage plant. This combination of gases and smoke completely filled the basement.

RESCUE CREW SENT.

As soon as the crew of Engine 25 had exhausted their efforts the men of Engine 4 were ordered to take their place. The men, led by Captain Hines, had been in the basement less than ten minutes when a rescue crew was sent in after them.

Captain Hines, Lieutenant Roose and Hoseman Holland were brought out all unconscious. It was then that hose wagons and other vehicles were pressed into service.

The fire originated in a pile of paper stock about fifty feet back from the street. When the apparatus arrived the basement was filled with smoke. There was almost no ventilation and as the gas was escaping no light could be brought into use. The fire was not a spectacular one. It had evidently been smouldering for some time and was imbedded at the bottom of piles of stock. The flames ran in all directions and in a very short while it was apparent that the department had a battle on its hands.

By running every line of hose available into the building the flames were dragged out, but not until the place was filled with smoke.

The building is a six-story brick structure occupied by the Massachusetts Chocolate company, J. H. Ingerts & Company, proprietors, and it was in the basement that the company stored its paper stock used in packing candy.

Predict Underwood Will Go to Senate

Five Hundred Candidates in All, at Alabama Polls Tomorrow.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 4.—This State was today the scene of political activity of the whirlwind variety, nearly five hundred candidates making final appeals to the voters who will cast their ballots in Monday's Democratic primary. Two United States Senators, a Governor, ten Congressmen, a judge of the Supreme Court and Appellate Judges, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State and Secretary of Agriculture, Railroad Commissioner and various other State officers and many county offices will be nominated.

The race for Senator between Representatives Underwood and Hobson is attracting the most attention. Political sharpers predict the election of Underwood to the Senate and B. B. Comer to the Governorship.

Dates for Waterline Hearings Are Fixed

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today fixed dates on which it will hear the applications of railroads to retain their waterline carriers which they are prohibited from operating after July 1 under the Panama Canal act, unless permission be given by the commission. The Pennsylvania and the Northern Central Railway will be heard April 8 and 9, Erie, April 10 to 11, Lehigh Valley, April 20 to 23; New York Central & Hudson, April 27 to 30; Rutland Railroad, May 1 and 2; Grand Trunk of Canada, May 4 and 5.

Former Columbia Teacher a Suicide

NEW YORK, April 4.—Professor J. S. Salter, former professor in French at Columbia University, was found dead early today in an areaway in front of the house where he lodged at No. 52 West Eighty-second street. The police believe he committed suicide by jumping from the window of his room.

Boy Runaways Returned Home

The three Salem boys, Joseph Norseaux, fifteen, of No. 23 Palmer street; William J. Olgur, fifteen, same address, and Homer Le Blanc, fifteen, of No. 34 East Gardner street, who ran away from their homes Friday and were taken in charge by Patrolman Anderson of Station 2, have been returned to their parents.

JUDGE BRUCE TO SENTENCE BOYS TO DIG GARDENS

"Give Them Responsibility," He Declares, in Putting New Reform Into Practice.

Judge Charles M. Bruce of the Malden District Court has put into practical application the old adage:

"The devil finds some evil still for idle hands to do."

He proposes to see there are no more "idle hands" among the boys and girls brought before him in the Juvenile Court; and to this end has arranged to set wayward children to work raising flowers or vegetables on a plot of land loaned for the purpose.

A big stock of seeds for the project has come from Congressman Roberts. The work of laying out the plots will begin tomorrow.

Judge Bruce himself speaks of the new plan as an experiment.

"You can't tell whether the water is hot or cold till you take the plunge," he admitted. But he is hopeful that by giving the children a sense of responsibility he will take away temptation to err.

Judge Bruce has tried several experiments in correcting wayward children. He ordered several Everett stone-throwers to go to a vacant lot and throw stones under the direction of the probation officer until they sickened of stone-throwing as a pastime. There have been no repetitions of the trouble in the district.

He caused some Wakefield boys who had damaged the panels on the Greenwood school door to take tools and repair the damage while their friends looked on and jollied them. There have been no repetitions of those offences.

He tried many other unique plans to correct the youth of the district, such as placing them upon probation upon condition that they act as messengers to their chums and playmates to warn them against misconduct.

Judge Bruce has had the plan of a Juvenile garden in mind for some weeks. When he broached the subject to John G. Chandler, a prominent Malden resident, Mr. Chandler promptly offered the judge the use of a lot of land on Eastern avenue, containing 18,000 square feet, free of cost, for the experiment. The owner at one time had a greenhouse on this land, so that it is well fertilized and with a little plowing will be in excellent condition for cultivation.

Probation Officer William M. P. Killion and Assistant Probation Officer Louis A. Tyzzer will be the only instructors in gardening for the juveniles.

Holbrook Taken for Another, Was Shot

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 4.— Nishan Avedighian, an Armenian teacher at the American mission at Sivas, Asiatic Turkey, who had been arrested in connection with the murder on August 15 of Rev. Dr. Charles H. Holbrook of Lynn, Mass., a missionary at Sogukhir, was released today, having established his innocence. Four other persons will be tried April 15. The official version is that Dr. Holbrook was shot in mistake for an Armenian.

Board to Direct Natural Resources

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A national commission to administer the water, power, coal, oil, phosphate, mineral and other natural resources on the public domain, will be asked of Congress by the Secretary of the Interior, it was learned today. This administrative body, to be known as the Commission of Natural Resources, would meet the need for an authority to enforce the public land and mining laws, it is declared.

SHIPPERS FIGHT CURLEY'S PLAN

Boston shipping interests yesterday made formal protest at the Mayor's office against the Curley plan to turn over to the Federal government the quarantine service of Boston Harbor.

The only American ports not under federal health inspection are Boston, New York and Baltimore.

"And keep us right there," the interests affected say in their protest. "The Port of Boston," they say, "under the control of the Health Department of the city has won a name for efficient medical inspection."

Complaints at the Boston station, it was pointed out, are adjusted without serious delay, and with great satisfaction, by men on the ground closely in touch with the best interests of the city.

Under Federal control complaints could have to be sent to Washington for adjustment. This would be sure to cause delay.

The protest will be considered by the City Council tomorrow.

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime Ask for Sulpherb Tablets.

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern mineral product in the form of tartar and sulphur into a sugar-coated tablet and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets), but Sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at 50c per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish, or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, ulcers and the like, can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking this good old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Product Company, Dayton, Ohio. Free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

"FREE TOLLS REPEAL GREATEST DISASTER SINCE CIVIL WAR"

So Declares William Randolph Hearst in a Letter to a Senator—"I Am Interested in Democratic Party, But Interested Above All in Welfare of Our Country."

MEXICAN DANGER NO REASON FOR UNITED STATES ABANDONING RIGHTS

"This Nation Cannot Afford to Play the Part of a Coward Because Every Man Will Kick a Coward —Only One Way in Which to Deal With England

The following letter has been written by Mr. Hearst to a United States Senator, who is a great friend of Mr. Hearst:

My Dear Senator:—

I am very much distressed to see you advocating the repeal of the free tolls measure. You asked me in a letter once to write you on any matter that I considered of special importance.

I take advantage of that suggestion to write you about this matter, which I consider of transcendent importance. I believe very deeply and sincerely that the repeal of the free tolls measure, and the incidental and inevitable abandonment of our proprietary rights in the Panama Canal, or, rather, the United States Canal, would be the greatest disaster to this country that has occurred in our lifetime, the greatest disaster which has occurred since the Civil War.

Not so important, but still worthy of consideration, is the fact that the Democratic party's responsibility for this repeal, if it should succeed in accomplishing it, would mean disaster for the Democratic party, and for many of those who are active in support of this repeal measure.

I am interested in you as my friend. I am interested in the Democratic party, as I should like to be able to be a Democrat; and, of course, I am interested, above all, just as you are, in the welfare of our country, and, therefore, I take the liberty of writing this letter and giving you my opinion for whatever you may consider it worth.

You speak of the dangers from Mexico and Russia and Japan which threaten this country, and give that as a reason for abandoning our rights in the canal. This country is too powerful to be influenced by such reasons, but even if we were not powerful it would be unwise to be influenced by them.

When this country was very small and very weak it had the courage to stand for its rights, and that courage, and that independence, and that indomitable spirit are what made this country the great and powerful country it is today. Whenever we lose that spirit we shall begin to decline, because a country is not only built up on that spirit, but is maintained on it.

Moreover, apart from all principle, it is not a matter of good judgment, of good strategy, to show the white feather, to indicate any lack of courage or confidence when dealing with greedy and aggressive and unscrupulous nations like England and Japan.

This nation cannot afford to play the part of a coward, because every man will kick a coward, and every nation will take advantage of our cowardice.

This nation cannot hope to secure any advantage by conceding any of its rights, because greedy nations like England are only stimulated by concessions to demand more concessions.

Great Democrats, like Jefferson, and Madison, and Monroe, and Jackson, and Cleveland, have shown us the way to deal with England. They have asserted our rights, and established our rights, with a firm front and a strong hand.

There is no doubt of the success of this way of dealing with England. History proves it. Democracy has demonstrated it. Every attempt to deal with England in any other way has been an utter failure. The Lion has never been tamed by a taste of blood, but can be kept at bay by a gun with a man behind it.

I know you to be a man of thoroughly American principles, of courage and spirit, a free and independent Westerner, imbued with the Western sentiment, and splendidly identified with the West, from Seattle to Chicago, but I do not think your attitude on this question is in harmony with these sentiments or with the spirit of your great namesake who blazed the way across the continent.

Do not be led away from the true American position, and from the true Democratic position, by a man who at heart is neither an American nor a Democrat, who confessedly gets his point of view from English sources, who has no claim to Democracy, other than the fact that he had a Democratic nomination pinned upon him who never gave utterance to a Democratic sentiment until he went forth to secure the Democratic nomination and who merely parroted then what he had never felt before and what he has never lived up to since.

There are three standards of Democracy—The great precedents of the party, the example of great Democratic heroes, and the declarations of the party platform.

Be guided by these, Senator. My opinion is of no value, but be guided by these standards and you will be right. Abandon them and you will be wrong, and the party will be wrong, and the country will be wronged.

Please pardon my earnestness. It is because of the sincerety of my interest. Think again, Senator. Consider the example of Jefferson and Madison and Monroe and Jackson and Cleveland. Review the glorious precedents of our party. Re-read the declaration of our platform.

Wilson does not know more than every great American from Washington's time to the present day.

Wilson does not know more than the people of the United States, and all parties were committed to free tolls, and practically all the people voted for free tolls.

If your vote should make the repeal of free tolls impossible, you will have rendered as great a service to your country as any great statesman of our time, as any statesman could possibly render.

Do not be ashamed to change your vote or your attitude.

Do not ever be ashamed to do what is right, or to have it known that you are doing what is right. The more comment that is created, the more conspicuous will be the service you are rendering to your country and the more that service will be recognized in later years. Sincerely,

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

DECLARE SENATE WILL LISTEN TO PEOPLE ON TOLLS

Leading Members of Upper Branch Say Debate on Repeal Bill Will Be Free.

WASHINGTON, April 4—Here are a few comments from prominent Senators on the Sims bill for the repeal of free canal tolls:

SENATOR GALLINGER of New Hampshire, oldest Republican and oldest parliamentarian in the Senate:

No American need fear that the Senate will be trampled roughshod like the House. The parliamentary right of free speech in the Senate will protect the people. Some Senators who are for surrender here are sowing the wind to reap the whirlwind in November.

How can Massachusetts, the cradle of liberty, fail to stand by the American spirit and rebuke those who betray it? How can Vermont, in the memory of old Ethan Allen, who swore "by the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," fail to direct its sons to protect our sovereignty in the canal?

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN, of Oregon:

I would hesitate to look the people of the State in the face if I voted to surrender our American rights and sovereignty in this, our canal. I believe they would never forgive me. There has not been in half a century, a greater question to stir the blood of American citizens.

I have no doubt of what the people of this country want. My mail is flooded with letters approving my attitude in this matter. The spirit of the Senators who are against this clamor of cowardly surrender was never so high and confident as it is today.

SENATOR MARTINE, of New Jersey, President Wilson's State:

I don't think the vote in the House is going to have any effect whatever in the Senate. This body will act in the light of its own information and in accordance with the judgment of Senators. Much depends upon what the country is excited about now and the time when the vote is taken.

I shall not pretend to forecast what the vote will be, but I strongly believe that it will be for ministration of the affairs of the canal without direction from any other Power.

SENATOR ASHHURST, of Arizona:

It is my personal judgment that Senators will deal with the proposed repeal of toll exemption according to their personal judgments and convictions. The action of the House will not deter a single member of the Senate from acting as he believes is right. Personally, I have not been able to discover a single reason why any Democrat should support a proposition that repudiates his party platform."

SENATOR POINDEXTER, of Washington:

The action in the House was practically known in advance. That it should be used as an argument here in the Senate, I fail to appreciate. That vote was taken under duress.

There will be nothing of that sort in the Senate. There will be no limitation of debate and no shutting off of the right to offer amendments. Meanwhile, being under discussion in the Senate, the country will have ample opportunity to be heard—a right denied by the House—and when the country is heard I believe the Senate will vote in response to demand of the American people for a true American policy, with regard to the canal.

SENATOR VARDAMAN, of Mississippi:

The Senate is a body of thinking and independent men. It will neither be influenced nor swerved from what it believes to be right by the vote in the House nor under pressure from other quarters. My own judgment is that when the country at large has had time to think over this great question and the people have had the opportunity of expressing themselves, there will be a change in sentiment in the Senate.

The proposed repeal of the toll exemption is un-American and unpatriotic, and I do not think the American people will approve of such a policy. In due time the vote will be taken in the Senate and all patriotic men hope that the Senate, as it always does, will do the right thing and respond to the demands of the people.

MOTHER! GIVE CROSS, SICK CHILD ONLY "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

If peevish, feverish, tongue coated, give "fruit laxative" at once.

No matter what ails your child a laxative should be the first treatment given.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated it is a sure sign your "little one's" stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, breath bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, fever sore, or has fever, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of bowels, and you will have a well, playful child again.

Soon children needn't be coaxed to take this delicious "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a thoroughly cleansed little system is given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Co." Refuse any kind with contempt.

Write to Any of These Senators What You Think of the Proposed Tolls Surrender to England

The point involved is simply this:

The Panama Canal has been built by the people of the United States at public expense of $400,000,000. The canal zone has been bought by the United States, which thus became sole owner as well as the sole builder of the canal. Congress voted two years ago to pass American coastwise commerce through the canal free of tolls. Our ships engaged in foreign commerce are to pay exactly the same tolls as ships of other nations.

England two years ago protested against any special privileges for any American ships, or even for our warships in the canal.

Our National sovereignty over the canal has been, in the face of this protest, affirmed by two former presidents of the United States, and was successfully maintained by Secretary of State Knox.

President Wilson now proposes to concede England's right to forbid the free use of the canal to American domestic commerce and United States warships. He proposes to do this without affirming or defending American rights, and simply to gain England's good will and support in the President's awkward situation in Mexico and Japan.

But—note this important fact—if we surrender our sovereignty in the canal to help President Wilson out of his temporary difficulties, we surrender that sovereignty forever. President Wilson's successors cannot repair the grave blunder.

Therefore, write to any of the United States Senators whose names are printed below, what you think about it. These Senators can prevent the irretrievable national weakness if they will. They will vote on the question in a few weeks. The question is whether an act of Congress passed almost unanimously two years ago, and approved by Mr. Wilson when a candidate for President, shall now be repealed at the dictation of Great Britain.

OPPOSITION TO REPEAL IS GROWING IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Senate took up the Panama tolls problem after a three-days' respite from this issue, occasioned by the continuous executive sessions required for the confirmation of Winthrop M. Daniels of New Jersey as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. With the efforts of Republican leaders to force the Republican Senators into a partisan alignment against the measure, and continued their confident prediction of a safe majority for the repeal.

Senators have begun to speculate about the effect of the announcement of Federal reserve districts and cities upon the vote in the Senate. The work of the organization committee, which is presumed to have the approval of the President, has caused much criticism among a substantial minority of the Senate, and this may, it is believed, have some effect on the attitude of several members toward the President's demand for full repeal.

The confirmation of Mr. Daniels as Interstate Commerce Commissioner also is regarded as a possible factor in the tolls situation, especially as Republicans are threatening to reveal against executive sessions.

Senator Ashurst's declaration in the Senate that the people were ignored by the appointment of functionaries to the Interstate Commerce Commission on one hand, and the attempted repeal of free tolls on the other, is being considered seriously. He said that both worked toward an increase in rates from which relief for the people never could be obtained.

TOLL ISSUE MOST VITAL TO THE NATIONAL WELFARE, SAYS CANNON

NEW YORK, April 4.—Former Speaker Cannon, before sailing for Bermuda today, said:

"I am surprised at the manner in which some of the New York newspapers are advocating the repeal of the exemption clause in the canal bill. The port of New York is the biggest in the world and if the country does nothing for the benefit of our shipping what is to become of our merchant marine? It is a matter more vital to the future prosperity than it is to any other port."

HARSH TALK IN SENATE BARRED

New Rule Would Stop Criticism of President or Fellow-Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Senators will have to be more careful what they say about each other or about the President or Vice President if an amendment to the rules proposed today by Senator Overman is adopted. The plan is the result of bitter things said about the President and his senatorial supporters yesterday in the secret session at which the confirmation of Winthrop M. Daniels as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission was being considered. The proposed new rule reads:

"No senator in debate shall directly or indirectly by any form of words impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motives unworthy or unbecoming a seantor; or in any manner refer disrespectfully or offensively to the President of the United States or to the Vice President."

The following resolution by Senator Kenyon is the result of the revolt in executive session yesterday and looks to the abolition of secret sessions except in cases where secrecy is essential:

"Resolved, that it is the judgment of the Senate that all executive sessions shall hereafter be open to the public, except when treaties are considered or when the Senate by unanimous consent orders otherwise and the committee on rules is directed to prepare such amendment to the rules, or to prepare new rules, or both, as may be necessary to carry out the terms of this resolution, and present the same to the Senate for action thereon."

UNDERWOOD PREDICTS WILSON WILL LOSE IN THE SENATE FIGHT

ATLANTA, April 4.—According to Congressman Oscar W. Underwood, who passed through Atlanta today on his way to Alabama to vote in Monday's elections in that State, the tolls repeal fight in the House was mild in comparison to the one which will take place in the Senate, and prediction was made that Wilson would lose in the upper House of Congress.

The prominent Alabamian declared that the Democrats of Congress and thousands of Democrats all over the country who are fighting President Wilson's attempt to surrender the rights of the United States and compel a repeal of the Panama Canal tolls act, have not given up hope because of the victory the President's forces gained in the House.

"We are working hard," he said. "There are plenty of us who are determined to do all we can to make the canal an American canal. Operated for the benefit of the American people. It is probable that if the bill reached the Senate floor as it is now, it would pass by a very small majority, but members of Congress are calling every day on our side of the fight, and we have high hopes that before the Senate passes on the bill, we will not be before a month, we will have sufficient support to defeat it."

NEW ORLEANS ASKS THORNTON TO VOTE AGAINST REPEAL

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—The New Orleans Association of Commerce, which is said to be the biggest commercial organization in the South, sent the following telegram this afternoon.

"To Senator Thornton, Washington —The undoubted political bias of the Reserve Bank Organization Committee in their selection of cities for the location of reserve banks is a gross injustice to the city of New Orleans and an insult to the commercial and financial independence of the city and the State of Louisiana.

"New Orleans and Louisiana have suffered more than any others at the hands of this administration, and in the determination of the administration to force through Congress a repeal of Panama Canal tolls another injury is in process of making.

"We believe that all these culminating outrages are more than sufficient warrant for you to withdraw your support of the administration program in the canal tolls matter, and we urgently request you to demand release from any promise you have made the President."

To Absorb Freckles And Other Blemishes

Every Spring numerous inquiries are made by girls seeking some reliable recipe for removing freckles. Last year very favorable reports were received from many who had used mercolized wax during the freckling season. The wax seems to possess unusual properties which completely absorb the freckles, with no harmful effect. The complexion, improved wonderfully, becoming as soft as a rose petal, and as delightfully tinted. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's, spread a thin layer on it over the entire face every night for awhile, washing off in the morning. For rough, spotty skin, sallowness, blackheads, pimples and all unhealthy blemishes, this treatment is superior to any other.

Sunlight and bracing breezes by many sensitive skins that are much exposed to winds and changing temperatures. To a half pint witch hazel add an ounce of powdered saxolite, which quickly dissolves. Bathe the face in this the effect on a wrinkled skin is remarkable.

RECOGNIZE REBELS, IS U.S. PLAN IN MEXICO

Washington's Next Step, It Is Said, Will Be to Concede Belligerent Rights; Then to Recognize Northern Republic

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Recognition of the belligerency of the Rebels in Nothern Mexico is expected as the next step of this Government, following the capture of Torreon and the impending fall of Tampico.

Following this, as a "solution" of President Wilson's contest with Huerta, may come the recognition of a northern republic in Mexico.

The question of according belligerent rights to the Constitutionalists was in progress of discussion at the time of the murder of the British subject, Benton. This temporarily checked the negotiations.

Judging from statements made at the State Department, the Benton incident has blown over, as the new plan will give Great Britain the diplomatic right to deal directly with Carranza and Villa as to an indemnity for Benton's murder.

The result of according belligerent rights to Carranza would be, in its main details, the recognition of the flag of the Rebels on land and sea, an acknowledgment of any blockade the Fifth may establish in any Mexican port, and the flotation of bonds.

The State Department has information that immediately upon the fall of Tampico the Rebels will turn their attention to the acquisition of a navy.

This will be easy when it is spread abroad that recognition of the Constitutionalist cause has been forced upon the United States government by the success of Villa and the inability of Huerta to settle with England and foreign nations for indemnities demanded in the northern half of Mexico.

It is stated here that the first move of the rebel navy will be to blockade Vera Cruz.

REBELS CLOSING IN UPON TAMPICO; GUNBOAT ARRIVES

VERA CRUZ, April 4.—Fighting continues around Tampico. The Rebels appear to be closing in upon the city. A few days ago they managed to drive off a goodly supply of beeves from the Federal enclosures, making meat scarce in the city.

The Federal gunboat Zaragoza arrived here today for reinforcements.

Mr. Lind will leave for New Orleans by the Mayflower tomorrow morning if he receives certain documents or information from the state Department, otherwise he will postpone his departure until Monday.

WOMEN WEEPING IN STREETS OF TORREON FOR THEIR DEAD

TORREON, Mex., April 4.—There is blood on every threshold and crepe on every door in Torreon and women are weeping in the streets. Not in the history of warfare in Mexico, from the landing of Cortez till the present time, has any city suffered in attack more heavily than did Torreon in the repeated charges made by General Villa's victorious army.

Hardly a household escaped. From every one a father, a brother, a husband or sweetheart is numbered among the killed, wounded or missing, the result of the terrible onslaught made by the Villa's Constitutionalists.

The physical wreckage wrought is rapidly being cleared up, but the heartaches, though stoically endured, will linger.

OVER 1,000 KILLED.

Though actual figures relating to Federal losses probably never will be obtained, it is believed the killed will number over 1,000 and the wounded probably twice as many more. Of the latter between 400 and 500 were so badly crippled that they could not be moved and are being cared for by the Constitutionalist hospital corps.

In order to give them the care they need if their lives are to be saved, General Villa has wired to Juarez to secure the services of as many of the best American surgeons in Elsaso as possible, and a dozen or more trained male nurses, and dispatch them at once to Torreon.

This request was made because all the available surgeons in the Constitutionalist territory had already been impressed into the service.

While the dead and the wounded which littered the streets and befouled the air were picked up and burned in great heaps soon after the occupation of the city, many dead are still being found in the houses of the town through which the Constitutionalists passed.

VICTIMS OF DYNAMITE.

In the wreckage of one building in a portion of the city captured early in the fight, twelve dead were found today. The entire party had evidently been victims of a dynamite bomb.

Several barrels of lime, brought from Chihuahua are being utilized to cover the bodies of victims of the battle, who were buried in shallow trenches.

General Villa's formal entry to Torreon was made Friday, when at the head of his staff and followed by the entire army of occupation a parade of the streets was made and formal possession taken of the place.

Women of the city strewed the way with roses and other flowers, and Villa was cheered heartily as he rode at the head of the cavalcade. To his credit it must be said that he accepted the honors which the citizens of Torreon insisted upon heaping upon him very modestly.

To a delegation of citizens who waited upon him to welcome him to the city he said that he was entitled to no credit and that any honor shown would be given the army and not to him.

TORREON'S BATTLE LOSSES NOW FIXED AT UPWARDS OF 4,000

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The total losses in the fighting at Torreon were 4,200 men, according to figures given in advices received from Consul Carothers at the State Department today. General Villa lost about 1,200 men and the Federal loss is estimated at 3,000.

RUSSIA ON EVE OF REVOLUTION

Serious Conflict Predicted as Result of Labor Troubles Here.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 4.—Arising out of the labor troubles at the Treugolnik factory, there is a firmly established belief that Russia is on the eve of a serious revolutionary movement for which workmen have been preparing for some time.

Labor, for the first time in the history of Russia, is beginning to organize. The daily meetings of workmen are attended by large numbers of men and women and enormous quantities of revolutionary pamphlets are being distributed.

Another significant symptom is that for the first time since 1905, in serious clashes between the workmen and the police, fire arms are liberally used by the former. Students at the university and technological institute schools have declared themselves on the side of the workmen—something which has never happened openly before.

The workmen are demanding recognition of their right to organize and hold meetings; in other words to establish trades unions.

WALSH TO NAME COMMITTEE ON STATE BOOM

Governor Adds at Conference That Women Will Be Represented on Board.

Governor Walsh was unanimously requested yesterday to appoint fourteen citizens, one from each county, and a number at large to draft plans for a permanent State-wide town and city planning board, by the seven hundred in attendance at a Ford Hall conference called by him to deal with the question.

"And I trust that His Excellency, Governor Walsh, will see to it that at least two or three public-spirited women are selected to serve in that capacity," Mrs. Grace W. Garrett of the Westboro Women's Civic League added.

"Thank you, for the suggestion it meets with my hearty approval. No planning board could be considered complete without women on it," the Governor replied.

The delegates greeted this announcement with sincerous applause.

The meeting was called by Governor Walsh to discuss the possibilities of town and city development, but many other questions came up. Among the most widely discussed topics was that dealing with farm life and the problems confronting the smaller towns.

Ex-Senator Frank P. Bennett of Saugus said that the tax rate in that town this year unquestionably would be 18 instead of $16, as a result of school expenditures. A number of others told of similar experiences in their respective towns, and urged that State aid be given in such instances.

Former Mayor Fitzgerald was applauded when, in reply to a criticism of the expenditure of State money on the development of Boston's waterfront and its terminal facilities, he asserted that out of the $12,000,000 spent by the State for roads only one mile of a State highway had been built in Metropolitan Boston. And this with Boston itself paying 55 per cent. of the cost of these roads.

This led to a criticism of Mayor Curley by Charles W. Hown of the Dorchester Harvard Improvement Association, who told of the many good things Fitzgerald had done, while Curley simply handed the residents of that district a game of talk, telling them to raise by private subscription such money as was needed to improve the section.

Howard B. Gross of Chicago, president of the National Soil Fertility League, declared that by scientific methods of production Massachusetts could raise sufficient food products to feed her entire population.

John H. Vahey, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, presided, and the Boston Chamber of Commerce provided refreshments at intermission.

Immigration Bill Is Denounced Here

Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, was crowded last night at a meeting held to protest against the so called Burnett Immigration bill now in Congress. In the audience were many women and when Dr. Harriett Lothrop Jaasch, secretary of the Boston Socialistic party was introduced, they warmly applauded her. Among the other speakers were Fred H. Chase, State secretary of the Socialist party and the Rev. A. R. Williams of the Maverick street Church, East Boston.

A resolution opposing the passage of the bill will be sent to Massachusetts congressmen.

GENERAL ELECTRICS IN.

The General Electric easily defeated the Swedish-Americans of Cambridge at Lynn yesterday by a score of 5 to 1. The game was merely an exhibition and did not count in the league standing.

Women Everywhere

WOMEN from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from all sections of this great country, no city so large, no village so small but that some woman has written words of thanks for health restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No woman who is suffering from the ills peculiar to her sex should rest until she has given this famous remedy a trial.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wonderful Case on the Pacific Coast.

INDEPENDENCE, OREGON.—"I was sick with what four doctors called Nervous Prostration, was treated by them for several years, would be better for a while then back in the old way again. I had palpitation of the heart very bad, fainting spells, and was so nervous that a spoon dropping to the floor would nearly kill me, could not lift the slightest weight without making me sick; in fact was about as sick and miserable as a person could be. I saw your medicines advertised and thought I would try them, and am so thankful I did for they helped me at once. I took about a dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and also used the Sanative Wash. Since then I have used them whenever I have felt sick. Your remedies are the only doctor I employ. You are at liberty to publish this letter."—Mrs. W. STEPHENSON, Independence, Oregon.

A Grateful Atlantic Coast Woman.

HODGDON, ME.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Me.

For over 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

RELIABLE TESTIMONY.—All our testimonials are guaranteed to be genuine and [illegible]. They come to us entirely unsolicited and are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.—THE LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

RESCUE SHIP IN PORT WITH 77 BODIES AND 112 SAVED FROM SEALER NEWFOUNDLAND

Terrible Stories of Suffering Told by Survivors as They Reach St. Johns on Bellaventure.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 4.—With her flag at half-mast and her bows and rigging covered with ice, the sealing steamship Bellaventure arrived in the harbor at 5.30 this evening, bringing to port the seventy-seven bodies picked up on the ice after being cut off from the sealer Newfoundland and 112 survivors. The greater number of the survivors are suffering from frostbite.

The quays were lined with friends and relatives of those who had gone out on the ill-fated ship. Awaiting her also were the acting governor of the island, the acting premier, members of the ministry, clergymen, physicians, nurses and ambulance parties.

RUSHED TO HOSPITALS.

Fifty disabled men were first landed and rushed in ambulances and sleighs to the General Hospital. The others were placed in rooms in the Grenfell Institute.

Meanwhile bluejackets and naval reserves from the training school Calypso conveyed the seventy-seven bodies to the central hall of the building converted into a temporary morgue, where the identifications took place. The bodies were confined as this proceeded.

Captain Randall of the Bellaventure says he learned the news of the disaster on Thursday morning when after the blizzard survivors from the New Foundland boarded his vessel and told him 160 of her men had been out in the storm for two days and had not returned.

THROUGH BARRIER OF ICE.

The Bellaventure was the nearest ship to the section where the men and Captain Randell prepared at once for an extensive rescue campaign. The next morning he sent 200 men in parties of ten each with boats and a supply of provisions toward the scene of the disaster and later descried through a glass a few survivors trying to reach the ship. Rescue parties gradually got the survivors back, greatly enfeebled and frightfully frostbitten.

On board the ship the remaining seventy men had beds prepared, hot baths, drinks and food ready, and by these methods they saved several who would otherwise have perished. The ship meanwhile was forcing its way with all speed through a terrific barrier of ice.

DIED AFTER RESCUE.

As the dead bodies were found they were taken into the boats, these being used both for the purposes of conveyances and to ferry the dead and living across the lanes of water between the floes.

The work continued all day, the ship making only four miles from 5 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon, by which times the last of those alive were got on board.

All of the men were so exhausted from their two days' suffering that they could not walk to the ship, and several actually died after being found, partly from exhaustion and partly from the joy of recovery.

The stories of the survivors are terrible. They say that the crew left the ship at daylight Tuesday morning in search of seals, and were out at least forty-eight hours.

They had but little food, and no clothing but what they wore, which was mostly woolen, and outer garments of canvas, woolen mittens, and nothing whatever to shelter them.

The storm raged furiously Tuesday afternoon and night, but it was fairly mild early Wednesday morning. It grew colder and that afternoon froze severely.

The drifting snow blinded them, and although they knew there were ships in the distance and could hear their whistles, the blizzard was worse than a fog, as it destroyed all sense of direction. They wandered aimlessly about hour after hour, in many cases going in circles or retracing their steps.

STORIES OF HARDSHIPS.

By nightfall they realized there was little hope of getting to any ship, but all hoped that the next day they might be more fortunate.

The masters of the different watches tried to keep their men together and active, forcing them to walk, wrestle and otherwise engage in physical effort, first for the warmth it provided and second to prevent the stupor which the frost occasions.

This was kept up all through the night, but the weaker men became wearied, fell to the ice and along toward morning the first deaths occurred.

On Wednesday forenoon, when the weather showed no improvement, the case was seen to be very serious and men were gradually dropping to the ice, there to lie and freeze.

On Wednesday afternoon it got somewhat easier, but no ships could be made out and the mortality was terrible.

HOPES REVIVED.

On Wednesday night the cold overcame their wearied frames and their vital energy was exhausted from lack of food.

Thursday morning broke fine and clear and those who survived were heartened by the sight of the Bellaventure in the vicinity by the approach of her crew.

Measles Is Closely Watched at Waltham

Measles cases are being closely watched by the Waltham board of Health. Three new cases are reported. While the disease has not reached the epidemic stage, the health officers feel that every precaution should be taken.

Prof. Hocking Quits Yale for Harvard

Husband of John Boyle O'Reilly's Daughter to Teach Here.

NEW HAVEN, April 4.—Professor W. E. Hocking, for five years professor of philosophy at Yale, this evening announced his resignation. He has accepted a chair at Harvard and will take up his work there next Fall. He is an authority on the life of Jesus and has given several courses in the divinity school. His wife is daughter of the late John Boyle O'Reilly, the Irish patriot and editor, and his resignation is regarded due largely to her wish to return to Boston.

Methodist Criticism of President Tabled

NEW YORK, April 4.—A resolution introduced today in the annual conference of the Methodist Church, criticising the President of the United States for attending Catholic mass on Thanksgiving Day, and suggesting that the practice be discontinued, brought forth a host of supporters and a storm of protest when it was introduced by Dr. Thomas S. Bond. It was tabled by a bare majority of seven votes, 73 members of the conference voting for it, and 80 voting to table it.

Girl Found Dead with Gas Turned On

Miss Lillian Comon, 20, a garment worker living with Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Yassee, her sister and brother-in-law, at No. 88 Harvard street, Malden, was found dead last night in her room. The doors and windows were tightly closed and the gas turned on.

When Mrs. Yassee became hysterical and screamed neighbors thought the house was on fire and an alarm was rung in which brought the engines and a crowd to the house. Dr. Samuel Hoberman attempted vainly to revive the girl with the pulmotor.

King Coming with Queen of Bulgaria

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Queen Eleonora of Bulgaria will be accompanied on her American tour by Kirkh Ferdinand himself. This information was formally communicated today to the United States government. The party will sail May 21 from Hamburg and travel incognito.

The sole purpose of the Queen's trip is to study American hospitals and our methods of training nurses.

MISS CHRISTIAN, TO BE BRIDESMAID FOR BELLE WILLARD

Miss Christian is selecting her gown for the wedding of the daughter of United States Ambassador to Spain and Kermit Roosevelt.

RICHMOND, Va., April 4.—Miss Virginia Christian and Miss Montague are already beginning to plan the gowns they will take with them to Madrid to act as bridesmaids at the wedding of their chum, Belle Willard, daughter of Joseph Willard, Ambassador to Spain, and Kermit Roosevelt.

Young Roosevelt is at present pursuing the headwaters of the well-known Amazon with his father. Miss Willard is in Madrid. Her letters to Miss Christian and Miss Montague, asking them to be her bridesmaids, created much interest in Richmond. Miss Willard was one of the best-liked girls here before her father was sent to Madrid.

HOME RULE TO BE MADE LAW, SAYS ASQUITH

Premier, in Opening Campaign in Fife, Emphasizes the "Army-in-Politics" Issue.

LONDON, April 4.—Premier Asquith opened his campaign for re-election to Parliament at Ladybank, Scotland, today with a ringing speech in which he attack the Unionist party, and at the same time pledged the complete separation of the army from politics.

In addressing the electors of Fife, whom he represented in the House of Commons for many years, the premier touched only briefly on the events leading to his acceptance of the portfolio of war in the cabinet, but said that his action was taken for the interests of the State and army. Then he made this significant declaration:

"But the army will hear nothing of politics from me. In return I expect to hear nothing of politics from the army."

The audience cheered this declaration which was a reiteration of the Premier's statement in Parliament that the army must obey orders without asking guarantees.

At that point the Premier took occasion to assail the Unionists, asserting their attempt to wreck the government was based upon a theory in which none of them had any real belief. "The doctrine lately promulgated by the Tories," he said "struck not only at the root of army discipline, but also at the root of democratic government."

The Premier declared that the action of the Unionists had established a disastrous precedent if the new dogma indorsed by their leaders were invoked whenever lawlessness was rampant. In concluding he said:

"We are anxious for peace, but it must be peace with honor. Anyhow, we are determined to put the home rule bill on the statute book."

MILITANTS MOB CARSON.

Militant suffragettes attempted to project their cause into the anti-home rule demonstration of the Unionists in Hyde Park this afternoon, and wild scenes followed.

During the parade of the anti-home rule forces a party of militants led by "General" Flora Drummond, charged into the procession, flying banners, scattering suffrage literature and shouting "Votes for women" and "Give us votes before you give Ireland freedom."

When the police attempted to drive the women from the streets a riot occurred in which a number of persons were injured. Mrs. Drummond was arrested.

KING AND QUEEN SCARED DURING ULSTER CRISIS

Had Yacht All Ready to Take Royal Children Away to Norway.

LONDON, April 4.—That the crisis caused by the action of King George directly interfering in the recent amazing attitude of certain army officers on the Ulster question has not passed is shown by the glowing article written especially for the AMERICAN by a person closely connected with the royal household.

"It is a long time since Buckingham Palace has been the scene of such comings and goings and hurried consultations as it is at present. An evidence of the fright which prevailed in the royal establishment over the present situation is the fact that on Tuesday last arrangements were made for sending Princess Mary and Prince John to stay with the Queen of Norway, and the royal yacht has been put in readiness to take "them."

Yesterday the commander and chief officer of the royal yacht had a lengthy interview with the King and Queen. A dinner party which was to have been given in Buckingham Palace next Wednesday has been put off and both of their majesties have canceled their immediate social engagements.

"Their majesties just now are giving Lord Stamfordham, the King's private secretary, much advice of His Majesty acted when he went personally to the War Office, an exceedingly hard time of it.

"The King keenly regrets that Lord Knollys, who was private secretary and adviser to King Edward, is no longer a member of the royal household. He certainly would have advised strongly against royal interference, as he did only this week, when Queen Alexandria was on the point of making a public pronouncement in the form of a letter to the newspapers as to what she thought would have been King Edward's view on the matter and how he would have acted had he been alive.

There is no doubt that Queen Mary had a lot to do with the King's action, and that she now bitterly regrets it. She is doing all she can to allay the feeling aroused in the Irish regiments."

Lincoln House at Swampscott Sold

Charles H. and Roy F. Bergenngren have bought the Lincoln House at Swampscott. The hotel is to undergo extensive changes and will be managed by Allen Ainslie.

Here's What Paget Said About Ulster

Words to Army Officers That Precipitated the Crisis.

LONDON, April 4.—Here are the exact words used by General Sir Arthur Paget, commander of His Majesty's forces in Ireland, on his return to Dublin after his first visit to the War Office in London, a speech which will become historic in the annals of the British army.

Throwing down his gloves on the table, he said to the assembled officers:

"Well, the buggars are going to fight Ulster. Now you're bloody well got to make up your minds what you are going to do."

Numerous attempts have been made in the House of Commons to obtain the exact terms of Sir Arthur Paget's speech, but so far without success. The informant is a well-known Fleet Street editor to whom Lloyd George repeated the speech.

Maxim Gorky Cured of Consumption

Roentgen Rays Applied as Last Resort Prove Effective.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 4. — Maxim Gorky, the novelist, in a letter written to the newspaper Russky Slovo, declares he has been cured of pulmonary tuberculosis by means of applications of Roentgen Rays to his spleen. The treatment was administered by Dr. Manukhin of Capri as a last resort after an examination which showed both lungs to be affected.

Gorky says the progress of the disease has been arrested and that he is already regaining the weight he lost before the new treatment was applied.

Liner's Lard Cargo Destroyed by Fire

The biggest "fry" of lard that Boston ever knew came yesterday when fire started in the forehold of the Leyland freighter Kinkenton, which had taken aboard part of a cargo of bulk lard, packed in wooden cases. The cargo and ship were damaged $3,500 from fire, smoke and water.

A freshet quickly drowned out the fire.

Motor Bus to Run to New Fish Pier

Beginning Monday, a motor bus line will carry passengers between the new Fish pier in South Boston and Atlantic avenue by way of Northern avenue. At present there is a long walk to the pier from the nearest car line.

GOOD MAYOR FOR CAMBRIDGE NOW

It All Starts Tomorrow, and Then Barry Hustles to the West.

Mayor-elect Timothy W. Good and the new (and Good) City Council of Cambridge will be inducted into office at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Not long afterwards the present chief executive of "Newtowne," handsome "Ned" Barry, will strike out for the Pacific Coast and a rest.

The oath of office will be administered tomorrow by Judge Charles Almy of the District Court.

Then Cambridge will settle down to business; and all the Cambridge small boys will have a new (and awful) gag:

Q—What city in the Commonwealth has the best Mayor?

A—Cambridge, of course. (You ask me "why"?)

Q—Well, why?

A—Because he is always Good.

Mr. Tom Coffey of East Boston will now oblige with that tender ballad entitled, "Fireman, Save My Child."

MRS. WHEELER INVOKES MUSE FOR THE AMERICAN

Poetic verse hurriedly struck off yesterday by Mrs. Claudia C. [illegible] Sunday AMERICAN

GOD IS LIFE

Beloved, you must surely know
How God has given us the strength to pass
Through hardships when the way seems dark,
But right when we are from faith in him
Gives us the courage to win our way
When may seem rough and difficult,
As with tired feet and weary heart we go.
Yet if we but pause to look we find
The [illegible] smooth path God planned is not concealed.
But he [illegible] He stands with outstretched hand
To [illegible] with kind and loving grace.

BURNS DETECTIVES BARE ASTOUNDING GRAFT IN PAWTUCKET

Rhode Island City Prey to Political Buccaneers and Characterized as the 'Rottenest' Municipality in All New England—Amazing Revelations After Thorough Investigation—Lid Off Ring Rule

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 4.—Pawtucket is a wide-open city for [illegible] ring-rule is rampant, bossism is the keynote to Pawtucket's municipal shame and the lid is off wide.

Burns detectives who probed Pawtucket affairs for a big manufacturer had this to say to-day:

"We have seen a whole lot of evils in a lot of cities, but never did we see such buccaneering—that's just the word—as we have unearthed in Pawtucket."

Here are some of the things the investigators have brought to light:

One big Pawtucket business man's goods absolutely barred from the city because he doesn't "stand in."

Business men whipped into line by threats to raise taxes or refusal to grant licenses.

HEARST THANKED BY ATLANTA BUSINESS MEN FOR AID IN GETTING BANK

Georgia Governor and Other Leaders Express Appreciation of Newspapers for Help in Securing Reserve Institution for State's Great City.

The efforts of the Hearst newspapers throughout the United States to aid bankers and merchants in various cities in which Hearst newspapers are published to secure for those cities regional reserve banks is testified to by bankers, business men and others who are deeply interested in the proper locations.

From Atlanta there comes the following telegrams of appreciation:

Atlanta, April 3.

William Randolph Hearst:

I wish to express my appreciation of the splendid aid rendered by you through your powerful newspapers in securing for Georgia a regional bank.

JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

William Randolph Hearst:

Atlanta rejoices in her victory and appreciates the splendid work of her many friends. The co-operation of your newspapers, I am sure, did much to get the endorsement of the bankers of the whole country.

J. K. ORR, Chairman.

William Randolph Hearst:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your influence and cordial co-operation in the successful effort Atlanta made to secure one of the federal reserve banks. I remember the splendid publicity your papers gave Atlanta's claim at the beginning of the fight and during the investigation which, I am sure, was of much benefit to this city and section. I believe that the efficiency of the federal reserve bank of Atlanta will prove the wisdom of the organization board in making this city the reserve centre for this growing and important section of our country.

ROBERT F. MADDOX.

William Randolph Hearst:

Let us thank you for your valuable aid in getting the regional bank for Georgia.

GEORGIA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

William Randolph Hearst:

The directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce have today unanimously adopted a resolution expressing appreciation for the valuable service which the press of this city rendered Atlanta in securing a regional bank and I desire to add to this my personal appreciation for your work in our behalf.

MELL R. WILKINSON,
President Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

William Randolph Hearst:

Atlanta's selection as a proper location for a federal reserve bank carries the highest endorsement of its supremacy in commercial, industrial and financial affairs throughout the southeastern section. This following the selection of our city as a location of a Hearst newspaper is convincing proof that Atlanta is the leading southern centre of all activities. Your co-operation and influence were of incalculable value.

WILMER L. MOORE.

'Limited Stops' on Lebanon St. Cars

Sign to Be Displayed During the Rush Hours.

Tomorrow the Boston Elevated Railway Company will equip cars on the Lebanon street line with a new sign reading "Limited Stops," to be displayed during the outward trips during afternoon rush hour.

Cars carrying the sign will not stop to receive passengers on their outward trips before reaching Malden square.

The "Limited Stops" sign will be carried on the front and rear ends of the cars. It is not to take the place of the signs for passengers, both inward and outward bound. Those who wish to leave the car before reaching Malden square will be required to signal the motorman in the direction of the conductor as the latter is now required to do. If the car is not filled, the signs will be removed and the cars will be operated during rush hours the same as during the regular hours. Passengers will be permitted to get on or off the cars at which the limited stops are made to enter or leave the cars along their route.

SLOW TIRE LEAKS.

High-Priced Tires
Since Our Reductions, 16 Makes Cost You More Than Goodyears

The facts are these:
No-Rim-Cut tires, because of costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires.

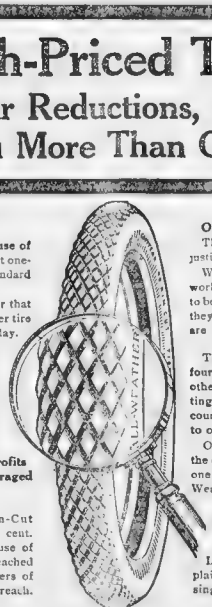
Yet they excelled so far that they soon outsold any other tire in the world, as they do today.

With mammoth output came lower factory cost. Our overhead cost dropped 24 per cent. New factories, new machinery, new efficiency brought costs down and down.

And we dropped our profits until last year they averaged 6½ per cent.

During 1913 No-Rim-Cut prices dropped 28 per cent. Largely, of course, because of rubber reductions. They reached a point which other makers of good tires do not care to reach.

Now 16 makes sell higher than Goodyear prices—some almost one-half higher. And every tire user wants to know what justifies these prices.



Our answer is this:
Those higher prices can't be justified in any way whatever.

We have had scores of experts working for years to find ways to better No-Rim-Cut tires. And they all agree that better tires are impossible.

Then No-Rim-Cut tires have four costly features found in no other tire. One makes rim-cutting impossible. One saves countless blow-outs, and it adds to our tire cost $1,500 daily.

One lessens by 60 per cent the danger of loose treads. And one is our double-thick All-Weather tread.

Mark this. Not another tire at any price has one of these costly features.

Lower prices are easily explained. Higher prices lack a single shred of basis, save smaller output or a larger profit.

Those are the facts. You don't care to pay for chimerical advantage, and extra price buys nothing else.

Overland

66 Miles High

OUR 1914 production of 50,000 cars, piled one on top of the other, would reach 350,000 feet or 66 miles in the air.

This is over 355 times as high as the Eiffel Tower in Paris, which is the tallest structure in the world.

This is over 466 times as tall as the Woolworth Building or 630 times as high as the Washington Monument.

Also this is over 432 times the length of the Imperator.

Such figures are dazzling. But they help to make you realize the immensity of our production and the large scale on which we conduct our business. And finally and most important of all help to prove the one great big point we have always endeavored to drive home—the economy of producing automobiles in great quantities.

Manufacturing, purchasing and marketing on a 50,000 car basis is infinitely less expensive than on the thousand car basis.

And that is why we can sell the Overland for 30% less than any other similar car made.

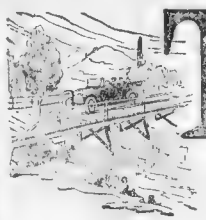
PACKARD MOTOR CAR COMPANY OF BOSTON

1069 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. FULTON Owner



THE company back of the car is an important factor in determining automobile value.

The Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which interest has to be paid—no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends—no heavy overhead expense of any kind—

The price of a Paige car represents actual car value simply because the company back of it is sound financially.

When you buy the Paige you pay only for the car.

That is why it is possible to include in the Paige so many structural features usually found only in cars of much higher price—

Investigate these facts for yourself.

Then get your name on an order blank as quickly as you can—The Paige is going to be oversold again this year.

SAFETY FIRST

Quality and Lower Cost Mileage for Goodrich Tire Users

Goodrich Unit Molding is in reality the original "Safety First" idea in tire-building

The body of the tire, the side walls, the [illegible] the rubber, the bead and the safety [illegible] so well balanced and one of such [illegible] high quality that they, coupled with Goodrich skill in workmanship, makes it possible for us to mold Goodrich Tires as a

Therefore, Goodrich Tires wear as a unit. Every part helping every other part to render the service demanded of it—thereby giving the utmost in service and mileage to the tire user.

The fine, strong fabric and high grade rubber are literally interlocked by Goodrich Unit Molding. This is one reason why Goodrich tires do not separate and why "tire troubles" are practically unknown to Goodrich users.

The extra thickness of tough Goodrich rubber in the treads of Goodrich Safety Tread Tires at the point of contact with the road provides longer wear, longer service and greater satisfaction.

The thick, tough rubber bars and crossbars of the safety tread as shown, above, make a [illegible] roadway for these. They [illegible] the path and prevent [illegible] Because this New Tread design is built as a unit, it [illegible] wear evenly on the road surface, and will run just as smoothly as a smooth tread.

THOROUGHFARE CELEBRATION SALE

Tremont Street — Shepard Nowell Company — Temple Place

Winter Street

DURING THE WEEK AS FAST AS THESE LOTS ARE SOLD NEW LOTS OF EQUAL VALUE WILL BE PLACED ON SALE.

FROM MONDAY, APRIL 6TH, TO MONDAY, APRIL 13TH

IT LEADS THE WORLD'S GREAT MERCHANDISING EVENTS

SAVING TENS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS TO OUR PATRONS

—Let us say right now before going further that this sale is in celebration of the opening by us of an indoor Thoroughfare directly through from Winter Street to Temple Place—(now includes a Thoroughfare from Tremont Street to these two main arteries of Boston's shopping center). OF COURSE, you understand that this great event is NOT limited in its scope, but is

GENERAL THROUGHOUT OUR STORES

—COVERS EVERY NOOK AND CORNER
AND EMBRACES EVERY KIND OF MERCHANDISE
SOLD UNDER OUR ROOF

—This sale in the Spring and our Anniversary Sale in the Fall are nationally recognized as events of the first magnitude—each planned to outdo the other—and all our store managers guarantee to you and to us that it is far and away ahead of any sale yet held by us.

AN ATTEMPT TO GIVE FULL DETAILS OF THIS THOROUGHFARE SALE FALLS SHORT OF REALITY

—but we will tell you enough to give you an idea. Every piece of merchandise offered is NEW, and desirable. Every piece is "right" in quality and style. And remember that "right" with us means merchandise of the highest character. Not merchandise of the ordinary sale kind—none such is ever permitted within this store, now or at any other time. Every store manager is compelled by the unalterable law of this business to offer in this "Thoroughfare Celebration" only the very choicest goods that he can buy (such as we are proud to sell at all times), and then to make the price the very lowest that any store anywhere has ever quoted for like quality of merchandise.

QUALITY WITH ECONOMY

—Varieties are larger—Qualities are better—Values greater than in any sale that has ever come to our notice.

—This is not a house of sales. These two yearly events are held for three reasons—

(1) To Add Largely to Our Fast-Increasing Sales.
(2) To Bring New People to Our Stores, Feeling Assured They Will Remain Patrons.
(3) That More and More May Get Acquainted with the Shepard Way of Doing Things.

—We could not afford to hold EVEN ONE of these sales were it not that importers and manufacturers go hand in hand with us, glad to aid us in increasing our business—resulting in larger sales for them and the introducing of their most worthy merchandise through an absolutely reliable store.

ALL PURCHASES (except Household Goods), suitable to go by parcel post, will be delivered FREE throughout the United States.

PURCHASES OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS amounting to $2.50 or over will be delivered FREE anywhere in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

ALL PURCHASES including Household Goods, without any restriction whatever, will be delivered FREE anywhere in Massachusetts.

—You will find almost a thousand extra employes here to serve you, quickly, pleasantly and with knowledge of the goods.

SHEPARD 'RELIABLE' GLOVES
PRICES WITH "ACTION" IN THEM

—All are GOOD gloves. It is the Shepard quality that makes this sale so important. No woman will be averse to stowing away several extra pairs of fine real kid gloves for afternoon and evening wear, good washable chamoisette gloves and cool Summer silk gloves—with such a price-saving on every pair.

CHARGE ACCOUNTS INVITED

—THE THOROUGHFARE CELEBRATION SALE is an attractive time for you to open a charge account with the Shepard Stores. You can make arrangements with the manager of Retail Accounts on the fourth floor. (Temple Place elevator runs direct.)

FOR YOU

—One of the most satisfying things in buying in the Shepard Stores is the security you feel about the quality. We hold to the highest standards. We are building a fast-growing business that has for its foundation "the satisfaction of every customer."

SUITS, COATS, DRESSES, SKIRTS
QUITE DIFFERENT FROM MOST BOSTON "SALES"
STYLES AND QUALITIES ARE VERY UNUSUAL

—We cannot adequately describe these garments—you MUST see them. We measure the wisdom of this sale by the future benefits that are certain to be derived from satisfied customers. That's progressive merchandising.
—These garments represent the work of the best manufacturers. They represent authoritative styles, modeled after the styles that have been most demanded this season. A sale that exceeds in SELECTIONS. Only your taste need limit you. The lines are so varied in styles, colors and materials—and they are so uniformly right and desirable—that there is not the slightest doubt of your finding garments to please you.

EASTER MILLINERY: AN OCCASION

HATS JUST OUT OF THEIR BANDBOXES

—Paris has spoken her final word about Easter fashions. Three times this season Fashion has changed her course. We waited until the present to see the latest ideas of Paris. Then we made these hats. Women of fashion need wait no longer. The smartest hats are here. The Shepard Millinery Store is attracting unusual attention this season—it is so full of smart styles which other stores do not show, so many hats that are distinctive.

Second Floor

TRIMMED HATS VALUES $10.00 AND $12.50 — $7.50

THE ECONOMIES OF THIS SALE ARE REAL

THAT IS WHY IT IS ONE OF THE GREAT SALES OF THE YEAR.

—You hear much talk about economy; it's an interesting subject; it pays to be clever on it.

—Economy isn't buying cheap stuff because it is low priced; nor paying a big price for good merchandise because it's good.

—The Shepard Stores, with their high standards of quality and great merchandising organization, have procured for this sale real economies—merchandise of excellent quality in the wanted styles.

COLORED WASH GOODS WHITE GOODS

—Women with visions of smart summer frocks can have twice as many as they expected by taking advantage of the matchlessly low prices of this sale. Once started, annual events like this at the Shepard Stores have a habit of growing larger and better. We have outdone ourselves in value-giving, every piece of goods is bright and new as the morning. Quantitiesare large—but how long will they last?

$1.50 WOVEN BROCADED RATINE SILK AND COTTON 59c

—We want to say right here that this is the greatest value in Wash Goods we have ever offered the buyers of Boston. A silk and cotton Brocaded Ratine, 80% silk—a new fabric for dresses, coats and suits. Every desirable shade to be found among them; also two-tone effects. These handsome new wash fabrics we purchased direct from the manufacturer in the gray cloth, and they were dyed according to our order, in the new shades. They are sold everywhere at $1.50 a yard—in some places at $2.50 a yard. (36 inches wide.)

25c SCOTCH ZEPHYR GINGHAM, 12½c

—Fine quality Scotch Zephyr Ginghams, 32 inches wide—plaids, stripes and checks. Large range of patterns for dresses and children's wear.

17c WHITE WINDSOR PLISSE CREPE, 11c

—This is the best standard quality Plisse Crepe, 30 inches wide. Used for house dresses and fine undergarments. Always sold at 17c yard.

$1.00 BROCADED CREPE DE CHINE, SILK AND COTTON YARD 39c

—The newest and prettiest wash fabrics for evening and street gowns that is shown this season; 40 inches wide. White and colored grounds, brocaded in self colors. Handsomely printed with Colonial and floral designs. This fabric, manufactured and generally sold at $1.00 a yard; looks all silk.

25c WHITE DRESS POPLINS, 19c YARD

—Plain Colored Crepe, with silk-finished yarn, forming a novel stripe effect—ideal for exquisite, cool, becoming wash dresses. All the new shades, 28 inches wide.

15c PRINTED PLISSE CREPE, 10c YARD

—Handsome new printings on white sheer crepe, called Plisse Crepe. Both white and colored grounds—Colonial and floral designs, also stripes.

25c EMBROIDERED TISSUES, 9c YARD

—Such a low price is caused by our having only about 60 pieces. They are all black and white checks, with a small embroidered design woven in. If we had a line of colors the price would be 25c a yard.

12½c STANDARD PERCALES, 8c YARD

—Notwithstanding the advance in percales during the past six months, we are able to sell the standard makes of Percales, 36 inches wide—at 8c a yard. Light grounds, striped and figured.

19,600 YARDS 25c "NEW CREPE," 12½c YD.

—A sort of Crepe Ratine, linen finish, 28 inches wide, in 20 different shades. This cloth is sold by every retailer in New England under another name at 25c a yard. Women will snap it up for new summer dresses, coats and suits.
—We would say this is one of the largest purchases ever made by us in wash goods. You only need to see the fabric to understand why we expect to sell so much.

25c JAPANESE CREPES, 12½c YARD

White and colored grounds, with fancy colored stripes. Other countries have tried to make crepes like these, but so far haven't succeeded in making them so peculiarly soft and durable. Used for women's kimonos, blouses and dresses, and men's shirts and pajamas. (27 inches wide.)

19c COTTON FOULARDS, 28-INCH, 9c YARD

—Light and dark grounds, mostly cadets and navy blues, with small printings—all regular silk patterns. Very desirable for house or street dresses. Manufactured to retail at 19c yard.

17c AMEER CLOTH, WHITE GOODS, 11c YARD

—Pure White SILK-FINISHED NAINSOOK, 40 inches wide, for fine underwear. We consider this the best cloth we have ever offered at this price in white goods.

25c PRINTED CREPES AND VOILES, 12½c

—40-Inch Printed Voiles and Crepes, white grounds, small printings; Colonial designs and floral patterns. Summer weaves of rare beauty, price considered.

LONG CLOTHS AND NAINSOOKS
AN OPPORTUNITY THAT IS RARE

—We have been buying Long Cloths and Nainsooks for the past year in anticipation of this once-a-year sale. We offer them at less prices than at any other time. It is an unusual achievement to make such prices on goods that are always in demand at regular prices. We advise our customers to fill both present and future wants. Qualities are exactly the same as those we sell at regular prices—you do not have to be on your guard at the Shepard Stores.

—Sold by the piece only—12 yards. Dealers will not be supplied.

Tremont Street. Shepard Norwell Company Temple Place

Winter Street.

SAVING TENS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS TO OUR PATRONS

—The values are the result of months of planning. The whole Shepard organization is keyed to the highest pitch. We have bought in great quantities where very low prices could be had, and have persuaded the best manufacturers to work with us.

—It will be a week of positively unparalleled value-giving in every part of this great establishment. Those who have seen and marveled and bought in past years can partly appreciate the dynamic force behind this sale—yet this sale will be much larger than those of the past. Many lots will be exhausted the first day, but new lots will take their place. You will find almost a thousand extra employes here to serve you quickly and pleasantly.

—Page after page of Shepard advertising in today's American tell the story only in part. It involves only new merchandise of high quality—no inferior goods ever allowed. So vast is this merchandise movement, that a single little item often tells of a value that many stores would display across half a page. Every line is full of meaning and tells of something extraordinary. If every page of today's paper were devoted to the sale, we could not tell the story in full. The sale begins at 8:30 a. m. You will be here, of course

OUR LINEN SALE IS UNIQUE

(1) ONE OF THE TWO GREAT SALES OF THE YEAR.
(2) ONLY PURE FLAX LINENS.

—You have come to know it, to understand it, to profit by it. You know how we do it—how we go to the makers months in advance to get ready for this event, how we get price concessions and take advantage of special opportunities. We get only reliable linens—in great quantities—and the best values of the year. We have taxed our great buying organization to its utmost, put manufacturers on their mettle, obtained values to inspire our salespeople and enrich our customers. Everything is new. Thousands will read the news with intense interest—we expect to break all sales records. (LINEN STORE, FOURTH FLOOR.)

IMPORTANT TO KNOW

—Exaggeration of value, exaggeration in any form, does not pay. We could state that our sales are the largest in the world, but we do not do so in our advertisements.
—This policy has won and holds the confidence of thousands.
—The reason for the great success of our April and October sales is that no one is brought to this store through false promises.
—On the other hand, numbers of our customers express a keen delight at finding everything as expected

FOR CHILDREN

SPECIAL NOTICE

—Our thoroughgoing reputation is not a one-day event. It is based on continuous, unvarying service. All lots advertised will be limited, but hundreds and hundreds will get served. Many lots will be exhausted the first hour, but the store is filled with new lots to take their place.

DIFFERENT

—It is not our custom to sell only what every other store sells. It is the store that does an old thing better or a new thing well that prospers beyond the average.

—For our Thoroughfare Celebration Sale we lower the prices only. Not our standards. We do not copy the styles in interior qualities—some stores do. That's why there are so many sales.

IN THIS AGE of misrepresentation and newspaper exaggeration, the merchant who is content to tell but the simple truth about the goods he sells must eventually win both the golden opinion and the loyal patronage of the people.

We are experts in merchandising, select only merchandise of worthy character, and find it unnecessary to picture our goods in extravagant phraseology. Bear this in mind.

How Our Celebrities Can Make a Living in the Movies

By T. E. Powers, the Famous Cartoonist.

Here's Bally-hoo Hillier,

Genial Jester at Barnum and Bailey's Circus---Have a Laugh with Him, Gents

Copyright 1914 by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

NOW if you will-kindly lend me your ears for a moment I will fill them free of charge with a few words concerning the world's greatest assortment of marvelous monstrosities.

In the first cell we have Madame Maxine, the reptile enchantress, who is so entrancingly beautiful that we say, her the snake charmer do looks. Notice particularly her jungle green hair. While training the freaks before the opening of the circus Maxine dyed her hair a dulcet pink so she could face these horrible monsters in the pink of condition.

The snakes were so annoyed at the color that they refused to tango. They wouldn't even touch their breakfast of live mice and cream. According ly, Maxine payed another color, and the green so harmonized with the snakes' old home in the jungles of China that they wriggled for joy.

In the next cage is the fat boy. He gave up his job as a model for taxicabs to join the Greatest Show on Earth. He's the biggest thing that ever came from Chicago. Happy Jack Wilson—that's all—and quite sufficient. He's a famous favorite with the ladies, and if the suffragettes had their way they would put Woodrow out of the White House and roll Jack in.

Jack eats only seven pounds of bear meat at each meal, and he takes a bath in a tea-cup full of water, which comes up to his neck in the tub. Seven hundred and eighty-five pounds of humanity rolled into one human being! Think of it, ladies and gen-tell-men—and you'll see what makes the hippopotamus jealous. Monsieur Wilson's ambition to attain the weight of one thousand pounds, we shall furnish him with a trumpet and trombone to allow him to join the elephant act.

Now we come to Eddie Mas[illegible]ge living skull and bones. Eddie weighs no more than a good-sized flea. Don't breathe so hard, as you might blow him over and he'd break. He [illegible] the six o'clock A great many people have taken [illegible]g for a watch charm, while one lady wanted [illegible]st night for a hairpin. After Eddie has taken [illegible]th he's afraid to pull the plug out. He was [illegible]g to go into the Metropolitan Museum the other [illegible] with his girl when the attendants at the mu[illegible]ped them and said, "Ladies you'll have to check [illegible]t umbrella outside!"

Senorita Marl, on the next [illegible] is the greatest armless woman in this or any [illegible] world. She was born in the famous soap factory town of Castile, Spain. Hence her insatiable appetite for suds. She drinks five scuttles per day. The Senorita does absolutely everything with her feet, with the possible exception of manicuring her finger nails.

Jim Tarver is the greatest Giant that never played baseball. He stands eight feet eight inches in his holeproof feet. Yesterday he stood outside the Metropolitan Tower, reached up and turned the hand of the big clock back half an hour. As a result, thousands of commuters stayed in town and saw the circus last night.

Next Fall Jim is going to college. He's going to be the Yale Football team. At this talking, odds on the Yale-Harvard game are 10 to 1 on Yale. He can run the length of the field with the whole team hanging on to him.

Cherrie Davis, the fattest woman alive or dead, tips the Fairbanks at nine hundred pounds, from tip to tip. She measures nineteen feet around the waist. Ten men can make love to her at once—yes, and they've done it, too), and no one of them will get wise that the other nine are among those present. Any one who is inclined to dispute these figures may step up on the platform and attempt to lift Cherrie. She can never be put in a cocktail. For exercise she gallops through Central Park every morning at daybreak on the back of our strongest elephant.

I will next direct your honorable attention to Andrew Sturtz, the world's champeen tattooed boy. We use him for our map. If you will examine his person closely you will see that he has the route of the circus across the country tattooed on himself from head to toe. Andrew thinks this is a skin game. He also claims that he is the origin of the moving picture idea.

Madame Clifford, next, is our famous sword swallower. She eats a dish of stewed needles and three pairs of shears for breakfast every morning, buss saw pancakes for lunch, and a wonderful salad, composed of hairpins and razors, for dinner. Madame claims that Turkish swords are the best for sore throats. She doesn't know why, but they always chase the pain away harem-skarem.

Observe Captain Jack Barrett and his son, Herbert. Smallest father and son in existence. The Captain is thirty-nine inches high, and, strangely enough, thirty-nine years old, to say nothing of the fact that he weighs exactly thirty-nine pounds. Little Herbert is twenty-one inches high, and you can see for yourself that his age and weight are the same.

They arrived last week by parcel post to join the circus. Herbert is looking for a wife. Oh, you needn't laugh. Twenty-three years ago they laughed at his father for doing the same thing.

At the next post is Zip, the oldest living freak in captivity, the original celebrated Barnum's "What Is It?" He is now sixty-five years old, and has been on exhibition over fifty years. Zip speaks nine languages. The only trouble is, he speaks them all at once. At night he climbs into the trees with the monkeys, hangs by one toe, and sleeps, with never any danger of falling out of bed.

I hope you can all see Princess Wee Wee. Some of you near-sighted ladies should have brought magnifying glasses. The Princess is the smallest speck of humanity that ever lived. She stands on a silver dollar and puts her hand in a thimble.

At the next gate the gentleman will show you the way to Barnum's Giant Egress.

Mutterzolb and Son

By D. Darby Aaronson

"To Kill Somebody Is Such a Pleasure to Gen. Villagz and President Hurtem, Just Like if They Would Make a Deposit in the Bank."

Copyright 1914 by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

"SAY, Mister," commanded Mutterzolb, "you just tell that little loafer who brings me my news-papers not to leave me any more papers because it's a swindle. Every day he brings me a paper it's the same thing—rot. If I read once about how England don't want pay America for the tools they used to make the Panama Canal read it maybe fifty times.

"And that ain't the only thing what's the same. Every time I give look in the paper right away I see it's General Villagzer or President Hurtem from Mexicow, killing somebody or shooting them dead.

"That's murders for you. To kill somebody dead is such a pleasure for them just like if they would make a deposit in the bank. But wait, the end from such a murders will never be the end. You'll see yet how they get catched and be hanged good in the electric chair.

"What's a wonder to me is why them fellers over there ain't got sense enough to get together and hire such a great detective like Burnstein. He give them murders a catch in one two.

"But it's a shame really that President Bryan or Wilsner should allow such a murders to go on just because they don't want to interfere with that Doctor Monroe. Who is he that they should care so much for him. Say, already he gives them for nothing free visits when they are sick. Is that a reason way they should allow people to be killed?

"Believe me, when Herrschill Meersuchky told me to my face that I that I done wrong when I voted for Wilsner instead of the Socialist Lab Day Ticket, he was right, because we would had now a Socialist President who wouldn't let such murders go on.

"To tell you the truth, the reason why I voted for that Wilsner was because he said that he would make everything free. Of course when he first went into the President business I was a little disappointed, but I thought to myself wait, you got to give the feller a chance, maybe it takes a little time to work this out, and I had only the biggest confidences in him that he would live up to his word.

"Sure enough I give a look in the paper one day and it said wool is free, so I said to myself, he's commencing already, and quick, like one, two, I right away sent for my woolen man and give him an order ten times so big like any other time, and the next day, when I got a bill for it I was so surprised you could knocked me down on a feather.

"But if it ain't Wilsner swindling me it's somebody else trying to swindle me. Levine, the furrier, next door to me, got two tickets from Bauman and Bullick Circus, for letting their theater sign hang in his window, and I told that sign was sticking out in my window. So I told that Levine he must give me one of them tickets, but that crook didn't want to give it to me.

"Say, I am too much a gentleman to fight mit him over a common ticket, so I told him that I am going to notify the Building Department about that sign, and he knows that he ain't allowed to have a sign there, so mit the ticket he gave me I took along your little brother Irving, and don't you think when I came there the loafer who takes tickets said I must have for Irving a ticket, too?

"I told him Irving is only a young child and a sickly boy, too. He said that he can't help all that, and only children [illegible] could go in mit out a ticket. So I picked up Irving in my arms and started to go in when that feller gives me a grab right away and says [illegible] I can't pull that kind of stuff around there.

"He was maybe drunk or crazy, because I wasn't pulling no stuff at all. Just then everybody commenced to holler that a big elephant is running out and in the excitement the crowds knocked and pushed me and Irving all around. We didn't know where we was.

"I look around, and we're inside and the ticket maybe from the fright, was stuck fast in my hands. So yesterday momma and your little sister Rosie went there mit it. They ain't through talking yet what a great show it is.

"You ought to see what's going on inside. First we saw a little man and so small was he that if he was [illegible] you couldn't see him. He goes around mit a watch and chain on [illegible] like a real person. What's a wonder to me is how his father or mother let's such a feller [illegible] go around a watch and chain mit him because anybody at all could take it away from him.

"Then we saw a giant. My, what a terrible big fellow he is. I bet you a feller like that if I would have working for me I would never have any strikes.

"The next thing I saw was something I'll never forget so long as I live because I was so surprised. You know when I first seen him on it I could swear it was Abe Schwartz, my presser. And what you think was it? A lady mit a beard. Say that must be some kind of a swindle, because how does a lady come to whiskers? Well, maybe it's just masquerade ball to make the people laugh, but I couldn't laugh at it.

"Whatever little pleasure I was having already Irving was taking away from me. He kept on bothering me all the time I should buy him a bag peanuts, and say, if I see already a show once in a while what I am enjoying, you think I like to be bothered like that? So I had to take out from my pocket that little strap and show it to him, then I was quiet.

"We saw there what you call Giraffs, and are they got [illegible] At least two stories high. What great watch does they would make. At they would have to do is pass in the street and look right in the shop to see if any thieves is there.

"And we saw tiger horses by the name Zebras; and Reindeer goswitts That's a funny animal for you. His teeth is on his nose.

"Then we saw a Hippopotomustard. It's a wonder to me they ain't got a watchman there to watch him because that big fool goes in the water where he could get drowned.

"And we saw a lady throwing peanuts to lions. That's crazy for you How is lions who eats up people in pieces going to bother mit such a little think like peanuts. I bet you when she went away the lions laughed at her.

"Then we saw Carmels. I heard a feller say that this Carmels could go seven days mitout drinking. Well, say, what benefit is that to anybody, water don't cost anything.

"And we saw a Kangaroon, and I felt so sorry for the poor feller. He was born a cripple. On his front feet he had no legs.

"After this we went inside where they make theater, and when we went to sit down the sent watchman sold we can't sit down unless we give him coupons, so I told Irving to look in his pockets maybe he's got some. I know he's always gambling for coupons mit the loafers but just my luck he had them all home, so we had to stand up.

"You know they give theatre in three places on one time. That's smart fellers for you, that Bauman and Bullick they know that the people can't see the whole show at once so they make them come three times. Well, this is already business. I couldn't even watch one act from because there was such a crowds there I had all I could do to watch [illegible] tickets."

Here's What Jack London Saw When He Went to a Modern Burlesque Show

THEATRICAL times have certainly changed since I remember, not so long ago, that burlesque was a vague memory of my wild and silly youth, when one went, as to a stag party, to see things that one would not care for his womankind to see. The audience was quite wholly male. Of course there were the low comedians—two Dutchmen, or two Hebrews, or an Irishman and a Dutchman, impossibly made up, with grotesque and repulsive facial decoration, with red noses, green whiskers and bright wigs. And of course their dialogue explained the absence of women in the audience.

Then there was the soubrette, a bleached blonde, with a nasty voice, whose tinselled skirts were an short as her knowledge of grammar, and as atrocious as her pronunciation. And the "prima donna"—a fat woman rather run down, who quite casually breathed in the middle of a word, and who just as casually permitted her voice to quarrel with the key, and with all the keys.

And the chorus! Ten or twelve women, ungainly fat, whom the manager, with unerring taste, had selected to charm the gods that constituted the audience. Surely, one had to be very young or exceedingly stupid to be charmed by such choruses. The entertainment was void of originality, consisting of bits from the Bowery varieties, vulgar and hideous. The "couch" dance was worse, won the applause, supstick and knock-down-and-drag-out aroused the heartiest laughter. The only truly interesting events in such entertainments were when the police pulled the house.

A few nights ago, while dining with my friend Judge Aaron J. Levy, the judge suggested witnessing a performance. I knew from the advertisements in the daily newspapers that this was a burlesque house, and I wondered at such a proposal from my dignified companion, but when I expressed my surprise the judge said, "Why, you won't see a cleaner or better show in town."

So for the first time in many years I found myself en route to a "burlesque" show. I felt like a naughty boy, but I was relying on the judge.

At the entrance I was struck by its perfect resemblance to other high-class theatre in the neighborhood, and, passing into the lobby, I observed the treasurer in the box office window, arrayed in evening clothes and serving the well-dressed people in a long line that extended far up the street with the politeness of the well bred man that he evidently was. Our tickets were taken by a clean-cut man in a neat, well-fitting uniform, and when we entered the floor a dapper director, also in uniform, politely turned us over to a polite and span usher, who conducted us to our seats. Settling comfortably in my seat I observed that the theatre was handsomely decorated, with [illegible] marble columns supporting the balconies, and orchestra chairs of the most approved modern make.

I had begun to think that the judge had played a trick on us, but glancing at the program that idea was dispelled by the announcement that the show was being given by Bert Baker and His Ben Tons Company, presenting a two-act burlesque in five scenes, called "My Wife's Husbands." It was burlesque, all right, but there remained absolutely no semblance of the things that I had seen years ago that masqueraded under the appellation of burlesque.

The scenery was massive and finely painted, and the stage, which was set to represent the interior of a fashionable hotel lobby, was furnished with huge leather lounges with gold chairs all around, while spread upon the floor were great rugs such as one would see in any perfectly appointed lobby. I had to look at the program again.

The stage was full of exceedingly pretty girls, beautifully costumed, and moving gracefully about, singing lively tunes of the popular sort, with voices clear in tone, and of evident cultivation. The principal comedian was an artist of the first rank, and kept the audience in constant roars of laughter. I have never heard such hearty, unrestrained laughter in any theatre in my life. Then came the soubrette, a remarkably agile young woman, beautiful of face and figure, and possessing a sweet singing voice and dancing skill—and then the leading woman.

Here was where the surprise at this "burlesque" performance reached the limit. She was a young woman of remarkable beauty and poise, gowned in the latest "creations" and wearing them "to the manner born." Her voice was of remarkable range and sweetness, and she sang with manifest cultivation.

For two hours I sat admiring the show and marveling at the great transformation that has taken place in burlesque since the old days when, as a boy out for a frolic, I gave up the little old dime for a seat in the gallery to "see the girls."

Incidental to the burlesque there were specialties rendered by clever acrobats; a couple of young women did the Apache and the Barbary Coast dances as well as I had ever seen them, and Mr. Baker himself contributed as meritorious a monologue as one could wish to hear in the very highest class vaudeville theatre.

The whole scheme of present-day burlesque impressed me greatly. From first to last there was not an objectionable word uttered nor the slightest approach to vulgarity in action or glance. Burlesque as we used to know it, seems to have passed away, and in its place there has risen up a form of amusement to which men and women may go without the slightest misgiving.

It was a new one on me. Thanks, judge.

WHEN IT HAPPENED.

AMONG those who recently appeared before a Chicago police magistrate was a big, powerful [illegible] who preferred against her husband [illegible] assault and battery. The accused was so small that he could hardly stand. It was, therefore, with some doubt that the magistrate surveyed the couple.

"Do you mean to tell me," he demanded, "that this man beat you?"

"He did not—but he knocked me down."

"What! You were knocked down by this puny, [illegible]?"

"Excuse me, Your Honor," said the woman, "but it's only since he struck me that he's been a physical wreck."

WHAT THE PRINTER WANTED.

A COMPOSITOR on a newspaper in Des Moines eloped with the daughter of a wealthy man of that place. He soon became aware that the irate father was on the trail of himself and his bride to be. Accordingly he was obliged to whip up the horse he had engaged for the elopement in order to keep a desirable distance between himself and his pursuer. When the elopers reached their destination, a town about twenty minutes from Des Moines, the compositor figured that he could spare five minutes for the wedding ceremony.

The couple rushed into the pastor's study, hastily asked his services, and took their places before him. To the printer, the clergyman evinced a distressing deliberateness. The groom asked him to hurry.

"Don't you want the complete service?" asked the divine.

"No, sir," was the bridegroom's reply, as he thought of the old man in pursuit. "Just cut it down to a [illegible]all!"

D'ORSAY WAS CURIOUS.

At the Lambs' club they tell this one on Lawrence D'Orsay of "Earl of Pawtucket" fame.

It appears that D'Orsay had a friend who owned a country place in upper Maine, ten miles from a railway station or telegraph office, a fact of which it is suspected, D'Orsay was aware.

The British actor often to visit this friend in Maine, whom he always found a lavish and hospitable host, and who time and again advised D'Orsay that there was always a room at the place in Maine ready for him whenever he cared to occupy it.

On one occasion D'Orsay cabled from London to ask whether he might stay over the last two Sundays in September. The Maine man had to hark over his column to the messenger who brought this message, and also a like sum to defray the cost of the cablegram in reply, which read: "Of course, but don't cable."

Whereupon D'Orsay, ingenuously or otherwise, cabled this q[illegible] "Why not?"

Stumped.

"CHILDREN," said the teacher to his pupils, "you should be able to do anything equally well with either hand. With a little practice you will find it just as easy to do anything with one hand as it is with the other."

"It is?" inquired the urchin at the foot of the class. "Let's see you put your left hand in the right hand pocket of your trousers."

How It Was.

"IS your wife going away this Summer?"

"No—I'm sending her."

What Is Life Without Love—

THE MORNING SMILE

WEX JONES Editor

And What Is Bacon Without Eggs?

Vol. III. No. 17

Chance for Young Men

Position as Editor in Paris Affords Much Excitement.

YOUNG men desiring a Job that will give them plenty of excitement should not overlook the advantages of being editor of a paper in Paris (that dear France).

Positively no editing required.

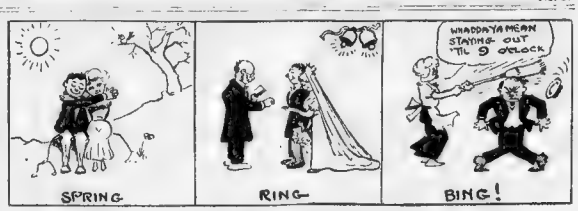
Here is the diary of M. Henri Foupeon, editor of the Petit Begorra. Just one day is given, as the others are all about the same.

7 a. m.—Wounded the director of the Theatre Saveloy in the arm This will teach him that the editor of the Begorra has a sword as well as a dramatic critic

8 a. m.—M. Brochette sent his seconds to me to demand satisfaction for a reference to him in the Begorra. In course of an article I mentioned that M. Brochette wore a blue tie. He says blue is the color of the sea and that my remark was intended to imply that he was all at sea politically. Chose pistols.

9. a. m.—Stream of challenges pouring in as public is reading this morning's paper.

Husband of actress demands reparation because we printed her picture in last year's hat.



A Brief Illustrated Spring Poem.

Poet challenged me on account of a typographical error in his "Rondeau to a Wren."

Lady called to see me and fired six shots at me from an automatic pistol. Fortunately they all missed, as she held the pistol pointing up in the air. As she had run out of ammunition, she left after making an appointment for to-morrow afternoon. It appears she believes erroneously, as it happens), that I intend publishing a letter she once wrote her cousin. The letter, it appears, begins, "Dear Little Cabbage" and winds up, "Thy Little Starfish."

Minister of Marine challenged me because we printed a long news story of two lines about one of our battleships scraping a rock

Minister of War challenged because we mentioned that he would run for parliament. Says a soldier of France doesn't know how to run.

Brother of girl arrested for poisoning a family of six challenges me because we referred to the prisoner as a blonde, when she is really more of a brunette.

I see that I shall have a busy day to-morrow

My Lieutenant advises me that a lady armed with a repeating rifle is in the outer office and desires to see me. He begs me for the sake of the Begorra to make some excuse But a gallant son of France cannot refuse a lady anything I place a flower in my buttonhole. I open the door—

[NOTE—The diary is broken off here, as M Boupeon was wounded in the arm by the lady, who suspected that the Begorra was about to publish a photograph of her in an unbecoming costume. Also developed that the lady who had pointed the automatic pistol at the ceiling had shot the toes off six or seven more or less innocent compositors who were working in the room above.]

OUR WEEKLY HEALTH HINT.

Don't settle in Ulster.

Notes for the Spring.

Orchids should be grown in a specially built orchid house, but asters need not be grown in the Astor House.

If you want to avoid being annoyed by flies in your house, keep them outside.

It is usually warmer in Spring than it is in Greenland, but on the other hand, Winter is frequently colder than Brazil.

The Hope Fishing Club is beginning to get Spring fever and may do a little fishing when the weather gets warmer. Can't fish in cold weather.

Flowers are excellent things for decorating a garden.

To make a hot-house, turn on the steam heat.

Signs of the Times

WHEN YOU SEE—

A woman walking along the avenue taking perfectly natural strides, it is a sign she is wearing a skirt entirely out of style

A man who says the world owes him a living and wants someone else to collect it for him, it is a sign he's an ardent I. W. W. member

A woman who is perfectly satisfied with her husband's income, it is a sign she has softening of the brain.

A boy with muddy knees, it is a sign Spring training of the Hometown League has begun.

A woman fluttering around to make life absolutely pleasant for her husband, it is a sign she has already got her eye on what she wants to wear over her hair on Easter.

A lot of news about trouble in Mexico, it is a sign the Secretary of State is not at all interested.

A story about a philanthropist spending his own money, it is a sign you cannot believe all you read

A letter to you from the secretary of your church these days, it is a sign you can never tell until you read it whether it is a notice of a foreign missions collection or a tango party in the parish house.

A bicycle act in vaudeville, it is a sign the management couldn't get anything else that week to take its place

An average exhibit in a drug store window, it is a sign the purity squad ought to get busy.

A woman get on a street car these days, it is a sign you ought to be thankful you are not blue

A luscious salad before you, it is a sign it may be that your lady friend is resting her head on the table and is wearing a green wig.

A man scowling every warm sunshiny day, it is a sign he's a coal dealer.

A young woman feel of her back hair, it is a sign she wants to make sure she has left nothing at home.

A lot of boards being repainted and relettered, it is a sign sporting editors are having scoreboards remade with the Federal League in view.

A Royal Dirge

By W. O. McGEEHAN.

(It is reported that King George is blooming bald. This ought to be duck soup for the new portiaureate, but he seems to be loafing on the job.)

THE British tales are dark with grief,
And London seems one heavy sob,
And flags droop low. The royal locks
Are falling from the royal nob.

Who cares if Bank of England shares
Should take a sudden downflop,
When like a blooming billiard ball,
All hairless is the royal top?

What matters if the suffragettes,
With tins of nasty kerosene,
Should blow the House of Lords sky high,
When barren is the royal bean?

What matters if the Ulster men
Should tear their hair and fret and foam?
There's grief enough in Buckingham,
For raked is the royal dome.

What matters if the fierce High Cost
Should for e the royal crown to soak?
Weep, Britons, for a sadder thing,
Denuded is the royal koke.

Let dirges play, let grief hold sway,
While hot and fast the teardrops fall,
His nch, his bean, his dome, his koke,
Is barren as a billiard ball.

Spring

BALMY Spring will soon be with us, likewise the pussy willer; and we'll hustle to the drug store to procure some sarsaparilla. For with Spring there comes a feeling, over everybody stealing, that with trouble they are dealing, and the pace they live's a killer.

In the Spring the young man's fancy turns to haberdasher wear; and the maidens o'er their raiment take on lots of extra cares; for with Spring comes renovating, anxious days for dresses waiting, and the cash goes aviating while Popper fumes and swears.

In the Spring the trees get busy and put on a verdant hue; and the flowers bud and blossom, for they've nothing else to do. There are books in every mail box that is sure to fail, 'tis the same old Spring-time tale that has landed me and you

In the Spring the corner cusser gets busy with his mitts, and he grinds up herbs and roodles and his shelves with bottles fills; then he waits for the procession, for he has a bunch (impression) that the world yearns for possession of our Spring-time liver pills.

Some Song Hits in "The Little Cafe" at the Colonial Theatre

I'll play you a tune that swings
And ends with a great big crash!
Rise up and extend your wings,
Don't prowl like a sick Apache!
Rise up on your toes and crow!
Rise up on your toes and dance!
Hola! Will you let it go?
And not as they do in France!
Come along, come along, get awake with me
Let your hearts and your hands and your limbs go free
And dance—and prance!
As they dance and prance in Hungary

Just because it's you,
That's why my heart beats strong!
Just because it's you,
That's why for love I long!
Just because it's you,
Life would be like a song,
Lived with you, just because it's you!

Today to the Little Cafe
Adolph and I
Will bid good-by
We're on our way, oh he, oh he!
To revelry gay, hooray, hooray!
We'd stay, but a whoop-diddy-ay,
Adolph and I
Have got to try.
And so we say oh he, oh he!
You Little Cafe good day!

I wonder whom I'll marry!
Will he be dark or fair?
I wonder what's the name I'll take in place of Philbert.
Though doubtful whom I'll marry,
I'm very sure I'll be Particularly careful of the man who marries me.

Here and There What Should She Have Done?

A Scene from the Dramatic Success "TODAY"

NO CHARGE FOR INFORMATION.

HE was a stranger in the town and arrived on a late train. The cigar stand in the little hotel was locked for the night, so he went out on the street where he found an idler leaning against a post.

"Can you tell me," asked the stranger, "where I can get a cigar in this town at this time of night?"

"Why, sure!" exclaimed the citizen, straightening up. "I know where you can get two cigars."

NO ANSWER TO THAT.

IT was the annual convention of a women's organization in a Western State. The Panama Canal was under discussion. A lady from the sagebrush lands attracted the [illegible] attention.

"What I want to know is," she questioned breezily, "why, when the climate is so terrible [illegible] they ever go 'way down there to build the canal, anyhow?"

COMPETITION.

AN enterprising [illegible] florist in [illegible] read the heads, displayed this sign in [illegible] window:

"We give a [illegible] of flower seeds with every plant."

His competitor across the street promptly sought to meet the competition by placing in his window the following announcement:

"We give the earth with every plant."

TONSORIAL ART.

BARBER—Poor Jim has been sent to a lunatic asylum.

Victim (in chair)—Who's Jim?

"Jim is my two brother, sir. Jim has long been broodin' over the hard times, an' I [illegible] he finally [illegible]."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, he and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so close we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded a great deal. No money in it is business now."

"What's the [illegible]?"

"Prices too low. A customer takes a shampoo it doesn't pay to shave or haircut. [illegible] Jim, I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Make [illegible] I could only, I just let him slash all he wanted to. [illegible] shampoo, sir."

"Yes!"

LOSING FAITH.

OLD LADY—I don't believe there's [illegible] in it.

Friend—It's [illegible]

Old Lady—[illegible] I don't feel a bit better. I tell you [illegible] newspaper [illegible]

RAISED HIM.

A TENNESSEE mountaineer, not [illegible], went to town, and among other [illegible]. Not wanting to carry it about with him, he decided to leave it at a grocery store for a while.

Two hours later the mountaineer [illegible] was gone!

"Look here, Jim," he cried to the proprietor of the store, "do you know what became of [illegible]?"

"Sure," rejoined the [illegible] six of hearts and took it."

QUITE A PHENOMENON.

A WORKMAN, endeavoring to explain to one of his [illegible] remarked:

"It's [illegible]

"It's [illegible] a field of thistles grow."

"Yes," assented [illegible]

"Well, I [illegible]

"No, that's [illegible]

"But suppose you were to [illegible] away up in the sky."

"Yes."

"Well, that would not [illegible]

"No, that also [illegible]

"But imagine the [illegible]

"Yes," his friend [illegible]

"Even that would [illegible]

"No."

"But now, Bill, look here—suppose you saw that bale sitting on them thistles whistling like a lark—well that would be a phenomenon!"

FRED WAGNER, Head of an Extensive Business.
LILLY.....His Wife
HEINRICH and EMMA WAGNER, Fred's father and mother

LILLY—Fred, why have you deserted us?

FRED—I'm tired, dear, and I—I just came here to rest, till your guests had gone.

LILLY—That's not a very good excuse.

FRED—You don't understand—I'm not myself [illegible] night.

LILLY—You're not ill, Fred?

FRED—No, dear. But I'm worn out and if you will excuse me I'll—I'll go to my room.

LILLY (surprised)—Aren't you going to say good night to your guests?

FRED—Please give them my excuses.

LILLY—Fred, dear.

FRED—Please.

LILLY—Very well. But I don't like it a little bit. (Lily exits to dining room. Fred sits wearily. General leave taking in dining room. Voices: "Good night." "Don't forget the——" etc. "Good night, good night." Lilly re-enters.)

LILLY (displeased)—I don't think it was very nice of you.

FRED—I'm sure they understand.

LILLY (displeased)—I hope they did.

FRED—So don't be cross—please. (Lilly shows signs of relenting.) Please.

LILLY—Very well. This time.

FRED—Thank you, dear! And now—come and sit down with me. (Lilly goes and sits on his lap. He puts his arms about her. There is a pause.)

LILLY (anxiously)—What is the matter with you tonight?

FRED—I've had a [illegible] a dreadful day.

LILLY—I'm so sorry.

FRED (slowly)—You are sorry, aren't you?

LILLY—Of course I am. How can you ask such a thing?

FRED (pause)—My troubles are your troubles.

LILLY—Certainly! And if I could help you, I'd be only too glad to do it.

FRED—It [illegible] good to hear that.

LILLY (ankiously)—Fred!

FRED—And—you love me?

LILLY—Certainly I do. But I don't understand.

FRED—You know I love you better than anything in the world—that since we've been married my one thought has been to make you happy—to give you everything you could wish for.

LILLY—Yes, dear! But what is it? What—[illegible]

FRED—I can't tell you—yet.

LILLY—Fred!

FRED—Let us sit quietly like this—for a little while. Then I will tell you—everything.

LILLY—You frighten me, dear. You frighten me.

FRED—Quietly—for a little while.

LILLY—Fred!

FRED (closing his eyes)—Sh h h h! (There is a pause. Emma and Heinrich enter.)

LMMA (hesitatingly)—We have come—as we promised.

HEINRICH—We said we would.

LILLY (rises)—You asked them to come?

FRED—Yes. I have something very important to tell you all. (Pause.) Sit down here so that we may all be together. (Fred nerves himself to speak.) For a long time I have been considering whether or not I should tell you what I have been hiding against for the past year. Now I must tell you. (They all showed increased apprehension.) You must summon all your courage, for when you hear what I have to say to you——

LILLY—Fred, what has happened?

FRED—During the past two years as you know I have extended my operation considerably. I have wanted to give you, all, the best that I could, and I have worked day and night to do it. (Emma nods affirmatively.) Times have been desperately hard for over a year. Money has been very scarce, and the business one must have money. (There is a possibility of what is coming begins to dawn on Lilly.) I was over-extended. I'd been trying to do too much, and when things began to go against me I tried to draw in, but found that I couldn't. I had to go on—go ahead. And so I tried to fight it through. Although I've known for months how great the odds were against me, still there was always a chance that things might turn, and as I didn't want to alarm any of you without cause, I didn't say anything. Well—today it came! Everything is gone—everything, and I'm a bankrupt!

LILLY—A bankrupt!

FRED—Tomorrow everyone will know.

LILLY (in—oh! (There is a pause. Emma is the first to regain her composure. She goes to Fred, and speaks to [illegible] her tears.)

EMMA—And you have been bearing this so long all alone! My poor boy!

HEINRICH (with a break in his voice). It is a great pity to lose so much, but it is gone and it can't be helped, so we must do as he says. We must look the world in the face and be brave.

LILLY. And tomorrow everyone will know.

FRED (wiping his brow). For months I have been under a great strain—today has been the worst of all—but I am trying to pull myself together, and keep control of myself, and you must help me—all of you.

EMMA (feelingly). Of course, we will help you.

HEINRICH (feelingly). Sure we will! Such things happen all the time. People get up in the world, then they go down, then they start all over, and get up again. That's the way it will be with you. All you have to do is to keep your health and your strength.

FRED (cheered). You're right. With health and strength I am sure to get where I was before. But the one thing I must do now, before all others, is to come out of this with clean hands. I must keep my good name.

EMMA—A good name—that is everything.

FRED—I owe a great deal, but sooner or later I shall pay it all, every penny.

EMMA. That is right, my son.

FRED (with a sigh). First of all we must sell the house.

LILLY (pause)—Sell the house?

FRED—Yes, dear.

LILLY. Then where shall we live?

FRED—We'll find a nice, comfortable flat where we will live as carefully as we can till I get on my feet again.

LILLY (pause)—Live in a flat!

FRED. We must, dear! The house, the furniture and the car will all have to be sold.

LILLY—We must sell everything?

FRED—Yes, dear. To help my creditors I have got to raise all the cash that I possibly can.

LILLY. Sell everything? I didn't know it was as bad as that. (Lilly exits.)

FRED—Don't, please don't. It breaks my heart to see you cry. Heaven knows I'd have kept it from you if I could. (Fred comforts Lilly.)

EMMA (apart to Heinrich)—We will tell him about [illegible].

HEINRICH—Sure!

EMMA. Frederick—

FRED. Yes, mother—

EMMA. You say that you have to raise some cash?

FRED—Yes.

EMMA (seriously with feeling)—There is some[illegible] you do not know. Of the spending money you [illegible] Heinrich and me, we have saved—how much is it, Heinrich?

HEINRICH—Nearly eight hundred dollars.

EMMA—Now that is for you. You see, old-fashioned ways help some times and the old folks are some good after all.

FRED—Thank you, mother! Thank you! You, too, father!

HEINRICH—That is all right.

FRED—You must keep the money, though. I could not take it—it's yours.

EMMA—And isn't mine yours, too?

HEINRICH—And mine?

FRED—Not this time.

HEINRICH—Anyway, from now on I can go out and work for a living. From tomorrow nobody will be able to say, "Everybody works but father."

FRED—That's the spirit, dad. But you won't have to do it. I can still take care of us all.

EMMA—Of course, father will do it. We must all do our share now, and when we go to the flat you will see that my cooking does not give any of you the indigestion.

FRED—Bless your old heart!

HEINRICH—Of course, we'll be happy.

LILLY—Bankrupt! That is the last thing in the world I ever expected to happen to us.

FRED—It isn't going to be so hard as you think, dear. The first few months will be the dark ones, but they'll soon pass away. Why, things are brighter for me already. My father and mother have shown me that they love me and are willing to help me—and you'll love me and try to help me, too, won't you?

LILLY (through her tears)—Yes, of course.

FRED—Then don't you see what a good start I have? I have my health and my strength, and the same brain and my love for you, and my parents, who were even willing to give up their little savings for me, and you're ready to help me if you can, you're ready to——(There is a pause.) You can help me. Help me a great deal.

LILLY—How? (Slowly Fred points to her necklace, Lilly covers her neck with her hands and steps away.)

LILLY—My pearls!

FRED (pauses, pained)—I'm in trouble, dear.

LILLY—But they're mine. They're mine. (Slowly [illegible]ated, with her hand on her jewels, looking at Fred.)

EMMA—But it will help him.

HEINRICH—And he will get you others.

(A long pause.)

FRED [illegible] I see.

(They all look at Lilly. There is a pause. Lilly sobs hysterically, saying, "They're mine, they're mine!")

Doesn't Spare Her Feelings.

"NOW, Tommy," reprimanded his mother, "don't let me catch you throwing any more stones."

"Well, what will I do when the other fellers throw 'em?" asked Tommy.

"Just come and tell me," his mother replied.

"Tell you!" he exclaimed in astonishment. "Why, you couldn't hit the broad side of a barn!"

Not for Him.

"WHAT kind of meat have you this morning?" asked the husband of the butcher.

"The best steak we have ever had, sir," replied the butcher. "Here you are, sir, as smooth as velvet and as tender as a woman's heart."

The husband looked up and said:

"I'm a vegetarian."

Not Strange at All.

MRS. WHEELER'S family and the new baby were being freely discussed by their next-door neighbor.

"Isn't it [illegible] strange they didn't name the baby after her rich uncle?" said one.

"No, he looked at it, and said he'd give them fifteen thousand dollars not to."

How Johnny Did His Duty.

"IT is the duty of every one to make at least one person happy during the week," said a Sunday school teacher. "Now have you done so, Johnny?"

"Yes," said Johnny promptly.

"That's right. What did you do?"

"I went to see my aunt, and she was happy when I went home."

"Standing By" the Butcher.

"HOW is it," inquired a young bride of a married friend, "that you always manage to have such delicious [illegible]?"

"It's very simple," said the older woman. "I just select a good, honest butcher, and then I stand by him."

"You mean that you give him all of your [illegible]?"

"No, I mean that I stand by him while he is cutting the meat."

Wondered What It Was.

MR. BROWN had just registered and was about to turn away when the clerk asked:

"Beg pardon, but what is your name?"

"Name!" echoed the indignant guest. "Don't you see my signature there on the register?"

"I do," returned the clerk, calmly. "That is what aroused my curiosity."

Have You Heard These?

What Caused the Coolness.

"THAT Mrs. Wilbur is so angry she won't speak to me," complained Mabel to Ethel.

"Really!" exclaimed Ethel. "And what is she angry about?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," said Mabel. "We met a couple of days ago, and we were talking as friendly as possible, when suddenly she flared up, and she hasn't noticed me since."

"What were you talking about?" inquired Ethel.

"Why, nothing in particular," explained Mabel. "Just the ordinary small talk. I remember she said, 'I always kiss my husband three or four times every day.'"

"And what did you say?" asked Ethel, in an effort to get at the root of the trouble.

"Why, I said," replied the other, "'I know at least a dozen girls who do the same,' and then she nearly had a fit."

A Matter of Revision.

LUNCHER—Look here, waiter, I'm very sorry, but I've only just sufficient money with me to pay the bill, and nothing left for a tip for you.

WAITER (confidently)—Would you mind just letting me have another look at the bill, sir?

Willing Messenger.

MRS. SUBURBS (to tramp)—Out of work, are you? Then you're just in time. I've a cord of wood to be cut up and I was just going to send for a man to do it.

TRAMP—That so, mum? Where does he live? I'll go and get him.

RED SOX IN INGLORIOUS 4 TO 1 DEFEAT AT COLUMBUS

Carrigan's Barnstormers Meet a Shock When They Tackle the American Association; Boston-ians Get Two Measly Hits

Duffy Lewis Drives in the One Solitary Tally That Is Made by the Bean-Eaters; Tris Speaker Out of the Game

By JACK CONWAY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4.—Bill Carrigan's brave band of barnstormers ran against a snag here today and will down to an inglorious defeat by the Columbus Club of the American Association by the count of 4 to 1.

In order to prove to the Red Sox that all the star pitchers in captivity are not drawing down their salaries in the big leagues, Leo Cvengros, Columbus hurler, only allowed the Red Sox two scattered hits.

A young [illegible] Cooke started in the box for the locals and passed [illegible] to first base, but after that he retired the side in order. In the second inning Speaker was the only player to get to first, reaching the initial sack on a safe bingle to left.

Shortly after the game started the rain began to fall in torrents, and every body connected with the game made preparations to leave the field. Manager Carrigan, however, decided to play ball in spite of the weather, and the game was finished in a downpour.

Cvengros was the only Columbus pitcher who was effective against the Red Sox, and he was relieved in the seventh inning by Bentley, who was batted for a total of three hits.

Speaker, Lewis and Hooper were the only Red Sox players who were able to connect with the ball for safe hits, and Speaker was the only one of the trio to get to second base.

Columbus scored in the first inning on a single by Bentley, a sacrifice by Hale and a single by Lewis.

The Columbus team was unable to get a man to first base in the second inning, but in the third Bentley walked and Lewis sacrificed him to second. Bentley scored on Hale's single to left field.

Columbus added another run in the fifth inning on a single by Bentley, a sacrifice by Hale and a single by Lewis.

The Columbus team was unable to get a man to first base in the sixth inning, but in the seventh Bentley walked and Lewis sacrificed him to second. Bentley scored on Hale's single to left field.

Columbus added another run in the eighth inning on a single by Bentley, a sacrifice by Hale and a single by Lewis.

The Columbus team was unable to get a man to first base in the ninth inning, but in the tenth Bentley walked and Lewis sacrificed him to second. Bentley scored on Hale's single to left field.

Columbus added another run in the eleventh inning on a single by Bentley, a sacrifice by Hale and a single by Lewis.

FEDERALS ATTACK THE RESERVE CLAUSE IN U. S. COURT HEARING

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 4.—The attack on the National League baseball reserve clause was started in the United States Circuit Court here this afternoon when counsel for Joseph Tinker, manager of the Chicago Federals, and Harry Lumley, a player on the club, asked for a temporary injunction restraining the Detroit baseball club from interfering with the contracts of the two players. Judge Arthur C. Denison, who is hearing the case, reserved decision.

Counsel for the players argued that the baseball reserve clause was illegal, and that the Federal League was organized under the Sherman anti-trust law. Counsel for the baseball clubs argued that baseball is not interstate commerce, and that the Federal League is not a legal organization.

Judge Denison said that the case involved the most important baseball question that has been raised in the courts, and that he would take a week or ten days to consider the matter.

COACH HAUGHTON GIVES HARVARD'S 1914 FOOTBALL CANDIDATES SPRING WORK

SUNDAY AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

PRESIDENT LANNIN'S OWN STORY OF HOW THE RED SOX WILL BE MADE UP IN 1914

FOOTBALL MEN RUSH TO HELP 'H' TRACK TEAM

Capt. Brickley, Storer, Hardwick and O'Brien Practically Certain of Places on Squad.

A GOOD MILE-RELAY TEAM

Brickley, Storer, Hardwick and O'Brien are a rather classy quartet of football stars. Now the four are scattered with no time available, all out to make names for themselves in track athletics. Unless all signs fail they will do it this spring.

The accession of the four to the squad was the result of an impressioned plea by Capts. Barrett and Coach Donovan, who realized that Harvard's chances in the big Intercollegiate meet on the 30th will depend largely upon the third and fourth men in the mile relay. Last year Harvard's quartet was composed of Hardwick, Storer, Brickley and Ellis, and the four finished in the order named, Hardwick leading Storer by a few yards, Brickley by a little more and Ellis by a still greater margin. Hardwick ran the first quarter in 52 seconds, Storer in 53, Brickley in 54 and Ellis in 55. Hardwick, Storer and Brickley are all veterans, but Ellis, who ran a splendid race in the Yale meet last November, was not entered in that event in the intercollegiates and therefore is not debarred by the 1913 rule.

MAKE GOOD FROM START.

The arrival of these four husky recruits, while it relieved [illegible] the task of the track coach, did not [illegible] to relieve him entirely of worry, as he has several candidates who [illegible] to make the team, but who [illegible] to be developed. Two of these men, Hardwick and Storer, have already proved themselves point winners in the Big Five meets, and are daily showing form of the same sort. Brickley, the star of the football season, has been working hard with the weights and in the cage, and is rounding into shape rapidly. Both are counted on to score points in the hurdles, and Brickley is a formidable candidate for the high jump. The weight men, Ellis and Hardwick, are developing beyond all theirs or season. Like the broad jumpers, they are showing form that will be a big help to the team when the time comes.

BRICKLEY FORMER JUMPER.

Brickley was a star in the broad jump and high jump in his sophomore year, and was picked to win both events in the Big Five meet at Cambridge. He was forced to withdraw from the meet, however, because of illness, and Storer won the high jump. Brickley has not been working at that, but Coach Ned Wharton is counting on Storer to repeat the performance of last year. Storer has also been showing good form in the low hurdles, and is a point winner. Brickley has changed [illegible] To begin with, the big fellow is not using the cleated shoes that he wore in the football season, but is using a pair of the lightest track shoes he has ever worn. Like the broad jumpers, he is developing beyond all theirs or season. Like the broad jumpers, he is developing form that will be a big help to the team when the time comes. He is very much pleased with his progress in different events.

All of which accounts for the manner in which Coach Wharton is looking forward to the Big Five meet with confidence. Should some misfortune suddenly stop Storer in the high hurdles, Brickley, Hardwick or Ellis would be entered in the event, and should Brickley suddenly stop tossing the shot-put and weights and start to run the high hurdles, Storer, Hardwick or Ellis would be entered in the former's place. Should Hardwick, another sturdy, go to wheezing point in the mile, Coach Wharton has another mile relay team in the making that could be sent on to the track in a hurry.

Though Coach Wharton will not say so, he is of the opinion that the quartet mile relay team would be the strongest representation of the big Penn relay carnival, April 25. The rapid development of the squad has been a delight to Wharton, and he has [illegible] expectations are fulfilled [illegible] a team that will carry the Harvard colors [illegible]

MILERS GOING GOOD.

Yesterday, for the first time, the quartet sent his mile runners through their first real workout against the watch. They did a quarter in fine time, and then, after a short rest, another quarter. Hardwick, Storer, Morris and Ellis [illegible] mile. Ellis [illegible] Hardwick [illegible] Storer [illegible] Morris [illegible]

WALTER CAMP SAYS GOULD IS THE GREATEST TENNIS WONDER OF THE WORLD

By WALTER CAMP.

When this column stated that Jay Gould was the tennis wonder of the world, it was not without [illegible] a plater [illegible] product of [illegible] careful systematic coaching begun [illegible] a definite plan and [illegible] brought to [illegible]

The [illegible] posted in defeating Covey, the professional champion, of [illegible] Englishman who brought [illegible] to American athletic [illegible] Covey succeeded [illegible] and that in almost [illegible] sporting [illegible] finally conceded.

[illegible] has been decided, temporarily, at least, for [illegible] the Covey distinction over on [illegible]

"GREATEST THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN."

[illegible] said no excuse to [illegible] He said I [illegible] beaten by [illegible] Mr Gould is the greatest tennis player the world [illegible]

[illegible] Now the Lotton who rapped Covey as a prodigy [illegible] Gould [illegible] or ever will be greater [illegible] player Dan Mr Gould [illegible]

[illegible] said "Gould's victory was [illegible] of those rare instances [illegible] an amateur proved himself better at a game than a [illegible] professional. It is doubtful whether there ever has been a better court tennis player in the history of the game than the young [illegible] Baltimorean.

GOULD'S GREAT RECORD.

Jay Gould is now twenty years old, but since he was a youngster in knickerbockers he has been playing court tennis. A competent tutor was engaged [illegible] the young Baltimorean when he was only seventeen years old to [illegible] defeated [illegible] in 1906, who was one of the leading players in the world [illegible] of Johns Hopkins, he defeated Dewitt Clinton Crane for the United States [illegible] amateur championship. Gould then began taking on the [illegible] and [illegible]

In [illegible] he [illegible] over to England [illegible] Eustace H. Miles, at that [illegible] most prominent English amateur. Miles, like those who [illegible] him, couldn't check the [illegible] of the hard hitting youngster. Writing of his defeat, Miles said that his backhand strokes [illegible] like a bobbing straw hat.

Young Gould [illegible] this country and defended his title against all comers. [illegible] years he took the measure of George Standing one of the great players the court game ever produced. To beat [illegible] Jay Gould challenged George F. Covey for the world title, and [illegible] stands as the highest pinnacle of the court tennis world.

Tom Hoyt, of Manchester said: "The most wonderful tennis match I have ever seen. I don't think any player that ever lived could have beaten Gould at the form he displayed against Covey. It is now my [illegible] that I could match my professional 'Punch' Fairs against [illegible]

It is also said in this connection that no [illegible] can be [illegible] Mr. Gould for a year, according to the terms of the [illegible] championship

JIM THORPE'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

[illegible] will be much interested in the work of the Indian, Thorpe [illegible] Manager McGraw of the Giants this year. It is reported that McGraw is working [illegible] as a regular in centre field down in Texas.

Thorpe [illegible] won both the all around championship in the Olympic Games, [illegible] Decathlon, and was the hero and idol of the American athletes [illegible] months.

[illegible] followed finally by the explosion of the [illegible] was discovered and admitted by Thorpe that [illegible] for playing baseball. I mention this not with [illegible] to [illegible] now in what spirit the public, but [illegible] Thorpe.

Thorpe [illegible] far from being a professional in [illegible] championship, Thorpe had done [illegible] any relation to his prowess in the event for [illegible] That is, had he been a man who made [illegible] the kind of athletic contest which developed [illegible] would have been entirely different, but [illegible] had taken some money for playing baseball, that [illegible] openly debar him from the contests by the [illegible] the Olympic committee is the authority for the statement [illegible] foreign nation was so sympathetic for Thorpe that [illegible] they proposed to take up a subscription, and had [illegible] present him with a trophy, which they were asked to [illegible]

[illegible] that the incident, far from having developed bad [illegible], has, owing to the promptness of [illegible] decision [illegible] American representatives in making restitution, been a means [illegible]

CANCER

March 12, 1914

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I take great pleasure in informing all Cancer sufferers of the wonderful cure of a cancer on my lip for two years, under Mrs. Dr. Augusta Solomon's treatment.

I will be pleased to answer any letters regarding my case.

Respectfully,

MR. CHARLES JOY,
44 Mansfield St., Everett, Mass.

Tumor and all malignant growths cured permanently by new method of absorption.

No pain. No blood. No knife. All cases are treated with equal success. Consultation Free. Hours from 10 to 5 daily.

NEW DISCOVERIES ALL OVER THE EARTH

Encouraging New Discoveries About SNAKES

By Leonard Keene Hirshberg,
A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins).

I[illegible] woods some fine Spring day [illegible]ake, your first impulse is to [illegible] you teaches that many serpents [illegible] link them and like a dog with [illegible] more sinned against than sinning [illegible] rective for the human race as well [illegible] ...t to shun snakes. As ancient man [illegible] ...d of venom a snake bite that he kept [illegible] ...d of snakes to prevent their victim [illegible] ...t a similar way to-day [illegible] ...makes [illegible] ...diphtheria antitoxin [illegible] ...e cause [illegible] ...million lives [illegible] ...are [illegible] ...ed [illegible] ...ll ever [illegible] ...the world. [illegible] ...de be [illegible] ...h a snake. [illegible] ...Had its fangs [illegible] ...t is quite [illegible] ...that [illegible] I have been saved by a num- [illegible] ...perfectly known in the [illegible] ...of the Department of Repp [illegible] ...United States [illegible] ...al Museum, has told out a [illegible] ...of snakes about him. For [illegible] ...exam e poison [illegible] ...fast that [illegible] ...ll ever [illegible] ...the world. Not [illegible] ...that the [illegible] ...by ann ialation at the hand of non-poisonous, harmless snakes.

In a stand-up fight between a harmless black snake and a whole nest of venomous rattlesnakes would not have a ghost of a show. A match between the cobra and the non-poisonous anaconda would mean the death of the cobra and [illegible] ...of it. The poisonous snakes [illegible] ...the rapid drain into extinction by the fatal [illegible] ...ness [illegible] ...the stronger calls the harmless snake.

The presumption [illegible] ...a snake [illegible] ...an irretrievable [illegible] ...ignorant [illegible] ...ighly educated people [illegible] ...ever [illegible] ...bite is not poisonous. [illegible] ...snake in question belongs [illegible] ...exactly contrary poison would probably be met with the statement that a serious case of poisoning had once resulted from a bite of this very kind of snake.

In spite of the fact that the accurate identification of snakes is extremely difficult, and that consequently the bite might have been caused by an utterly different kind of snake, the expert would not be in a position to contradict the accuracy of such a statement. He might, however, be able to recall quite a number of similar cases of poisoning resulting from the bites of animals [illegible] ...ostensibly non-poisonous in the accepted meaning of the word. He might quote Livingston's statement that the bite of [illegible] ...and other large felines is usually followed by [illegible] ...symptoms of poisoning and [illegible] ...to get mention cases of swelling and serious inflammation, perhaps even death, caused by the bites of rats, dogs, cats, cows, horses and even human beings.

Poisonous snakes are commonly considered those which are possessed of a moveable or constantly erect poison fang at the anterior end of the upper jaw bones. This, however, is only partly so.

It seems that the Dutch professor, Reinwardt, while in Java, was the first to discover that certain snakes dreaded by the inhabitants of that island as venomous are provided with long grooved fangs. He communicated this discovery to Dr. H. Bois in Leyden. The suspicion expressed by Dr. Reinwardt that this channel or groove [illegible] ...survey the [illegible] ...from a poison gland led to [illegible] ...important investigations, the first of which to be published was Dr. Hermann Schlegel's memoir on the salivary glands of the serpents with grooved teeth.

He came to the conclusion that [illegible] ...as he found the structure to be similar to that of other salivary glands, they could be no doubt [illegible] ...secrete "as fluid similar to the ordinary saliva," and that "the observations of travellers served to show," that the bites of snakes with grooved teeth produce no fatal results to man.

Evidently the first thing to ascertain about a bite is whether it is really that of a poisonous snake. If consisting of two isolated punctures, the wound is almost certain to be [illegible] ...nonsonous bite, and the distance between the two punctures will usually give a clue to the size of the [illegible] ...and consequently to the presumable degree of [illegible] ...ness. If the snake or its head is secured the [illegible] ...tion may be com- paratively easy, as all [illegible] ...snakes are readily recognized by the pit between [illegible] ...e and the nostril.

In very severe cases, in which the venom has been injected directly into the circulation, no matter by what kind of animal, the chances for recovery are slight indeed. The only chance in such cases seems to be to stimulate the nervous centers as speedily as possible. The best known means to [illegible] ...s the injection of large doses of strychnine, if necessary intravenously, until tetanic effects are obtained and the patient roused from the coma which has probably seized him. This result obtained, other stimulants or local remedies, as the case may require, can then be applied.

A similar treatment also seems advisable in cases of slow poisoning, in which the patient has already reached a stage of collapse. Even in such cases life can be rendered not more than twenty-four hours longer elapse before the [illegible] ...in which [illegible] ...of stricture seem to [illegible] ...

If in case of slow poisoning help can [illegible] ...administered very soon after the infliction of the wound, and the [illegible] ...locality of the bite [illegible] ...is [illegible] ...ligature, or better still, a dose of [illegible] ...permanganate of potash to the injured spot, can be [illegible] ...efficiently. Snake-a-pa [illegible] ...a tablespoonful, copperhead, or water moccasin. If the affection should at once be directed to the local sore unless [illegible] ...of the patient by rattle's downfall [illegible] ...in which case small doses of alcohol may be useful. A partially the best treatment of the local lesion is a 1 to 100 solution of corrosive acid injected into the [illegible] ...wound, the punctures of the fangs and into the surrounding swelling. The success of this treatment depends upon the chemical reaching and destroying the venom before it is absorbed into the circulation. Reading of the [illegible] ...surrounding the wound in order to bring the venom and chemical in close contact may be useful. If chromic acid is not at hand, chloride of gold or permanganate of potash may be substituted.

There does not seem to be any necessity for amputation in a case where hypodermic injection of any of these chemicals can be applied. It can only be recommended in extreme cases in which these remedies are not to be had. But even in this case the amputation must follow quickly or not at all.

The local sore having been attended to, the general systemic treatment may commence as by this time some of the venom has probably already entered the circulation. It being necessary occasionally to loosen the ligatures for a moment to prevent [illegible] ...Alcohol in small doses and washing out of the stomach may now be in order, as well as the [illegible] ...sudorific and diuretic remedies previously mentioned, jaborandi. Hypodermic injections of 15 to 20 minims of liquid strychnian repeated every [illegible] ...slight tetanic spasms appear seem to be necessary. Constant watching for relapses and attention to the local lesion will do the rest.

In the case [illegible] ...children the amount of the alcohol remedy to be [illegible] ...restered must not be judged by the age of the child, but by the amount of venom to be counteracted and the kind of snake that did the bite. Of the pit vipers or cobra snakes the [illegible] ...amounts most dangerous, the copperhead [illegible] ...and the water moccasin the least so.

As for [illegible] ...preliminary treatment before medical assistance [illegible] ...be obtained but little can be added to the old methods employed. First tie a strong ligature or two, a strap or handkerchief, between the wound and the heart. Next, cut deeply into the punctures so as to make the blood flow freely, and suck the blood from the wound. The latter procedure is perfectly harmless [illegible] ...even the person doing it has an open wound in the mouth.

The next thing in order is a careful loosening of the ligatures so as to admit a small quantity of fresh blood in order to prevent mortification. Give small doses of some alcoholic liquor at frequent intervals. If alcohol is not at hand and a stimulant appears imperative a small dose of ammonia might be given, but only temporarily after [illegible] ...in a later stage ammonia will certainly do harm, at least in cases of poisoning by rattlesnake, copperhead or water moccasin. While waiting for the doctor try to keep the patient in a profuse perspiration.

There may occasionally be cases in which amputation and cauterization by heat or otherwise would be the only available remedies but as a rule such barbaric treatment need not be resorted to.

It has been long known that poisonous snakes are proof against their own venom. Big doses of snake venom have repeatedly been inoculated into the bodies of the producers themselves without effect. In cases of "suicides" of rattlesnakes there has never been any conclusive proof that death resulted from a self inflicted bite. It is also well known that a number of the so-called harmless snakes remain unaffected, whether bitten by a venomous snake or inoculated in the laboratory with enormous doses of the venom.

Guinea pigs were recently injected with the blood of the viper. They died within two hours under the control [illegible] ...which showed [illegible] ...poisoning. An examination of the viper blood showed it to be insoluble [illegible] ...was concluded that there exists in the blood of [illegible] ...some agent similar to the venom [illegible] ...that it exerts its [illegible] ...on internal secretion of the glands, and that the presence of this toxic principle in the [illegible] ...is the true cause of the viper's immunity from its own venom.

The next step was to examine the blood [illegible] ...of harmless, non-poisonous, harmless snakes. Guinea pigs injected [illegible] ...with this showed all the symptoms of viper bite [illegible] ...and died. This proves that the blood in the [illegible] ...contains an internal secretion of the glands, and that the presence of this toxic principle in the [illegible] ...is the true cause of the viper's immunity from its own venom.

WIDESPREAD comment on the Christian countries of the element of chance in marriage has created the new "Lloyd's" of marriage is a gamble." Human frailty the swindling of the [illegible] tion and of foresight by [illegible] brations, unforeseen [illegible] all menace the matrimonial [illegible] is in fact a gamble. Life [illegible] ever offered [illegible] greater [illegible] fling of [illegible]

An [illegible] plan for insuring [illegible] the greatest of [illegible] posed this [illegible] New York. Not [illegible] wise enough to [illegible] wall and [illegible] for the [illegible] wave. That problem [illegible] more. But an organization [illegible] ceeding to [illegible] dering the [illegible] offer you, on your wedding day, to [illegible] fore an immunity policy [illegible] make your marriage [illegible] itself gamble on the risk.

It enables a man as he [illegible] blushing bride to the altar to [illegible] comfortable that if things [illegible] out right he has behind [illegible] concern which will keep him from going to jail for not paying his alimony, while the happy bride can be [illegible] in the conviction that if he does turn out right the same concern will provide her with the means of war to make him regret it and also provide her with the alimony he won't or can't pay.

To the objection that such a proceeding is destructive of the responsible the promoters answer that it is to remove that puts the bar in marriage and that it is the plain intention of the plan to substitute a little wisdom business foresight.

To the objection that it is immoral in that it affords protection against certain consequences of breaking the marriage vow, and so, in theory, encourages such violations, the promoters point to similar insurance taken out by physicians, dentists and automobilists. The doctor will take out a policy which insures him against the financial consequences of malpractice or carelessness such as the killing of a patient; the dentist takes out insurance against the consequences of pulling the wrong tooth or breaking the jaw or infecting the patient; the automobilist in the same way takes out insurance that puts the cost of the thing when he smashes another machine or runs over a child-driven man the insuring company.

These are acknowledged and "legitimate" risks. It might be argued that the doctor's and dentist's policy puts a premium on inefficiency and stupidity in that if either knew the damages must come out of their own pockets they would be more careful. And the automobilist would not drive so recklessly if he knew that damages would come out of his pocket instead of the rich company's. But the alimony insurance men point out that they are at least in no such way not distinguished from any other risks, they say, anything which will keep a man from the criminal absurdity of going to prison because he can't pay a debt, or help along a poor deserted wife, has much better morals in it than the cases of the professional men and autoists.

Furthermore, whatever profits accrue to the concern will not be used for dividends, as in the case of the insurance companies. They will be used, instead, to promote uniform divorce legislation throughout the United States.

Mr. Mimbeau L. Towns, the distinguished New York attorney, is the founder of the relief measure, which came into being at the time of the handsome and romantic actor, Conway Tearle, was cast into Ludlow Street Jail, that New York dungeon for debtors and matrimonial delinquents.

"Five men who have married and suffered sympathized with Mr. Tearle," said Mr. Towns, who has curling white hair, a luxuriant beard the color of snow, flashing dark eyes and the gait of poetic imagery. "They are all men of high standing socially and in the professions or business. One is rated as the owner [illegible] millions. A Remarkable Photograph of One of the Monster 16-Inch Guns That Will Guard the Canal. This Gun Is Now at the Sandy Hook Testing Grounds. It Will Be Sent Away in a Ship Specially Reinforced to Bear Its Weight.

Diagram Showing the Enormous Carrying Power of the 16-Inch Guns Which Will Fortify the Panama Canal. These Guns Will Shoot a 2,400-Pound Projectile 23 Miles. This Is Equivalent to Shooting an Ordinary Four-Seat Automobile from the Battery, at One End of New York City, to Yonkers, at the Other End.

The Monster Cannons That Guard the Canal; Things That Make It a World's Eighth Wonder.

THE plans to protect the Panama Canal, the most gigantic engineering achievement in history, include the installation of the biggest guns in the world.

One of these giant weapons, of which there will be six in all, is now at the Sandy Hook proving grounds, but will shortly be transported to its permanent destination. The guns will be mounted on modern disappearing carriages on one of the small islands off the Pacific entrance to the waterway.

These guns have a sixteen-inch bore and will throw a [illegible] projectile a distance of [illegible] miles—a feat equal to shooting an ordinary four-seated [illegible] from the Battery in New York to Yonkers.

With a single shot, any one of these guns will sink any vessel afloat. Such a shot would penetrate twenty inches of Krupp steel and then explode. The guns will about 29,926 feet into the air—higher than any aviator could fly and five. They will be mounted on special device carriages which permit of a sixty degree elevation. Heretofore, forty-five degrees was the greatest elevation obtainable, and effective defense against aeroplane attack was a question. It will take 576 pounds of smokeless powder, with a charge of 150 pounds of [illegible] to fire a shot from these guns. The shell will travel half a mile a second and have energy of 90,000 tons.

The task of transferring the giant [illegible] from their temporary [illegible] their destined [illegible] weight one [illegible] installed will be the one now at Sandy Hook. Plans have already been made for the transfer.

One of the largest derricks ever [illegible] will raise it from its base and place it [illegible] The [illegible] will be transferred to the deck of a lighter which will be towed to the [illegible] Navy Yard, where there are cranes [illegible] a free [illegible] terminus of the Panama Railroad, Colon.

The gun will be securely lashed to the deck during this ocean voyage. If stormy weather be encountered during the trip and the giant war piece were to break loose, its destruction of the vessel would be almost inevitable. Certainly it would be out of the question to attempt to capture the rolling monster.

But if the gun reaches South America safely it will be carried across the continent on another specially-built flat car drawn by a giant locomotive. A steam crane will be used to mount it on its concrete carriage, which will cost in the neighborhood of $125,000. This carriage operates to elevate the gun's muzzle over a parapet to fire a shot and then lowers the gun out of sight until ready to deliver the next blow.

In addition to the sixteen-inch guns, there will be a number of fourteen-inch and twelve-inch weapons, as well as a multitude of guns of smaller calibre.

But equally marvellous are the mammoth locks whose construction has made the canal possible.

Considered merely as structures of concrete and leaving their mechanical perfection out of the question entirely, these masses of masonry are unique. Five million cubic yards of concrete are contained in them. In no other structure ever erected by the hand of man has so much material entered.

The locks are made necessary, it may be explained, because the topography of the isthmus made it impracticable to cut the ditch from ocean to ocean at sea-level.

A vessel entering the canal from the Atlantic Ocean will proceed for seven miles at sea-level. It will then be raised eighty-five feet by means of the Gatun lock-system to reach the level of the Gatun Lake. Through the Gatun Lake the vessel will proceed for twenty-three miles to the commencement of the Culebra Cut. Then for nine miles further, still at an eighty-five foot level, until it comes to the Pedro Miguel Lock, which will lower it thirty feet to the small Miraflores artificial lake. This lake is one and a half miles long and carries the vessel to the Miraflores Lock, which lowers the vessel fifty-five feet to the sea-level channel, which will carry it for eight miles into the Pacific Ocean.

The three locks are each built in duplicate to provide against emergencies.

The total height of eighty-five feet provided for by the Gatun Lock is accomplished in three flights of approximately twenty-eight feet each. Each lock is 110 feet wide and 1,000 feet long. It consists of a floor 400 feet by 3,800 feet in area, twenty feet thick and two side walls, each fifty feet thick at the base and tapering to eight feet thick at the top. There is a dividing wall sixty feet thick. The inner faces of the sides of the locks are vertical, but the outer faces are stepped, the greatest thickness being at the base, where the lateral pressure of the water is greatest. Through the base of these walls extending longitudinally extend huge culverts or conduits from eighteen to twenty-two feet in diameter, large enough to accommodate a giant locomotive.

Through these culverts the locks are filled and emptied.

The series of steel gates used at either end of these locks and operated by wonderful electrical devices weigh 1,624 tons a pair, and there are forty-six pairs of them, making a total of 56,000 tons of steel—more than enough to construct twenty miles of the finest double-track railroad, and more than was used in the construction of the Manhattan Bridge, which spans the East River, New York. These gates cost over $5,000,000.

Monster 270-ton floating cranes will be on hand to handle wrecks in the event of accidents at any point in the canal.

So perfectly is the operation of the lock-system regulated by the wonderfully ingenious electrical devices constructed by the engineers that the mere pressure of a button by a man who need not even watch the results of his work will swing the giant steel gates, let in or release the thousands of gallons of water which fill the lock and raise or lower a modern leviathan of the deep weighing 50,000 tons a distance of eighty-five feet, all in less than an hour!

Truly, in this titanic engineering feat all things are titanic.

Why There Can Be No "Marriage of the Oceans" Anywhere on the Isthmus.

ONE of the commonest and most popular expressions about the Panama Canal is that it will bring about "the marriage of the two oceans."

It is only right and reasonable to say that there will be no marriage between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. An enormous body of fresh water will lie between them, even [illegible] passing [illegible] the canal. The waters of the two oceans will not mingle. They will be strangers yet.

A man would not consider himself properly married if he had never been nearer to his wife than the opposite side of a lake 164 miles in extent. Clearly the popular figure [illegible] is a mistaken [illegible] at ban-

[illegible] body of water that makes a true marriage between Atlantic and Pacific oceans impossible is called Gatun Lake. This, indeed, is the pivotal [illegible] in the canal construction plan that was adopted after world-wide discussion. Gatun Lake raises ships to the height necessary to overcome the enormous difference between tides in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. It furnishes the flow of water necessary for the working of locks. It controls the waters of the turbulent Chagres River. Indeed, Gatun Lake is for many reasons one of the most interesting bodies of water in the world.

The lake is eighty-five feet above sea level and is fed by the waters of the Chagres River. In order to reach the lake from the Atlantic side a ship passes through three locks, each raising it about thirty feet. Then, after passing through the lake, the ship must descend through three similar locks in order to reach salt water on the Pacific side.

In order that the locks may be in constant use an immense supply of fresh water is necessary, as millions of gallons of water run out of the locks every time a ship passes through the canal. All this is supplied by Gatun Lake.

Should this reservoir of fresh water be inadequate, owing to the failure of the rainfall on the Pacific side, the working of the canal would be seriously affected. Additional locks of a smaller capacity have been constructed in order to save the amount of water let out when a vessel leaves the locks. A system of sluices has also been devised by which water can be passed from one lock to another.

Suppose a vessel is going toward Gatun Lake, when she enters the first lock a certain amount of fresh water passes into the lock in order to raise the vessel to the level of the next lock. The fresh water in the three locks is retained for the use of a vessel passing out. Then a large block of fresh water, measuring 1,000 feet by 110 feet in width, must be allowed to flow out into the sea approach. If the locks are constantly working the loss of water will be very considerable. The waters of the Chagres River will flow into both Atlantic and Pacific oceans, but the waters of the two oceans will not meet.

Another curious fact about the canal is that the Pacific end lies east of the Atlantic end. You can stand at Lake Gatun and watch the sun rise over the Atlantic Ocean. Thus our most fundamental ideas of geography are upset, for the Pacific is universally supposed to lie east of the Atlantic. The explanation is that the Isthmus of Panama runs nearly east and west instead of north and south. The canal traverses it from Colon on the north to Panama on the south in a general direction from northwest to southeast. The Pacific terminal is twenty-two miles east of the Atlantic entrance.

It has been planned to construct an enormous park around Gatun Lake, which it is believed will excel in attractiveness Niagara Falls. Here will be planted all the most interesting trees, plants, vines and flowers of the tropical zone. Immense aviaries to hold the brilliantly colored birds of the tropical regions will be constructed in the park.

The lake itself will be an aquarium and aquatic pleasure ground of a scale unrivalled in the whole world. The lakes and rivers of this region abound with most brilliant and peculiar fish and water animals. Specimens of all of them will be caught and placed in the lake.

Large glass-bottomed boats holding about fifty people each will be constructed for the benefit of visitors to the lake. With these it will be possible to view all the strange fish and reptiles, all the wonders of tropical water life going on beneath the lake.

The pleasure of sailing on Lake Gatun has already been offered to tourists and has been enjoyed very much. The experiment was made by order of Colonel Goethals.

Two old cement barges were lashed together and provided with awnings, seats and other conveniences for the accommodation of about 400 persons. Tourists desiring to make the trip were taken on the barge at Gatun Locks and the barge was towed the length of the lake, a distance of about twenty-eight miles.

Vegetation grows with extraordinary rapidity in this country. European critics have even suggested that the use of the canal will be stopped by rank vegetation growing up in the locks and in Gatun Lake. It is true that a body of water in which the current is not strong will become choked up in a few days. Islands of floating vegetation have appeared in Gatun Lake, although it has been in existence only a few months. But the foreign critics made their comments without reckoning on the efficiency and industry of the American engineers, who may be relied on to keep the weeds from growing under them or around them.

It will readily be seen, however, that [illegible] treasury opportunities for creating a beautiful park. The lake in the water is equally wonderful. Lizards and water snakes, as well as strange and beautifully colored fish, abound.

When the Panama Canal has become the greatest highway of ocean travel in the world, as it certainly will, the Canal Zone will be the stopping place for vast numbers of travellers from all countries. Persons travelling from Asia to Europe will disembark at the Canal in order to take some other ship to convey them to their destination.

The Canal Zone will then enjoy the advantages that have come to Egypt largely through the influence of the Suez Canal.

In order to take care of all these visitors it will be desirable to provide amusements and recreations on a large scale, and the Gatun Lake park will form the principal attraction of this kind.

Fortunately the Canal Zone is now, through the efforts of American physicians and scientists, the healthiest place in the world. Yellow fever, malaria, cholera and bubonic plague have been banished from it. The territory is now healthier than the City of New York.

Consequently there will be no danger for visitors in a prolonged stay here, and such attractions as the Gatun Lake park will make it very delightful.

The REAL Wonders of Our Panama Canal

New and Astonishing Facts About the Big Waterway---Guns That Can Fire an Automobile Half Across the Isthmus; Giant Geysers in the Locks---Col. Goethals's Message on the True Significance of the Continent Divider

By Colonel George W. Goethals,

Builder of the Panama Canal (In an Interview).

The Panama Canal is now open, and Government ships are constantly passing through. The Canal will be opened to the ships of the world as the slides are eliminated we are satisfied it will be perfectly safe. From present indications the Canal will be about July 1 of this year. My estimate was that the Canal would be opened for use January 1, 1915.

Henceforth Panama must be the great highway of commerce of the globe. The mighty stream of trade and travel between East and West, between Europe and Asia, must flow by way of America, rather than by way of Europe. America now occupies the same position with regard to world trade and world movements ancient Rome once did. All Americans of to-day should feel proud and thrilled to know that this achievement has been accomplished in their generation, and by a movement that has required the devoted labor of many men and the sacrifice of many brave American lives.

The picture of the 16-inch gun that is to be mounted on the fortifications of the Canal gives some idea of the powerful protection that will await any foreign power that might undertake to attack the Canal. It is contrary to the rules for an army officer to discuss numbers of guns or details concerning fortifications, but you can obtain from the congressional report on Canal fortifications how strong they are to be. You will probably be safe in saying that no hostile ship can live within the entrance of the Canal, even before it could get within range of the 16-inch guns, because with mathematical accuracy from secret emplacements and dropping their shells with a plunging fire on the decks of approaching vessels.

Even supposing that an enemy had effected a landing on the territory adjacent to the Canal Zone, the attack would be equally difficult. The locks are placed so that they are protected by the hills and topography from every fire, and the invader would be exposed to destruction before he could do any damage. I have pointed out in an official statement that the hundreds of miles of fever haunted swamp and wilderness adjacent to the zone, in which there is no subsistence for human beings constitutes an important defense to the Canal.

Great protection against any accidental or malicious damage of the Canal consists in its generous width, which varies from 1,000 to 500 feet through its total length of fifty miles. Experience shows that risks to ships in narrow waterways are material and important. In a channel as the original Suez Canal the delays and losses to commerce were great, and the danger to navigation considerable. Although the benefit of the widening of the Suez Canal is striking, this is true even now. The Panama Canal may not double the efficiency of our navy, but certainly increases it enormously.

Congress has so far appropriated $349,505,223 for the construction, of which $10,676,950 went for fortifications.

A fine photograph of the opening of the lock at Gatun shows will show your readers better than I can how the mechanical devices are operated. Every possible safety device has been provided. The locks have been built in duplicate, and a system has been installed by which the water in the locks will be controlled by powerful electric machinery on the lock walls, thus avoiding the danger of mistakes on the part of the vessel's crew or engine-room staff, which once led to an accident in the Manchester Ship Canal.

Much has been written concerning the probable effect of earthquakes on the Canal. The last earthquake of any importance occurred in the seventeenth century, and the buildings in Colon and Panama demonstrate clearly that no shock of any violence could have occurred during the eighteenth or nineteenth centuries. The solid concrete construction of the locks, strengthened by reinforcements, will be as proof against any earth shocks as any structure which man builds anywhere.

The public would doubtless be surprised at the speed and ease with which the great locks are opened and closed. Electric motors swing the lock gates, weighing many tons and as wide as a city lot, in the time of one minute and forty-eight seconds.

The slipping of the rock at the Gatun Dam has also been much exaggerated. It happened that one of the slips occurred at the time a flood in the Chagres River had attained such proportions as to cover a portion of the Panama Railroad tracks just south of Gatun. A newspaper correspondent going from Colon to Panama noticed this and attributed the flood to the dropping of the Gatun Dam into a subterranean lake, which I have shown not to exist.

The suggestion that Gatun Lake should be made the centre of a great park, with tropical botanical gardens, aviaries, aquariums and so forth sounds very attractive. The lake is 164 square miles in extent, and what a park you could lay out round it!

The lake is full of the most wonderful, brilliantly colored fish, and no doubt glass-bottomed boats could be sent out to give visitors a peep at them, as is done at Santa Catalina. The insects, as well as the birds down there, are remarkably interesting. I have been too busy with engineering matters to go into these plans, but they are worth the attention of experts who are ambitious to make the Canal Zone a pleasure resort. Who knows but that it may rival the French Riviera in this respect?

The Canal Zone to-day is one of the healthiest places in the world, although for four hundred years it was known as the most unhealthy.

The building of the Canal was made possible through the recent discovery of the means of combatting the most deadly tropical diseases—yellow fever, malaria and bubonic plague. In one case, that of yellow fever, United States army surgeons were the discoverers. In proving the cause and process of infection by the stegomyia mosquito Dr. Lazear and several of his colleagues sacrificed their lives.

In the cases of the other diseases our sanitary engineers were most prompt, thorough and ingenious in applying the new knowledge. The precaution of putting kerosene in old tin cans to prevent them from becoming breeding places for mosquitoes has now been adopted throughout the civilized world. Incidentally the building of our Canal the whole tropical belt of the earth has been made habitable by Americans and Europeans without danger.

But for this great progress in sanitation the building of the Canal would have been accompanied by such loss of life that it would have discouraged any nation.

Your HEART a Powerful ELECTRIC DYNAMO

THAT the human heart is actually a power-house, continually generating streams of electric force and sending them out to every part of the body, is a fact which science has just proved by a series of ingenious experiments.

The presence of electricity in the human body has long been known to biologists. They explained the fact on the theory being that all living tissue is in a chemical state of decay and continually taking part in

One result of these chemical processes is the formation of a quantity of electric force which is sent out in a great stream when a number of cells work together, as they do in the normal human body. Thanks to some remarkable instruments which have lately been invented, it is now possible to measure accurately the amount of electric energy in various organisms.

Every muscle when at work generates more or less electricity. The heart, being the most active

The New Way of Finding Out How Sick or Well You Are by Measuring the Electricity in Your Body

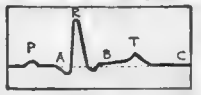
How the Electric Forces Radiate from the Heart, the Chief Streams Going to the Arms and Legs.

While this chief force proceeding from the heart radiates more or less evenly throughout the body, its chief streams pass to the arms and legs, as shown in the accompanying diagram. Every pulsation of the heart not only sends electricity through the arteries, but sends forth electric energy to the farthest extremities of the body. That this is true is proved by the tests of sensitive electric instruments so arranged as to register the electric force sent to them.

If the subject be seated with arms and legs in the electric receiving circuit of the instrument, the operator can easily see how the heart is sending out electric impulses, almost as if the heart were connected directly by wires with the arms and legs, so direct and immediate is the passage of the electric current.

The greatest impulse is given when the heart contracts, but there are steps in each contraction, as may be seen from one of the typical electro-cardiograms, as drawn by the sensitive needle of the electric registering apparatus.

The Record of Electric Force Generated by a Single Heart Beat. (P) Indicates the Impulse Given by the Contraction of the Lower Part of the Heart Muscles; (R) That Given by the Contraction of the Apex; (T) That Given by the Central Heart Chambers; (A, B and C) the Intervening Pauses.



This record shows three ascending curves, P, R and T, and three more or less even horizontal lines, A, B and C. The ascending curves show the stronger impulses from the heart, and the variation between them shows that there are not three such impulses in each heart-beat. The horizontal lines indicate the pauses between the impulses. A study of electric impulse

When the rhythm and character of the heart-beat is remembered, we can understand the meaning of these curves and lines. The first up-curve, P, is brought about by the contraction of the lower part of the heart-muscle. A indicates the pause which follows. Then comes the powerful contraction of the apex of the heart, indicated by R, B shows the ensuing pause, and the curve T indicates the contraction of the central parts of the

DOGS for SOLDIERS, SAILORS and POLICEMEN

WHEN the next great war breaks out dogs may be expected to play an important part in the campaigns on land and sea. In many parts of the world the value of dogs as soldiers, sailors [illegible] is recognized. Both results which indicate that [illegible] like animals aids in actual warfare.

The breeding and training of dogs for military, naval and police duty has become an important industry. Major Richardson, a retired British army officer, was the first man to appreciate a dog's remarkable protective and [illegible] of ascertaining power, and could be turned to account in a way never before dreamed of. From the extensive kennels which he established he is now shipping to all parts of the world large numbers of dogs of various breeds [illegible] have been carefully trained to guard [illegible] and property.

[illegible] customers was the Czar of [illegible] ordered two ambulance dogs. [illegible] Richardson sent two collies and these [illegible] of service throughout the war [illegible] Russia. These were the means of saving hundreds [illegible]

Another royal customer of his was the Queen [illegible] Spain, who ordered an ambulance bloodhound for service during the war in Morocco [illegible] Major Richardson had used collies [illegible] exclusively for ambulance work. But a bloodhound sent to Morocco proved able to endure the heat so much better than the collies [illegible] that it was being used almost exclusively for ambulances and police duty in [illegible]

[illegible] found the most efficient of all [illegible] which to trail and run the expense of upkeep make this breed out of the question in cases where large numbers of the animals are required

In his search for a satisfactory substitute for the expensive bloodhound, Major Richardson has hit upon the Airedale terrier as a dog which does first rate work both as a sentry and as a police dog. The Airedale is of a big, heavy type, with strongly developed protective instincts and excellent scenting and hearing powers. It is extremely hardy and can readily adapt itself to either great heat or cold.

During the past few years Airedales have been sent out to every continent in the world to act as aids to soldiers, sailors and policemen. One of these aggressive beasts sent to the Malay Peninsula recently distinguished himself by running down a murderer after having followed the scent through the jungle for hours.

SANDWICHES Are EXPENSIVE FOOD

WITH a view to seeing that our bodies get the best kind of nutrition science is weighing and measuring everything we eat—the lunches our children carry to school, the food we get at home and the meals served us at hotels, restaurants and quick-lunch counters. Hardly a day goes by that the diet experts do not advise us to eat our stomachs and pocketbooks would be better off if we ate less or some kind of food or abandoned it altogether.

Sandwiches are in demand wherever large amounts of sugar and alcohol are consumed. The latter lead to a lowering of the protein in the diet, which can be partly made up for by albuminous sandwich

Still another reason for the increased consumption of sandwiches is found in the growing tendency among many classes of the population to eat outside the home. The sandwich naturally gets a prominent place on the menu of the public eating house where economy of time in serving and eating food is an important consideration.

In a slice of bread 100 calories or heat units are [illegible] among the different food [illegible] as follows: Protein, 11; fat, [illegible]; carbohydrate, 86.

In the same amount of bread and butter the division is Protein, 6; fat, 58; carbohydrate, 37

The proportions in the ordinary meat sandwich are Protein, 15; fat, 53, and carbohydrate, 32.

But even though sandwiches did not contain an excess of animal food or did not by their concentrated form encourage us to ruin our digestions by eating fast, there is [illegible] another good reason [illegible] We should not make them a regular article of diet.

It has been calculated that 25 cents properly expended will buy in a public eating house 3,990 calories containing 100 grams protein. The same amount [illegible] Arches will buy only 1100 calories containing 20 grams—less than one-third as much.

Composition — subject Exercises.

Exercise is what ma and I get. Both physical and mental. I get the mental and ma gets the physical. The dictionary says exercise is corporeal or spiritual — violent, hurtful, pleasurable or healthful. I get all kinds. I know people who never get any mental or spiritual at all — their bodies are strong and supple and alert but their minds are so sluggish from lack of exercise that to think would hurt their brains like physical exercise hurts unused muscles. Make a quick demand on their intelligence and they look at you like a dead fish. a mental sparring match would make them as helpless as a prize fighter would a baby. Pize gets exercise worrying about me. I get exercise running away.

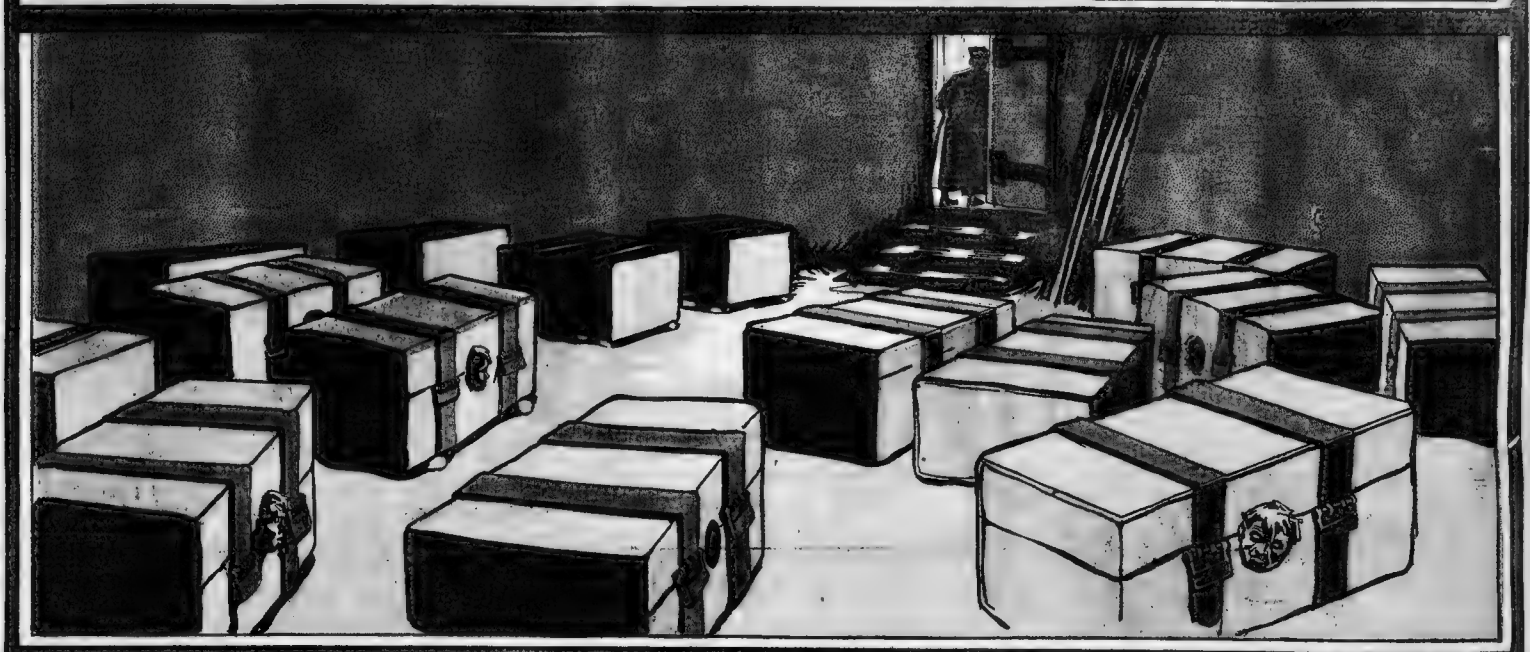
Here is Real Hell Upon Earth

Study These Shocking, Dreadful Pictures of Asiatic Torture, and Realize That Man, the Inventor of Hell, Has Known How to Inflict Suffering Upon His Fellows Hellish Indeed. No Need of a Hell Hereafter, but Rather Merciful Oblivion for Creatures as Base as Men Have Shown Themselves.



Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

THE pictures on this page show real life on this planet TO-DAY, and they show hell in its most horrible reality.

Men looking at these pictures shudder and can scarcely believe in the possibility of such horrid cruelty.

But these are actual pictures of punishment inflicted upon human beings in a dungeon at Urga in Mongolia.

The pictures were drawn by S. Begg, of the Illustrated London News, and show how human beings are locked up alive in small wooden coffins and kept there until they die.

We print these pictures AS PROOF OF PROGRESS.

And we describe to you the horrible torment inflicted on the miserable creatures locked up in these boxes by the cruel Mongolians, not to shock you, but to make you realize that the world in which you live is getting better.

To-day you must go to Asia, among the fiercest, most brutal savages, to find such torment as this.

A few years ago, you could have found tortures as great or worse in any "civilized" country.

To-day we look at these pictures and we ask ourselves: "Is it possible that even the lowest human beings could inflict this horrible torment deliberately upon miserable men?" and we can scarce believe it.

Yet a few years ago, even civilized men believed that God, himself all powerful, inflicted even worse tortures upon creatures that he had created AND MADE AS THEY WERE.

Study these pictures, read a brief description of the horror, and thank God and human progress that the horrible crimes of cruelty which all men once committed, and which they even attributed to God himself, are now confined to the vilest savages in the worst part of Asia.

You see in the big picture a dark stifling room in which, twice a day for a few moments, light and air are admitted by a single door.

Here is a description of the prison given by Mrs. Herbert T. Bulstrode, who witnessed the torture:

The Mongols have it in them to be diabolically cruel, and a more terrible fate than that which befalls the Mongol malefactor at Urga is difficult of conception. Within a small compound, fenced in by high spiked palisades, are five or six dungeons. There are human beings in those dungeons, and among them a number of highly civilized Chinese, imprisoned for political offenses, who are shut up for the remainder of their lives in heavy, iron-bound coffins, out of which they never, under any condition or for any purpose, move. They cannot sit upright; they cannot lie down flat; and they see daylight but for a few minutes when their food is thrust into their coffins twice in twenty-four hours. The sight of the hopeless misery of these prisoners made it easy to understand the light-heartedness with which three Mongol soldiers went to their execution a few days later on. It may be added that the only ventilation to the "coffins" is through the hole in the side, and that these holes are just large enough for a smallish Chinese head to be put through them, rather painfully and with difficulty. The Mongols, with their wider skulls, cannot put their heads through.

Think of that horror, that life of hopeless agony. These boxes are so small that the miserable prisoner cannot sit up or lie down in a natural position.

Unless his head be very small, he cannot look out of his death box. Twice in the day he puts out his pitiful manacled hands to take the food and water that prolong his suffering. He cleans the filth from his torture coffin when he must. And through the days and months, and, perhaps, even years, if he be unusually powerful, he lives in this agony.

We repeat that in these pictures there is the greatest proof of progress on this earth.

The coffin prison is found now only among Asiatic savages.

In the time of Louis XI., the greatest king that France had seen since Charlemagne, and one of the greatest and most useful that France ever knew, YOU COULD SEE SUCH TORTURE AS THIS.

It was a Christian bishop who invented for Louis XI. the prisoners' cage in which the prisoner could neither sit up nor lie down. And it was the Christian king Louis XI. who locked that same bishop in one of his own cages.

Within a hundred and fifty years nations calling themselves civilized have inflicted upon helpless men and women and children torture worse than you see in this picture—racking every nerve, burning the flesh, ripping and tearing the quivering body, sometimes in the name of God and religion, sometimes in the name of the criminal law.

Exult and rejoice as you look upon this page and realize what it means for progress and better life.

It is a wonderful thing for men to have progressed as they have.

Except among savages, this kind of punishment has ceased.

And what is even more important than the end of human torture by human beings is the changed attitude of the human race toward God the creator and ruler of the world; the change in our conception of an omnipotent being.

If you want to know where men stand intellectually, in civilization and in decency study their religions.

Remember that ancient and earnest religious teachers discussed the question, "Are the devils made happy by torturing human souls?" and it was solemnly decided, after proper debate, that undoubtedly the devils had been permitted by God to enjoy torturing souls, "else there would be no more inducement for them to stay in hell."

Think of human beings looking upon God in that way, imagining that He created devils to torture helpless human beings made imperfect by Himself. And that He permitted those devils to enjoy the sensation of torturing the poor wretches, in order that the devils might be induced to stay in hell and attend to their work.

And you need not go back to the old days of primitive, barbarous religious teaching, to the Middle Ages or earlier for such atrocities.

Almost in our own day, and in our own country, in July, 1744, Jonathan Edwards, a Puritan, delivered a sermon entitled "Wicked Men Useful in Their Destruction Only." He argued that men can be useful only in two ways—either in doing something good, or in being tortured in such a way as to make their torment useful.

You shudder as you see this picture; what do you think of your ancestors, the Puritans, who actually believed that men and women in Heaven would be made happier BY BEING PERMITTED TO LOOK UPON THE TORTURE OF MISERABLE BEINGS IN HELL?

Jonathan Edwards said:

"The destruction of the unfruitful is of use to give the saints a greater sense of their happiness and of God's grace to them. The wicked will be destroyed and tormented in the view of the saints and other inhabitants of Heaven.

"WHEN THE SAINTS IN HEAVEN SHALL LOOK UPON THE DAMNED IN HELL, IT WILL SERVE TO GIVE THEM A GREATER SENSE OF THEIR OWN HAPPINESS.

"When they shall look upon the damned and see their misery, how will Heaven ring with the praises of God's justice toward the wicked and his grace toward the saints."

Imagine that, if you can—the blessed, the good, the kind-hearted men and women, living in Heaven, looking upon miserable human beings—their own brothers and sisters, perhaps—tormented by the devils in hell, and then making "Heaven ring with the praises of God's justice."

We shudder at the thought that the vilest Mongolian savage can inflict upon his enemy the horror, the suffering that we see in this picture.

And we rejoice at the progress that has done away with such torment in civilized lands.

Rejoice even more at the fact that the race of human beings that once credited Divine Omnipotence with crimes and atrocities worse than those of the Mongolians have learned to take a higher view of God.

The human race does progress year by year. Only the vile, ignorant and brutal savages in the darkest part of Mongolia are capable of inflicting such horrible torment as this upon helpless prisoners.

Only the vile, brutal, darkest part of the human intellect is capable of attributing similar crimes and similar torture to the Power that rules throughout this universe. It was shameful for man to torment his kind, and infinitely more shameful to imagine a God MORE CRUEL AND WICKED THAN HIMSELF.

American Types by Rabajoi, the Parisian Caricaturist

Exclusive Impressions by the Audacious French Pencil Satirist, Who Also Explains How Lucky a Woman Is Just to Be an American.

By Rabajoi.
(In an interview.)

I COME from Paris, where we consider woman a fortunate being. I land in New York, and I am amazed

Woman is elevated to a position of incredible power and honor in America. Fortunate is the woman who is born in America. She should think every day of her good luck and thank her stars for it. She should not accept it too much as a matter of course

I believe now that the three happiest fates in the world are to be a man in France, a horse in England and a woman in America

The evidence of woman's good fortune and favored position are everywhere. All money is spent on her. All work is undertaken for her All amusements exist for her. I have made some sketches for you to illustrate these truths

I go to walk in Riverside Drive. A splendid park! A fine spectacle! Innumerable women in brilliant costumes, with tall colored feathers in their hats, fill the eye. Men dressed in sombre black and gray walk humbly beside them or behind them

I enter the tomb of General Grant. A magnificent monument, imposing in its simple solidity! A monument destined to last for ages; well worthy of a great national hero!

I learn that General Grant was the soldier who saved the United States from being dismembered. The monument, of course, is for ——

But there, beside him in the interior, is the tomb of Madame Grant, occupying the same space as her husband. I ask facetiously if she saved the country also. My American friends are puzzled at first. They explain to me that Madame Grant is there simply because she is his wife. It would be unthinkable in America not to pay the wife at least as much honor as her husband.

I do not believe that in France in any memorial to a great man we have ever mentioned his wife. In Paris we have a great building—once a church, the Panthéon—entirely devoted to memorials of famous men. In not one case is the wife mentioned. In fact, there are no women there.

We have devoted to Napoleon the greatest mausoleum ever set apart for a human being. There would be room for a hundred wives around him, but he lies there alone. There are special reasons why it might have been inappropriate to put a wife beside him, but in any case we cannot imagine it. I say to myself:

"Madame Napoleon occupying half the dome of the Invalides! That would be droll."

Our Parisian women are charming because of their desire to captivate men. Your New York women are charming because of their evident consciousness that they own the earth

The American woman is the spoiled child of civilization. I do not think she realizes how much is done for her. Is it really wise that such exceptional favor should be shown to one sex? The question is certainly worth considering

In France you will notice we have no trouble with the suffragettes such as they have in England; nor even the suffrage agitation which has a less shocking form shows itself in America.

Why is this? Because in France woman is entirely occupied in making herself pleasing to man. She regards that as her one pleasure. She lives in and for man. This, according to most of the older philosophers, is the natural relation of man and woman.

The result of this condition is that the French woman is busy and contented, while the man finds his pathway through life made smooth and pleasant for him. It is the duty of the French gentleman to be gallant and gracious to woman, but not to turn himself into an abject slave to her. The devotion of a hopeless slave is not that which is best for a woman, is not that which contributes most to her happiness

An English doctor has cleverly explained that the English suffragettes are behaving so peculiarly because they have not been able to find individual men on whom they could lavish their attentions. There are a great many more women than men in England, and even the men that they have do not show the responsiveness that is due those whom they should cherish and protect

The poor women are then forced to find an outlet for their natural emotions in violence. This is a state of affairs that could not arise in France. In America you avoid it because you do everything for the women.

I go to your theatres, your music halls, your restaurants and your hotels to study your types, and I find the same thing. The woman occupies the centre of the stage and the man is her humble servant. I have sketched some of these episodes as they caught my eye.

Observe the haughty lady choosing her seat in the restaurant. She is dressed in the most expensive clothes from Paris. Her eye sweeps over the room in search of the place that will best set off her magnificence. Behind her stands her husband waiting with bowed head and resigned expression until she shall have made up her mind.

His face is heavy and determined. He is one of those energetic Americans who wrestle with man and nature and wring colossal fortunes from one or the other. But in the presence of his wife he is entirely submissive.

I go to the tango tea. A wonderful vogue that we share with you in Paris. But here the thing exists especially for the benefit of the women. The men are brought in because they are rather useful in a dance.

I admire the efforts of the stout American ladies to dance. Observe the one whom I have sketched performing the "half and half." This new dance is a combination of the one-step and the waltz. It eliminates the monotony that marks each of those dances. Certainly there is no monotony as one watches the lady.

I am assured that she is of the highest social position, a member of the "Four Hundred." The slender young man with whom she dances is almost invisible.

I find that American women are very handsome, but in dressing they have not quite the charm and style of French women. They are dressed too much alike. It seems that some courturiere, some dressmaker, has told them that such a thing is the style, and they have all rushed to get that style without considering their individual peculiarities.

This resemblance between so many of your women makes difficult the work of the caricaturist. In Paris our social leaders are very considerate of the caricaturist. They take care to wear something that catches the eye.

Another weakness of your women is to wear fashions from Paris that are never worn in Paris I know that the American buyers go to Paris several months in advance of the Spring, at a time when the weather is still very cold, and buy a great number of models that have been prepared for them in advance by our industrious workers. These costumes are never worn by Parisians.

The fashions interest me very much. I am not a fashion expert, but I always see anything that is new and striking. Sometimes I suggest new fashions. It was a caricature of mine that suggested the new very tall hat with no roof to it. I had also the pleasure of bringing again into fashion the stomach, that feature without which no one is really complete.

And now I venture to make a prophecy with regard to fashion. I venture to say that the crinoline will again come into favor. It will be a natural reaction from the invisible skirt which quite recently was the mode.

The normal operation of the laws of fashion is bound to bring about this change.

THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR An Entrancing Tale of Love and Mystery BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN

SILENCE had filled the church up to this moment, but at this audacious move a solitary wail arose of mingled astonishment and despair went up behind us; but before any of us could turn, and while my own heart stood still for I thought I recognized the veiled figure, the woman at the altar raised her hand and pointed towards the bridegroom.

"Why does he hesitate?" she cried. "Does he not recognize the only woman with whom he can face God and man at the altar? Because I am already his wedded wife, and have been so for five long years, does that make my wearing of this veil amiss when he is husband, unreleased by the law, dares enter this sacred place with the bride and expectation of a bridegroom?"

It was Ruth Oliver who spoke. I recognized her voice as I had recognized her apparel; but the emotions aroused in me by her presence and the almost incredible claims she advanced were lost in the horror inspired by the man she thus momentarily accused. No lost spirit from the pit could have shown a more hideous commingling of the most terrible passions known to man than he did in the face of this terrible accusation, and if Ella Althorpe cowered in her place and moaned as if already under the blow in all his depravity at that instant as I had nothing could have saved her long-betrothed love from immediate death.

Yet he tried to speak.

"It is false!" he cried; "all false! The woman I once called wife is dead."

"Dead, Olive Randolph? Murderer!" she exclaimed. "The blow struck in the dark found another victim!" And pulling the veil from her face, Ruth Oliver advanced to his side and laid her trembling hand with a firm and decisive movement on his arm.

Was it her words, her touch, or the sound of the clock striking eight in the great tower over our heads which so totally overwhelmed him? As the last stroke of the hour which was to have seen him united with Miss Althorpe died out in the awed spaces above him, he gave a cry such as I am sure never responded between those sacred walls before, and sank in a heap on the floor where but a few minutes previous he had lifted his head in all the glow and pride of a prospective bridegroom.

CHAPTER XXXII.
SACRED HISTORY.

It was hours before I found myself able to realize that the scene I had just witnessed had a deeper and much more dreadful significance than appears to the general eye, and that Ruth Oliver, in her desperate interruption of these treacherous nuptials had not only made good her prior claim to Randolph Stone as her husband, but had pointed him out to all the world as the villainous author of that crime which for so long a time had occupied my own and the public's attention

Thinking that you may find the same difficulty in grasping this terrible fact, and being anxious to save you from the suspense under which I myself labored for so many hours, I here subjoin a written statement made by this woman some weeks later, in which the whole mystery is explained. It is signed Olive Randolph, the name to which she evidently feels herself best entitled

"The man known in New York city as Randolph Stone was first seen by me in Michigan five years ago. His name then was John Randolph and how he has since come to add to this the further appellation of Stone I must leave to himself to explain.

"I was born in Michigan myself, and till my eighteenth year I lived with my father, who was a widower without any other child. In a little low cottage amid the sand mounds that border the eastern side of the lake.

"I was not pretty, but every man who passed me on the beach or in the streets of the little town where we went to market and to church, stopped to look at me, and this I noticed, and from this perhaps my unhappiness arose

"For before I was old enough to know the difference between poverty and riches I began to lose all interest in my simple home duties, and to cast longing looks at the great school building where girls like myself learned to speak like ladies and play the piano. Yet these ambitious promptings might have come to nothing if I had never met him. I might have settled down in my own sphere and lived a useful if unsatisfied life like my mother and my mother's mother before her.

"But fate had reserved me for wretchedness, and one day just as I was on the verge of my eighteenth year I saw John Randolph.

"I was coming out of church when our eyes met, and I noticed after the first shock my simple heart received from this handsome face and elegant appearance, that he was surveying me with that strange look of admiration I had seen before on so many faces; and the joy this gave me, and the certainty which came with it of my seeing him again, made that moment quite unlike any other in my whole life, and was the beginning of that passion which has undone me, ruined him, and brought death and sorrow to many others of more worth than either of us.

"He was not a resident of the town but a passing visitor; and his intention had been, as he has since told me, to leave the place on the following day. But the dart which had pierced my breast had not glanced entirely aside from his, and he remained, as he declared, without any other child, in

HOW KING GEORGE JOLTED THE ENGLISH THRONE

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

There will be a general election in Great Britain and Ireland this year, probably in June or July. It will be the most fateful general election of centuries. Its consequences will be momentous and historic. Out of it the people will get more power. The nobility and aristocracy will lose theirs. And all because a well-intentioned young king did not know enough to keep away from the buzz saw of public opinion.

It would have been a mighty good thing for King George V. of England, if, a couple of weeks ago, he had horse sense enough to talk to his bad advisers on the Irish question in much the same homely, but forcible fashion, that his royal predecessor King Canute spoke to his evil counsellors nine centuries earlier.

Finding that King Canute was somewhat inclined to be, at least, fair towards the people and would live in peace with them, these haughty courtiers protested. They kept on protesting until one day it entered Canute's head that by a homely illustration he would show them the folly of their ways.

He proposed to his ministers on that bright morning that they accompany him on a walk to the seashore.

Arrived at the shore when the tide was low, Canute planted his little stool at the water edge and began to talk and tell stories to his smallminded courtiers.

Pretty soon the wavelets began to wet Canute's toes. A few minutes later they were lapping his ankles and wetting the edges of his gold-fringed robe.

Then Canute thought it was time to act. So he got up and, with an imperious wave of his wand, told the waves to keep back, that he was King and they must not roll too close to the royal ankles.

Strange to say, the waves paid no attention to the King. On they came rolling larger and bolder every second. Canute rose up in indignation from his stool, which was beginning to rock by this time, and he told a member of his party to take it and place it back a few feet where the sand was dry.

Along in the afternoon, as evening began to fall, the King and his party and the stool not only had no places on the sands, but they had to take to the cliffs, for the high tide was in full possession of the beach. Then Canute said:

"Gentlemen, one of you pick up the stool and let us all go home to supper. I hope you have learned a lesson."

They had, but it took some of them a long time to profit by it. A few revolutions had to come, a few stubborn kings had to be rapped on the knuckles, King Charles I. had to mount the scaffold and lose his head, before the English people had taught royalty that it had its place and that it must keep it.

Good Queen Anne was the last English sovereign who was permitted to obstruct the people's will. All the sovereigns since her time kept carefully out of politics, until strange to say, this year of grace 1914.

By his interference with his minister on the Irish question George V. has given the English throne a jolt which severely taxed its underpinning. Not very many more such jolts would send the throne toppling.

King George needed a Gladstone at his elbow last week instead of a group of aristocratic army officers who, the world knows now, had his ear at Buckingham Palace. If the sage of Hawarden stood there in the royal library with those wonderful eyes of his flashing the anger with which Gladstone would have rebuked the young king, there would be no cry in British politics today of "The Army or the People."

That June morning in 1837, when the girl of eighteen, Princess Victoria, daughter of the Duke of Kent, was called from sleep by the Duke of Wellington, who told her that her uncle, William IV., had just died and that she must take the oath as Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, a new policy was founded, affecting the respective positions of the throne and the people. The House of Commons came to be supreme.

The day Victoria was crowned in Westminister Abbey a great principle came into force. It was no less than the adoption of the national policy that from that hour onward the sovereign of the British empire could not remove the Prime Minister or his cabinet without the consent of the House of Commons, nor, on the other hand, could the sovereign retain a ministry which the Commons refused to support.

Up to two years ago, this control was seriously hampered by the absolute veto of the House of Lords. The Parliament Act struck away that last barrier, and while that act remains on the statute book royal and aristocratic rule is a thing of the past in England. The Parliament act will not be repealed.

George V. must be doing some hard thinking today as he surveys the consequences of his act on the so-called question of Ulster. Personally, he is a home ruler. His farseeing and levelheaded father, the late Edward VII., made him one. Mr. Gladstone made Edward (when he was Prince of Wales a home ruler. And when, after his coronation as Edward VII., he and his consort, Queen Alexandra, went on an automobile tour of Ireland, his eyes were opened on the Irish question even wider than Mr. Gladstone had opened them.

The history of that coronation tour of King Edward carries an interesting story.

Directly it became known in Dublin that the King and Queen were coming over to Ireland, the Tory bourgeocrats of Dublin Castle got feverishly busy. Armed escorts were organized, special orders were telegraphed to police and military all over the country for extensive precautions to be taken during the stay of the King and Queen, an army of detectives was sent prowling through every county, hotel keepers were warned to be watchful of their newer guests, pilot engines and pilot autos were to run ahead of the royal party, whether travelling by rail or motor car, the newspapers were to be given no news of the royal visit except as it was doled out to the reporters at the national police headquarters in Dublin; squads of sharpshooters were to be stationed on the pilot engines and on top of buildings in the cities and towns and in the church steeples of the hamlets and villages. Nothing was left unprovided for by those Tory officeholders anxious to show their need, their very indispensability, as safeguarders of the crown. The King and Queen were to travel through Ireland as if they were the Czar and Czarina of Russia going from St. Petersburg to Moscow in the days of the terrible Nihilists.

King Edward heard the news of all those wonderful plans for his safety, and, like a man of common sense, he lost no time in kicking them all into a cocked hat. Turning to his private secretary, Lord Knollys, he said:

"Those officials over in Dublin make me tired. Just tell them by telegraph the King is disgusted with their nonsense. Order them to abandon their ridiculous program of military escort. Tell them, as I go through Ireland, my escort will be the Irish people, just as if I were visiting in Scotland or in Wales or any part of England.

The Tory officeholders in Dublin Castle, filled with terror and amazement, ran into their holes.

Edward and Queen Alexandra came to Ireland. They travelled Ulster and Munster and Leinster and Connaught, by automobile. They stopped at the farmer's house and at the laborer's cottage here and there along the road, they lunched with the parish priest and met the village rector and the doctor and the postmaster at the soggarth's humble but hospitable board.

One day as the royal party was travelling through Wicklow, King Edward turned suddenly to one of the local reception committee, whom he startled with the earnestness of his inquiry:

"This is indeed a beautiful country, a grand country, but where are the people?"

He was quickly told. In Australia, in Canada, in South Africa, and millions of them in the United States of America.

Then he was told the story of the famine, of the tyranny of the absentee landlords and their agents, of the killing of all hope in the hearts of the people by those feudal tyrants, of the bleeding of the country of its population by enforced emigration, of the worse than Russian coercion laws, of the arrogant and grasping crew that was running the country from Dublin Castle drawing the fattest salaries in Europe for doing less, of the political judges who wore the ermine, not for justice to all the people, but only for the favored class; all these things and more, were told to Edward. He investigated for himself and found what he had heard was true, and by the time he was back in London, he made no secret of his conversion to home rule. The reign of Edward VII. was all too short. A freedom-loving universe mourned at his passing.

Edward VII. would never have listened in patience to the trash and tommyrot of those army officers who had the nerve to say, directly and indirectly, to George V. that they would obey orders and enforce a coming act of Parliament if——

There would have been no "if" about it if that intimation came to Edward VII. Without waiting for further parley, those officers' names would have been dropped from every club in London on the slightest hint from the King and every man of them would have been in a social Coventry within a week. Of course, legally they could not be dropped from their clubs if their dues were paid. But Edward had terrific power as leader of London society. All he had to do was to decline to attend a banquet or a ball, if any person, man or woman, obnoxious to him, was on the list of guests. That settled it. The man or woman, no matter how high the rank, stayed away by blunt request of the committee.

The Tories are undone. Carson was their undoer. The Liberals can stay in office for the next two parliaments. They have a marvellous program,—home rule for Ireland, Welsh disestablishment, "one man, one vote," all to be law by June. Then dissolution and a general election. Certain as the stars the Liberals will come back in triumph. Then land reform in England, to be followed by an act to abolish aristocratic control of the army.

What a program for an aroused democracy.

Then some day will come the mightiest reform of them all, the federation of the British empire.

England will have home rule with a parliament at York.

Scotland will have home rule with a parliament at Edinburgh.

Wales will have home rule with a parliament at Cardiff.

And there will be assembled at Westminster, representatives from Ireland, from Scotland, from Wales, from Canada, from Australia, from South Africa, from Hindostan, from the Isle of Man and the channel settlements.

It will be a mighty change, a great stride forward on the road of progress.

When it comes to be and the future historian sits at his desk to survey the picture, he will write, if he be true to his calling:

"All this was due to the courage and the steadfastness to principle of one people. It was Ireland, poor, weak, disarmed, helpless, downtrodden, that out of her ancient genius pointed the way."

KING GEORGE V.

THE QUITTER---By Elbert Hubbard

Reprinted by Permission from Hearst's Magazine for April.

If all the world loves a lover, it is equally true that all the world hates a quitter. Stand by the ship; if necessary, go down with it, and go down gloriously, as did Captain Smith on the Titanic. Or, if you leave the ship, leave it as did those survivors on the Jeannette, in the Arctic Sea. When their gallant little craft was pinched by the overwhelming ice, and her ribs hopelessly crushed, they took the few effects they could carry out on the ice.

Then they went back and run up the Stars and Stripes to the highest tip of the mainmast. And as the ship slowly settled into the sea, and the flag disappeared in the crevasse, they lifted three ringing cheers for the Red, White and Blue.

And they were alone on the ice, and unafraid, three thousand miles from civilization.

What shall we say of the soldier who deserts on the eve of battle; of the sailor who abandons his ship at sea; of the cook who quits on the day of the banquet; of the waiters who walk out when the guests are coming; of the farm hands who throw up their jobs at harvest time; of the employe in business, who, having made a bad break and caused a loss to his firm of thousands, thinks to make all good by sitting down and calmly writing: "I hereby tender my resignation," etc., etc.

When the captain of a ship has put out from Singapore, bound for Boston, we have only one question to ask. And this question does not refer to typhoons, hurricanes, pirates, shoals, shallows or icebergs. The one question we ask is: "Did you bring the ship into port?"

If you make a mistake, acknowledge the fact and show you can make good, even in spite of the blunders you have made.

Don't run away from a difficulty. If you do, you'll find the difficulty, like a polar bear, will follow you. Besides, you can't run away from a fault, because you carry the cause of the fault with you.

There is a man who has a farm near mine, at the village of East Aurora. On this farm is a flock of Southdown sheep, quite the finest bunch you ever saw.

One day the man and his foreman decided that the sheep should be "dipped." The next day the foreman ordered one of his helpers to prepare the mixture.

The sheep were dipped, twenty of them, and behold the effect! The wool came off in patches. The poor things were scalded, scorched and blistered. The helper had used carbolic acid diluted one half, when it shoul have been used as one to one hundred.

Of course, the foreman was to blame. He should have prepared the "dip" himself. But after the damage was done the average man would have sat down and written a letter to the owner saying: "I hereby tender my resignation," etc., etc.

This man didn't. He wrote his employer stating the plain facts and asked that his pay be cut one-half, as punishment. The owner accepted the man's offer to work at the reduced wage and never once after referred to the mishap.

The foreman went to work nursing those injured sheep. He looked after them night and day as a mother does her children.

At the end of the year the owner sent the foreman a check for the difference in wages.

The man had made good!

The employer has a duty to perform, too, when a helper errs. Employers used to "fire" men who had done the wrong thing. I find now that the tendency is to keep the man on and try him out elsewhere, in the hope that he will learn by his error.

Says John Ruskin: "It is nothing to give pension and cottage to the widow who has lost her son; it is nothing to give food and medicine to the workman who has broken his arm, or the decrepit woman wasting in sickness. But it is something to use your time and strength to war with the waywardness and thoughtlessness of mankind, and to keep the erring workman in your service till you have made him an unerring one."

The fool is not the man who merely does foolish things. The fool is the man who does not know enough to cash in on his foolishness.

WRITES OF THE HIGH COST OF LIVING AND DIETING

Copyright 1914 by American-Journal-Examiner.

All about us are people complaining of the high cost of living, and of the ills which assail their bodily structures.

Philanthropists, reformers and economists are endeavoring to set right the wrongs of inflated prices for food.

Physicians and metaphysicians are trying to set right the human body. If the annoyances of both of the evils which disturb human peace can be avoided by the individual himself, through the law of self-control and scientific diet, all the world should know the method.

In an exchange a man writes an account of how he keeps his family in health and with appetites satisfied on an incredibly small sum of money. Three people live on two dollars a week, and enjoy the best vigor. There has been no physician called in the last seven years, and the bank account has grown steadily.

The diet prescribed by this man would call for great will power and continual self-denial on the part of most human beings.

It is a curious fact that even those men and women who believe themselves to be quite spiritual in their ideas of life, and who would be horrified to think any one regarded them as carnal or gross in their tastes, are yet unable to eliminate from their diet for any length of time the food which they know to be injurious (or at least unnecessary to the sustaining of strength and health). A very charming young woman, who is filled with high ideals of life, declared she would rather die and be done with it than force herself to give up her favorite foods and beverages (coffee in particular) in order to benefit her health.

It is the belief of many people that various kinds of food are necessary to the building up of a vigorous body, and that a change of diet should be made frequently. Certainly a monotonous menu palls upon the appetite, and unless the following list of eatables could be changed and augmented not many of us would be happy in our repasts for any length of time.

Nevertheless when a man makes such positive statements regarding the benefits resulting from such a diet, benefits to body and purse, it is worth considering. Let us listen to what he says:

"Here's a well-balanced ration for one day. I eat only a little fruit for breakfast.

"Breakfast—One apple or banana.

"Dinner—One dish of home-made corn flakes, one dish of boiled wheat cereal, one dish of vegetable salad, two or three slices of whole wheat bread, one banana.

"Supper—One dish of home-made wheat flakes, one dish of home-made hulled hominy, one baked potato, one dish of fruit salad, whole wheat or graham bread.

"I suppose you will say that sounds monotonous, but I don't eat to gratify a discerning and whetted appetite. I eat to be strong and well and to supply my body with the foods that it really needs.

"Nine years ago I was a wreck—worse than that, two doctors gave me from two to four months to live.

"The food elements needed by the body may be divided into seven classes—protein, starch, sugar, fats, salts, cellulose and water—and these again into about fifteen different chemical elements, all of which are found in a single kernel of wheat, in just about the correct proportions.

"No other food in the world equals wheat in perfection. I have lived on wheat in various forms, with about 10 per cent. of nuts, for weeks at a time.

"I am careful about buying my supplies, so that they will cost me the least money. I have a flaking machine—you can buy one and make your own flakes at one cent a pound.

"I buy the corn and wheat for flakes by the bushel, and watch for opportunities to buy the fruits and vegetables at lowest cost. The apples and bananas usually cost me about three cents a pound, and my bananas I always get dead ripe—just turning black, because they are best then.

"I buy bread one or two days old at the rate of five or ten cents for nothing would induce me to eat new bread. Cabbage and so many other vegetables I eat raw.

"If I sometimes feel that I am not getting enough protein I add raw peanuts when I am making flakes and a little soaked dried fruit, such as figs, raisins or dates, to make it a little more palatable.

"And all I drink is water—plenty of it, though never near meal time.

"Now, that is my rule for health and that is what I eat. What do you say to it? If you could see me now you would know that there is something in it, for I am about the healthiest person you ever saw.

While the men and women who are enjoying good health may not feel interested in this article, it should be clipped and saved and tried by the many dyspeptics who are paying useless money for patent medicines and fee-ing doctors, with no results.

Poor people who are trying to sustain life on cheap food badly cooked, and who find the food trusts an insurmountable obstacle to economy, could not do better than to give this diet a fair trial for a few months.

Health and a good bank account may result, two great factors in happiness.

Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it all a dream until, later, he find the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription pad a very brief and simple will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's vast estate if something should happen to her before she marries. Montgomery Hicks, a race-track man, whispers a suggestion to Owen, but the secretary refuses to have anything to do with him, for the time at least.

In spite of Harry's protest, Owen arranges for Pauline to go as a passenger in an aeroplane race as the first of her year's adventures. The day of the race has arrived, and Harry has not found a way to prevent the rash experience.

HARRY MARVIN had just entered the little private garage back of the Marvin mansion, locked the door and drawn the shades of the small windows. There were only two automobiles in the garage. One was the big six-cylinder touring car in which Pauline and Owen had made their trip the day before to the aviation field. The other was the two-seated runabout that Harry had driven over the same ground just behind them.

Having made sure that nobody was about, Harry lifted up the hood of the touring car and without the slightest provocation attacked it with a wrench. He removed the carburetor, took it to pieces, lifted out the hollow metal float and deliberately made two punctures in it. Then he tossed the disconnected parts upon a work bench and was about to operate on the runabout when he heard voices outside.

He was barely in time to unlock the door and be found busily working on the car when Pauline entered. She had just learned of the [illegible] absence. Harry volunteered the [illegible] bad news that the big car was out of order. Like every disappointed [illegible] she insisted on knowing exactly what was wrong. Harry told her, with many long technical details, and, not knowing at all what he was talking about, she had to be satisfied.

Could he fix it in time to get her to the aviation field before the race?

Well, that depended partly on whether she would go away and not bother him until breakfast.

Pauline could and she certainly would refrain from bothering him. Never before had Harry found her a bother, nor, for that matter, [illegible] other man in her recollection. Out she went, with more color than usual in her pink cheeks and the light of battle in her eyes.

"By George, I'll [illegible] to play my cards carefully," thought Harry as he contemplated the runabout. It was evident that he had designs on [illegible] of the two-seater also. But he [illegible] necessity of subtlety in this case. He [illegible] not assassinate it boldly by tearing out a vital organ as he had done to the other car. This runabout must die a [illegible] lingering death. How was he to do it? His first idea was to weaken the tires [illegible] private "blowouts" on the road. It [illegible] could not be done with certainty, and the [illegible] friend might suspect [illegible]

A more [illegible] engine of its oil. [illegible] sooner or later the pistons would [illegible] and stop. Such a proceeding would [illegible] engine, and Harry was [illegible] spoil a fine motor [illegible] scarcely one built by his father. He could as soon think of [illegible] a faithful horse. A better plan soon came to him and put him into action. It took half [illegible] cut on his back under the car, boring a hole in the bottom of the gasoline tank. When the life-blood of the car began to trickle out in a stream he stopped the hole with a small wooden plug.

The young man now frowned at the only remaining [illegible] which had not received his attention. Owen's motorcycle.

"It's a shame to do this," he laughed to himself, "and I feel like a criminal, but it's all for Polly's sake, and I might as well make a good job of it. 'All's fair in love and war,' they say, so here goes."

Harry went to the hose used for washing down the cars and collected a little water in the palm of his hand. With the other hand he removed the cap from the motorcycle's tank and allowed two or three drops of water to mingle with the gasoline.

"There, I guess that won't hurt him or his machine, but it ought to give it a bad case of whooping cough and keep him from breaking the speed laws along the public highway.

This done, Harry let down his sleeves, washed his hands, and sauntered in to breakfast, with the unwelcome announcement that the big car was, for the day at least, beyond human aid.

There was a flicker of suspicion in Owen's sallow face at the news. He wondered if Harry had disabled the touring car that he might ride alone with Pauline.

"What are we going to do?" demanded the young lady.

"I am afraid," said Harry quietly, "that you will have to ride in the runabout alone with me, Polly. It's rather hard on Raymond, but I guess he must go on his motorcycle or by train."

"Oh, I think you wrecked it on purpose," said Pauline, without the slightest suspicion that she was stating the truth.

Owen, worried by vague misgivings about Harry, looked into the tank of the runabout to make sure that it was full and then scurried away on his two-wheeled mount. He considered waiting until the runabout was ready to start and keeping the machine in sight, but it seemed wiser to be on the field where he could make sure the Frenchman would not forget his bargain nor start before Pauline arrived.

Pauline was ready with such record-breaking suddenness that it gave her the novel experience of waiting for Harry. Like all very pretty girls, Miss Marvin had no more sense of responsibility in keeping an appointment than has a Chinaman, but this did not excuse Harry's tardiness. At the end of ten minutes' waiting on the piazza Pauline was a picture of outraged femininity.

She had not forgotten that her lover had asked her not to bother him while he worked on the car. After that short to her pride the young lady would rather die than go near the garage while he was in it. During the next five minutes unpleasant doubts entered her mind. What could this indifference and neglect mean? She had looked upon Harry ever since his return from college as a personal possession. Of course, technically he wasn't hers until she married him. But if he were not her property, at least she had an option on the handsome youth until such time as she saw fit to either take his name or relinquish him to some one else. In that case she wondered to whom she would like to turn him over. There was her schoolmate and chum, Miss Hamlin. How lucky any man would be to get her, and Harry—how would he feel about it? Then like a little cold draught in her brain came the recollection that Lucille and Harry had corresponded all the four years he was at college.

Could it be that she, Pauline, had been too wilful and headstrong with Harry? If so, was it possible that the keen edge of his adoration was wearing dull? Pauline had just succeeded in stamping these unpleasant questions deep down into the subconscious parts of her mind when the young man himself whisked up in the runabout.

"Come on, queen of the air," he called gaily as he hopped out to help her in. Then, reading the unspoken wrath of a maiden compelled to wait for her lover, Harry pointed to the rear wheels, resplendent in the immaculate blue whiteness of brand-new tires.

"Now we can't have any tire trouble."

Pauline's wrath melted rapidly. Harry drove, as he did everything out in the open air, magnificently. His judgment of distances and openings was precise and his skill in weaving his way through heavy traffic was startling. A good looking young man is said to seem to better advantage [illegible] when driving a powerful car. Pauline loved to drive with Harry. Besides his spectacular tricks he had a guileless manner of getting the better of arguments with crossing policemen.

Every time Pauline saw a girl at the side of the road she noticed the quick glance of feminine appraisal and approval of her driver, and each time she felt a corresponding joy that this handsome youth was hers.

Harry was not driving as fast as usual. This fact was impressed on her by shouts and waving of hands from a car which passed them from behind.

"That's Lucille," cried Pauline, waving.

"Yes, and, confound it, that's Billy Madison taking her to the races."

"Well, why shouldn't he?" asked Pauline. "Isn't it all right?"

"Yes, but it seems to me he is paying a good deal of attention to Lucille and—say, Polly, you don't suppose she'd be silly enough to care for him, do you?"

That sensation of a cold wave in the back of her brain came again.

"I'm sure I don't know," she replied, a little coldly. "Why—does it matter very much to you?"

Harry hesitated, even stammered a little, in denying that it did. He stammered, as Pauline well understood, because he was not telling her his true thoughts. It did matter, and she knew it. In reality it mattered because Harry knew too much about young Madison to want him to win the affection of any friend of his, but Harry did not wish to explain.

"So Harry does care for Lucille and always has cared," thought Pauline. The sense of possession of the youth beside her faded and he seemed far away. If a man fears he is losing his grip on a girl he redoubles his attentions and racks his brains to be more interesting and attractive to her. A girl in the same situation reverses the tactics. She withdraws into her shell, becomes cold, does nothing to be attractive and carefully puts away, as if in moth balls for the Summer, all the little charms and witcheries of manner which have held him. The offender finds that somehow he has slipped out of the Garden of Eden and is sitting on the North Pole without even an aurora borealis to cheer him.

This seemingly rash behavior inviting defeat is really good generalship. If you are whistling for a dog and the dog won't come to you there are only two policies to pursue. You must either grab the dog by the collar and carry him home by main force or run away from him. If you run he will probably follow as fast as his legs will carry him. It is not easy to catch a dog and equally hard for a girl to collar a man except by a breach of promise suit. So instinct tells the jealous girl to run away, or to freeze up, which is the same thing.

Just as Harry felt the absolute zero which scientists talk about settling upon him he remembered a very important duty.

"Seems to me we don't drift the way we ought to," said Harry, pressing on his clutch pedal and trying to look concerned.

"I think we have been a long time getting to the aviation field." was Pauline's chilly answer.

Harry stopped the car, went back and pulled out the little wooden plug in the gasolene tank. Then away they went again, leaving a little wet line in the dust of the road. Pauline stared straight ahead. Harry's attempts at conversation fell on the stony ground of silence, or at best brought forth only the briefest and most colorless answers. Soon Harry's practised ear caught the preliminary warning of waning gasolene, and a moment later, half way up a gentle hill, with a sob from all its six cylinders the car gave up the ghost.

A few miles ahead Owen was in difficulties. He had been sailing along merrily until he stopped at a little roadhouse for a drink. The machine had been all right when he got off and he knew nobody had touched it, yet now it acted as if possessed by the evil one. With great difficulty he was able to start it, and once started it coughed, bucked and showed all the symptoms of bronchitis and pneumonia. By dint of strenuous pedaling Owen helped the asthmatic motor to the top of the next hill. It ran as smoothly as a watch all the way down the other side and then imitated a bunch of cannon crackers on the following rise.

Owen was a good motorcycle rider, but a very poor mechanic. His machine had been adjusted, cleaned and kept in repair by the Marvin chauffeur, and the secretary had seldom cause to investigate it on the road. He had always used the carefully filtered gasolene from the garage, so that he neither understood the present alarming symptoms nor knew their simple cure. His motor was protesting at a drop of water which had entered the needle valve of his carburetor and, being heavier than gasolene, had lodged there and stopped its flow. It would have been an easy matter to drain the carburetor, but instead Owen with nervous fingers adjusted everything he could get his hands on, and after two hours' work trundled it into a farmhouse and hired the farmer to drive him the short remaining distance to the aviation field.

Several machines were in the air, but not the Frenchman's, when the farmer drove up. The roads and the edges of the field were alive with cars and spectators as the secretary hastened to the "hangars." The French aviator welcomed Owen and inquired for the mademoiselle. This confirmed Owen's fears that something had happened to her on the way. It had troubled him a little that the runabout had not passed him on the road, but Harry might have made a detour to avoid some section of bad road.

Owen lost another hour in watching and worrying before he made up his mind to go to the rescue. There were plenty of idle cars, but it was not easy to hire one, as they were mostly guarded by chauffeurs with no right to rent or lend them. At last a man was found who was willing to pick up $10 and take a chance that his master would not know about it. Chauffeurs are particularly independent in the month of June. With the rest of the world they suffer from "Spring fever," and at that time of year positions are, as they well know, more plentiful than drivers.

The rescue car found them just where they had stopped, half way up the hill. Pauline had run the scale of feminine annoyance, from silence to sarcasm to tears. The tears produced almost the same effect on Harry's determination to keep Pauline from flying that the drops of water had in Owen's carburetor. The spectacle of the girl he loved weeping had almost broken up his resolve when Owen dashed by, shouted, turned around and drew up alongside.

Harry asked for help, and the chauffeur, who had never had the pleasure of tinkering with a "Marvin Six," was inclined to dismount and aid at least in diagnosing the car's ailment. While he was thinking about it and surveying the parts which Harry had taken out and strewn about the running board in his pretended trouble hunt Pauline had dashed away her tears and transferred her pretty self to the new car. Pauline and Owen both knew that was barely time to reach the field before the Frenchman's ascent. So with scanty farewells Harry was left to reassemble his car. When he had set up the last nut he replaced the little plug in the tank, produced a can of gasolene from the locker behind the seats, emptied it into his tank and drove at reckless speed for the aviation grounds.

Harry knew that in all probability Pauline had reached the field in time. He regretted that she was to take the risk, but he was serene in knowing that he had done his best in a good cause. Fate has a habit of making it hard for a man like Harry at the start and then making up for it at the end. Strong men feel this instinctively and when their best efforts fail experience a confidence that things will turn out all right anyway.

When Harry mingled with the spectators he was just in time to see a tiny speck on the edge of the horizon. This, he learned, was the Frenchman's machine. He was told that it carried a passenger. The speck grew rapidly in size, developed the insect shape of a biplane and soon seemed to be over the other end of the aviation field. The young man's joy at seeing the aeroplane returning in safety was dampened by a little feeling of shame that by such devious means he had almost spoiled Pauline's pleasure. He was ashamed and vowed he would mind his own business in the future.

"I act like an old woman worrying Polly this way," he decided. "No wonder she is cross to me lately. She must think I would be a tyrant of a"—— Harry's last words were choked by a spasm of the throat.

There were shouts and gestures from the spectators.

Something was wrong with the aeroplane.

A light gust of wind had struck it on the right wing. It wavered an instant, like a dragon fly about to alight, and then instead of responding to the aviator's levers turned on its left side and plunged to the ground. A cloud of dust arose, half hiding the wreck, and then the crash of impact came to his ears.

There was a second of silence, broken by a groan. Harry heard the groan and didn't even know it came from his own throat. He was in motion now, forcing people to the right and left and running down the field. It seemed miles to the other end, and he was gratefully conscious that others nearer were hurrying to the rescue, if rescue it might be called.

The aeroplane had dropped like a stone from a height that forbade hope of escape. Would she be conscious and would he be in time to give and receive a last message of love before her splendid young life was quenched in the black blot of death? Besides grief there was fury in the runner's heart, wrath against Owen for encouraging this foolish and dangerous caprice, against the unfortunate driver who had failed to preserve his precious freight, and against nature who condemns every living thing by one means or another to that same final failure and wreck—death.

Gasping for breath from his exertions, he was at last within a hundred feet of the ruin, and saw people lifting up the engine and removing a limp figure. Just then two people stepped in his way. He did not turn out but rushed straight at them, rather glad to have something to hurl aside in his blind anger, nor did he notice that one was a woman. Harry's plunge carried him between them and knocked both down, just as he had often bowled over the "interference" in his football games. On he lurched, wondering vaguely at hearing his name called. He heard it again and it sounded like Pauline's voice.

He turned, and it was Pauline.

After all, then, Pauline had arrived too late—had missed that fatal adventure. Pauline realized her fortunate escape.. She was overcome with horror and swayed dizzily and fainted.

Owen watched Harry lift Pauline up and wrap her in his arms with a squeeze that hurt. But it was a hurt she loved, and though she sobbed as if her heart would break they were sobs of relief and happiness. Harry thought they were tears of penitence and that this lesson would be the end of her year of adventures. But Harry knew not his Pauline.

Owen watched a moment and then slunk away to follow the men who had lifted a blackened and broken figure from beneath the ruined flyer. The secretary saw the aviator taken into the neat white hospital tent which had been erected on the field.

Owen's schemes had been for nothing. Pauline was alive and happy in her lover's arms, and the secretary was no nearer his goal of permanent control of her estate than before. He was a disappointed and discouraged man and a scoundrel, but he was not so hardened that the possibility of having a murder, especially a useless murder, on his soul could be viewed with calmness. So he walked to the entrance of the tent and tried to learn from the nurses and doctors who were hurying in and out whether the French aviator would live or die. Nobody would stop to give him a satisfactory answer. There was a flap in the back of the tent, and through this Owen cautiously peered. He saw a nurse with something that looked like wet absorbent cotton dabbing at a round black object.

Presently he saw that the round object was the head of a man blackened by fire. Just then the nurse looked up, saw Owen's guilty face and gave a little exclamation of dismay. At the same instant Owen felt a hand grasp his elbow.

Withdrawing his head from the tent, he turned quickly and was confronted by the red face of Hicks, the blackmailer, counsellor and dream messenger.

The secretary backed away from Hicks with a face of terror. In the shaken state of his drug-tortured nerves and his guilty conscience it was all Owen could do to refrain from screaming.

"Don't be scared," said Hicks in a hoarse whisper. "I feel as if I were in this thing as deep as you are."

"In what thing?" asked Owen.

"Don't bluff, old man," said Hicks. "Didn't you dream about me last night?"

"Well, what have my dreams to do with you?"

"Stop bluffing," replied Hicks. "Didn't you see me in a dream last night? And didn't I leave a black, shining stone on the table when I left?"

Owen did not deny these questions, and the red-visaged man went on:

"I see you took my advice—that is, his advice, whoever he is, and you fixed the wire."

"Look here, Hicks, in heaven's name, tell me what this means. I did dream about you; you told me to do the thing, and it's your fault. You admit you are in it. Now, what is it?"

Owen," said Hicks, "you and I are a couple of pikers in a big game—bigger than we un'erstand. We hold the cards, but somebody else is playing the hand for us. He is an old guy and a wise one, four thousand years old, he tells me, and, though it scares me out of my boots to think who I am trailing along with, I'm going to stick an— you'd better stick, too, and let him play our hand to the end."

Who is it?" asked Owen, wondering if the morphine had gotten the better of his again or if Hicks were playing some uncanny deceit on him.

"I don't know," replied Hicks. "He's somebody who has been dead 4000 years, and he wants to have this girl Pauline killed so he can get her back. I suppose he's some kind of ghostly white slaver. It isn't our business what he is as long as he takes care of us. If we'll help him he'll help us."

"Well, he didn't manage very well today," objected Owen.

"He planned all right," rejoined Hicks. "The machine fell, and if he'd been in it she'd have been killed. But the other side played a card. I don't know what the card was, but it took the trick and she didn't go up in the machine. That's all. But don't worry, we'll have better luck some other time."

Owen shook his head. He could make nothing of this battle of unseen forces. It was clear to him that he had grasped at the one big chance to get Pauline's estate and had missed it. He told Hicks so frankly.

"That's where you're wrong again," insisted Hicks. If that girl had been killed to-day it would have been a big blunder."

"A blunder!" queried Owen, "Didn't you say that Pauline must be put out of the way before we can get hold of her fortune?"

"Listen," said Hicks glancing cautiously about, "Come over here away from these people."

"What do you mean by saying that it would have been a big blunder if Pauline had been killed in that flying machine?" demanded Owen.

"Yes an almighty big blunder—that's what I said, and I can tell you why. We were pretty stupid not to think of it before. NOW HERE'S WHAT'S GOT TO HAPPEN TO MISS PAULINE—"

Hicks placed his mouth close to Owen's ear and whispered. The secretary's face lighted first with surprise and then with enthusiasm. He nodded, and finally they shook hands and walked off together, while Harry led Pauline back to his car.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Don't Miss the Moving Pictures of "The Perils of Pauline."

The first two instalments of "The Perils of Pauline," have been and still are on exhibition at various motion picture theatres in wonderful reels by the famous Pathe players.

Today's instalment and last Sunday's instalment will be exhibited at the motion picture theatres this week.

Every two weeks new motion picture reels portraying the events of the two previous instalments of the story will be exhibited at the motion picture theatres.

Special Notice to Exhibitors.

Any exhibitor can book "The Perils of Pauline" reels from the Eclectic Film Company, No. 110 West Fortieth street, New York City; No. 3 Tremont Row, Boston; No. 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago; Rhodes Building, Atlanta. The addresses of other offices of the Eclectic Film Company in other parts of the country can be obtained by writing or telegraphing to the main office, No. 110 West Fortieth street, New York City.

Prize Winners of the "What Did Hicks Say?" Pictures

In the second chapter of "The Perils of Pauline" a sad thing happened—dear old Mr. Marvin died. Like many wealthy and very busy men he had neglected to make a will. Realizing that its end was near and he had made no provision for his adopted daughter Pauline, the dying man whispered his wishes to the doctor and a will was hastily written and signed on a prescription blank.

In that same chapter of "The Perils of Pauline" the rascal Hicks suggests to Raymond Owen (Marvin's trusted secretary) a way to get his hands on the old millionaire's property. What was it, exactly, that Hicks proposed? $1,000 in money prizes was offered for the best answers to the question—"WHAT DID HICKS SAY?"

The judges of the competition were at once impressed with the fact that the death-bed will of old Mr. Marvin was the incident upon which the majority of the contestants built up their contributions. It was immediately made plain that the will was open to two very different interpretations—one of which was never intended by poor Mr. Marvin. But the readers of "The Perils of Pauline" have keener minds than anybody at that bedside and have built up a varied and surprising lot of interpretations which would astonish Mr. Marvin if he were alive to listen to them.

This is the will just as Dr. Stevens wrote it on his prescription blank:

"Hodley Stevens, M. D.

"Mr. L. [illegible] half of my estate to my son, Harry, the remainder to my adopted daughter, Pauline, to be held in trust until her majority by my secretary, Raymond Owen."

Mr. L. Victor Fleckes, a lawyer, of No. 375 Fulton street, Brooklyn, put his legal mind upon it a will and writes:

Owen, do you know what the Will means to you? It means this: Unless Pauline is married TO YOU, or, in the language of the Will, "BY YOU," she cannot inherit one penny of the vast fortune bequeathed to her by her foster father, but to be held in trust by you until the fulfillment of this provision.

Did you notice how carefully that short Will is punctuated throughout?

Well, the accidental omission or misplacement of a comma has been known to upset contracts, avoid statutes, and invalidate Wills. In this case, a comma after the word "marriage," and before "would have at once become entitled to her inheritance upon her marriage to Harry Marvin, or, for that matter, to any one other than as the matter stands she must be married TO YOU and to you ONLY, in order to inherit at all. You and I know what old Marvin intended, of course, but as the trustee, you are bound to execute this Will according to its clear and precise terms. Her refusal to marry you makes the continuation of your trust indefinite, it places you in charge PERMANENTLY of Marvin's millions.

Miss Florence Irene Archer, of No. 13 West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, New York, does not concern herself with lawyers' quibbles or legal definitions. With true poetical instinct she prefers a romantic battle for the old man's millions to be won through Pauline's heart. Miss Archer writes:

HICKS'S MESSAGE.

Then Hicks, "like a ghostly cricket, creaking where a house hath burned."
Whispers through his warped ear, to Owen's mind, which drugs have turned.
Go! first inhale the magic vial, dropped from the Mummy's hand,
The wisdom of the ages then, will come at your command.
Then follow Pauline 'round the earth, guide in temptation's way,
From Harry turn her thoughts, from virtue make her footsteps stray.
When as trustee you've been made, steal that last will from its place,
Strike divers chords upon her heart, Harry's
image to efface.
Grasp the bracelet from her wrist, that talisman
to cure pain,
"Dust on ashes, dead and done with," make the bourne of her refrain.
Place the scarab on your breast; qualms will cease, your heart be still;
The secret of the ages wrest; mold the scarab to your will.
To its mummied hands consign, Egypt's voice of yesterday;
Both their wealth should then be thine, you will sway their mortal clay.

Many contributors felt that it was necessary to get Pauline out of the way if Hicks and Owen were to get the money. Some suggested sexing the poor girl and making a "white slave" of her, some proposed having her adjudged insane and locked up securely for life, one was for luring her into an Oriental harem and locking the doors on her.

Several writers did not deal so gently with Pauline. There were many and cruel suggestions for disposing of her and this one from Miss Kathryne Garth, of Larned, Kansas, is a sample of the more violent ideas:

Pauline must disappear, whispered Hicks. To roll in wealth you have only to follow my instructions. A package has recently received an Egyptian mummy. Tonight remove the hideous thing from its case and conceal it in your own room. While the household still sleeps steal into Pauline's room, chloroform her, place her in the mummy case and securely fasten the lid. At breakfast tell Harry that his father wished the mummy to be given to the museum and asked you to deliver it in person. Harry readily gives his permission and you phone to South 101 for a wagon and driver. I will wait the call and come as quickly as possible. We will place the mummy case in the wagon, drive a mile or two from the city, and cast the unsuspecting girl into the sea, where the waves will carry its burden ocean-ward. Her disappearance will cause a stir, but no suspicion will rest on the trusted secretary. You control her money; she is gone, and we will roll in wealth and luxury.

From Mrs. D. R. Magoffin, of No. 217 Thorne street, Los Angeles, Cal., comes this more humane suggestion:

Now, don't get excited. She must disappear. But no harm shall touch her. You and young Marvin will offer an immense reward for her safe return. She will not be found. The reward will be doubled by the frantic lover. Then—Montgomery Hicks discovers the young lady, claims the reward and divides with you, my friend.

Today's PRIZE OFFER

As you read this instalment of "The Perils of Pauline," printed above on this page to-day, you noticed that Hicks reveals to Owen Raymond some way to dispose of Pauline—WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO PAULINE?

The words Hicks put into Owen's ear have not yet been written. That will be YOUR task. Read the instalment, study the situations and write the "message" that you think best fits those situations.

One thousand dollars in money prizes will be given for the best explanations of what Hicks proposed should be done with Pauline. Answers must reach this office not later than next Thursday noon. Announcement of winners will be made two weeks from today.

Awards will be made according to the merits of the replies received, and those showing the greatest excellence in ingenuity, imagination, inventiveness and literary skill will be ranked in the order of merit.

This contest is open to every one without restriction, and those who in our opinion send in the best answers in not more than 200 words will be awarded the prizes. No manuscripts will be returned.

Write your explanation in not over 200 words, write your name and address plainly, and send it to

THE PERILS OF PAULINE,
P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass.

Every week $1,000 in cash prizes will be given for the best explanation of some mystery which each week you will find in the story.

This Sunday—$1,000 for the best answers to "What Will Happen to Pauline?"

Next Sunday—another $1,000 for another mystery.

Every Sunday—another mystery and another $1,000.

And, in addition to the $1,000 given away every week, there will be given $5,000 in special prizes, to be announced later as the story progresses.

"MRS. SMITH" WOULDN'T LOSE GOOD QUALITIES IF MUSIC VANISHED

Nicholas Young Discourses on Plays and Things Theatrical in Boston

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Kitty Gordon and "Pretty Mrs. Smith" [illegible] the dullest week of the theatrical year with a [illegible] sometimes happens to the best of attractions [illegible] Lester. In this particular case, however, [illegible] unusual amount of Holy Week [illegible] broad measure of profitable success [illegible] a deep sense of relief has sent to the [illegible] religious duty neglected during [illegible]

Entertainments [illegible] with music usually have neither [illegible] but only on good drama, even [illegible] "Pretty Mrs. Smith," which was written by Mr. [illegible] the hero, I am told—you have a fairly [illegible] own account that even the [illegible] being a lively entertainment [illegible] word a play with music, and [illegible] soft melodies you still have a drama. [illegible]

Miss Gordon has a new pair of gloves. If [illegible] open your eyes, and at [illegible] to her credit as an actress [illegible] the music is pretty, but [illegible] Pretty Mrs. Smith" [illegible] could take [illegible] to speedy Miss Gordon's [illegible] But it may be safely expanded that [illegible] of her sex [illegible] furnishes a lavishly [illegible] Gordon carries a full share of the responsibility.

SCANDAL NOTE—Sam Harrison, business manager of "The Little Cafe," once brought shame to his family by acting as understudy to a second rate singer in a musical show. It was twenty-five years ago, and Mr. Harrison's shame was limited to two nights. After his first appearance the manager of the show engaged a man understudy.

The astonishing success of "In Old Kentucky" [illegible] been a good lesson for the aspiring young playwright [illegible] of conquering the drama with a simple twist [illegible] "In Old Kentucky" has been moving through [illegible] until now, after a gap of eight years [illegible] to win all the enthusiasts of the Theatre [illegible] the American stage, with the possible exception [illegible] such continuous performance [illegible] "In Old Kentucky," was a youth fresh [illegible] the monotony—now he is a settled [illegible] to collecting royalties. When Mr. Dillingham [illegible] and started from Quincy [illegible] St. Paul, there seemed but little [illegible] of Lou Wendell been dealing in [illegible] some destiny. What [illegible] American scenes and characters [illegible] Mr. Lait needed a new play [illegible] moved to be Mr. Dazey's successor. [illegible] known to require specific [illegible] in supplying more than [illegible] and to treat it dogs, see [illegible] of its producers to [illegible] unsuccessful.

Since "In Old [illegible] Dazey has have come to the stage, [illegible] and little "underling methods" drama has had its fling; [illegible] and returned again; the problem play has [illegible] romped in musical comedy [illegible] "In Old Kentucky" has gone [illegible]

ECONOMY NOTE—Joe Dupuy, the dramatic and musical press representative of the Plymouth Theatre, was [illegible] and throat, is discouragingly inconsolable because a special interview [illegible] on the best articles at his theatre failed to disclose anything [illegible] a panacea for colds or hoarseness.

[illegible] Ward will [illegible] in Boston [illegible] leading up [illegible] with Al Jolson," [illegible] will be seen at the [illegible] night and [illegible] War field, who [illegible] 1913 [illegible] The first [illegible] Boston [illegible] are anxious [illegible] also [illegible] serious roles [illegible] a play [illegible] My friend [illegible] Lee] is that many [illegible] to stay when [illegible] them, and I have become [illegible] When that comes, if it does, I will give up the part [illegible] this the [illegible] and he wards off [illegible] but suddenly it all [illegible] to bring a response. That is [illegible]

SILK STOCKING NOTE—To properly celebrate the theatre's first birthday of "In Old Kentucky," the management of the Hollis Street Theatre announces that on Tuesday evening every woman in the house who occupies a reserved seat will be presented a pair of silk stockings.

Walter Lelt [illegible] turned his typewriter [illegible] left will be produced [illegible] Harold F. Mention [illegible] Hobbs indorsed by those [illegible] action to be now engaged in [illegible] Harper treat rical manager [illegible] Irish will produce the play.

Cort Theatre.

It is serious and her [illegible] will last on [illegible] fourth week [illegible] with Pretty Mrs. Smith at the Cort Theatre. [illegible] Pretty Mrs. Smith will be at the Cort Theatre for an all spring and Summer run that she has enlarged Summer cottage on the North Shore.

Globe Theatre.

The third week of Gus Hill's musical comedy, "Mutt and Jeff in Panama," which began with the [illegible] at the Globe tomorrow. Many favorable comments have been made on the work of Bud Fisher, Bedding as "Mutt" and Ed Gallagher as "Jeff." They are [illegible] that faithfully portray [illegible] their creations, but are both comedians of unusual merit.

Boston Theatre.

That stirring American play, "In Old Kentucky," repeating its success of [illegible] ago at the Boston Theatre, [illegible] on Monday night with a good [illegible] cast, is once again established [illegible] in the favor of Boston playgoers. The management [illegible] no expense in preparing [illegible] this special engagement of four weeks at the Boston Theatre.

Plymouth Theatre.

The crowds that have attended the performances of "Under Cover" at the Plymouth Theatre during the last season emphasizes the popularity [illegible] attained by this [illegible] tribution paid to this remarkable play. The play will soon [illegible] its fifth month, and there is as much if not more interest [illegible] now as ever before.

Hollis St. Theatre.

"The Poor Little Rich Girl" at the Hollis Street Theatre enters upon the last week of its Boston engagement tomorrow night. "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is an exception [illegible] one of the very best ever [illegible] the city, and [illegible] high [illegible] the achievements of the American stage.

Colonial Theatre.

McLellan and Caryll's [illegible] comedy, "The Little Cafe," produced [illegible] Klaw and Erlanger, begins the fourth week of its engagement at the Colonial tomorrow. It is a musical gem throughout, in which laughter, gaiety and beauty run riot.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

At the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week the moving picture features will be the photo-play, "The Perils of Pauline."

Howard Athenaeum.

Cora Livingston, the female wrestling champion, will remain another week at the Old Howard. She seeks return matches with the girls she put last week. The [illegible] bill will be furnished by "The Flirts of the Widows," headed by Blanche Ward, known as the "Star Head girl."

Grand Opera House.

"The Mona Grey" [illegible] engagement, featuring Harry Weach, the boy with a funny slide and tango twist, will be at the Grand Opera House [illegible] week. Eva Sullivan [illegible] chief of chorus girls will [illegible]

National Theatre.

"The Runaways" will enter into its third week at the National Theatre on Monday evening. [illegible] musical comedy with "The Lure of the Amazons" and a great horse race, has caused not [illegible] among theatregoers, for [illegible] ways than any play that [illegible] to the National. [illegible] song, "The Isle of the Amazons," presents a picture of gorgeous splendor.

Waldron's Casino.

Ben Welch and his burlesquers will appear at the Casino Theatre this week, with daily matinees. The predominant spirit of the entertainment offered by this well known funmaker is comedy—clean fun without extravagant horse-play or buffoonery.

St. James Theatre.

Charles Leonard Fletcher, a character impersonator, will head the bill at Marcus Loew's St. James theatre this week. Mr. Fletcher is well known in theatricals and has also starred in the legitimate drama.

Park Theatre.

Lovers of genuine Irish wit and humor should visit the Park Theatre where George Bernard Shaw, the greatest living Irish wit, is presented in his most successful comedy, "Fanny's First Play."

Tremont Theatre.

The final week of Harvey J. O'Higgins and Harriet Ford's interesting detective comedy, "The Enemy," begins at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow night. That it is a comedy has more [illegible] to [illegible] than a question of doubt, [illegible] [illegible] the director who [illegible] conducted during the opening week.

Orpheum Theatre.

Neil McKinley, called [illegible] "The Ventriloquist with Comedy," whose peculiar songs and stories have made him a popular entertainer in New York, will [illegible] of the [illegible] at Loew's Orpheum Theatre [illegible] week of the Florida Trio, [illegible] [illegible] will be another [illegible]

Scollay Square Olympia.

"A Night in the Alps," presented by the Tyrolese Troupe, will be the headline [illegible] week at the Scollay Square Olympia. The program is [illegible] will include several [illegible] of high class [illegible] in addition to a number of the best motion pictures [illegible] Henry Warren has arranged another interesting program for [illegible] week.

Scenic Temple.

The second series of the "Perils of Pauline," the most thrilling melodrama ever presented in the movies, will be the [illegible] picture attraction the first half of the coming week at the Scenic Temple.

Actors' Fund Day.

Actors' Fund Day falls this year on Friday, April 10, and on that day special benefit performances [illegible] theatres, [illegible] all except the National, Boston [illegible] the Gaiety, will [illegible] to the Actors' Fund of America. The [illegible] for it requires a [illegible] of money to carry on its work. Last year, for instance, it spent $35,156 helping the sick and destitute; $2,782.84 burying the dead, and $16,890.15 maintaining the home for actors that it has established on Staten Island, N. Y.

Concert at Majestic.

An orchestral band concert, with Florencio Constantino, the famous tenor, as a special attraction, will be given at the Majestic Theatre this evening at 8 o'clock, in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives. The program arranged gives promise of a rare treat for music-lovers and will be conducted by Sig. Stanislao Gallo, author of the new international band score whereby, with his method of orchestration, he gets from a band the full effect of an orchestra. Sig. Gallo is a composer of considerable merit and is a graduate of the Real Musicale at Florence, Italy.

This will be the first time that Mr. Constantino has sung in Boston this season, with the exception of the Boston Opera House, and he has cheerfully offered his services for this charitable work.

Baumgardt Lectures.

While B. H. Baumgardt is at Tremont Temple, Bostonians should make an effort to hear him at least once. His lecture next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon will be on "Florence, the Pearl of Italy." Florence is one great treasure house of sacred souvenirs. Here the first botanical garden and the first philosophical society were organized, and the telescope was first applied to celestial research.

"David Copperfield."

Only another fortnight remains for "David Copperfield," a photo-play, at the Tremont Temple. The production is an adaptation of Charles Dickens' famous novel and rings true to the story.

MELODRAMA'S HOLD ON PUBLIC STRONGER THAN EVER, SAYS COURTENAY

Popular Star in "Under Cover" Says Playgoers Are Keen as Ever for Real Thrills.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

If you ... Courtenay ... ear on how ... melodrama ... particular branch of ... that does not vary with succeeding seasons. Mr. Courtenay scored tonight by having more than the usual run of starting pass which is due, I believe, to the desire of the playgoers to get away from farce and drawing room comedies. The white slave play, too, has had its inning, and I may add that the season has not been particularly bright for many productions. All of these explain, but one thing that the public wants, change of fare.

ALWAYS IN THE RACE.

"If you look back with me however I think you will see that good melodrama was never out of the race for patronage. A new thrill always has free ... the front of the house to applaud. The crook play was in ... at present enjoying public attention ... time, just as some other form of melodrama ... Like the ... Actor's Sprinting Saved Child's Life

Frank Currier ... the organ grinder in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" ... an amateur athlete in his younger days and a member of the old Bergen Point Athletic Club at Bayonne, N. J.

The only time his ability as a sprinter was of any real value to him was one time in Grand Rapids, while playing with Daniel Frohman's "Esmeralda" company, when by his quick action he caught a runaway horse and saved the life of a little girl.

Since then whenever he plays in Grand Rapids he is met at the train by the little girl, now a wife and mother of two little daughters of her own.

Coming Events.

David Warfield in "The Auctioneer" will be the attraction at the Tremont Theatre next week.

Mrs. Fiske in "Mrs. Bumstead-Leigh" will come to the Hollis next week. It will be Mrs. Fiske's first visit to Boston with this comedy.

"The Queen of the Movies" is announced at the Colonial, beginning April 13.

Among the forthcoming attractions at the National will be "Robes in Topsy-land," "The Mayor of Tokio," "Peggy Kent Kitty," "The Girl from Nowhere" and "The Girl in the Clouds."

Mlle. Dazie will be the headline attraction at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week.

Bertha Kling in "When Claudia Smiles" will come to the Shubert Theatre, Monday, April 13.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's fairy comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," will be given by John Craig at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

"Quo Vadis," in motion picture form, will come to Tremont Temple on April 20.

The motion picture production of Longfellow's "Evangeline," filmed and with the exteriors on the ground in Nova Scotia, will be given for the first time in Boston at Symphony Hall on Tuesday afternoon and evenings of April 7 and 9.

Opening of Wilbur Theatre Postponed

It has been found necessary to postpone the opening of the Wilbur Theatre to Monday, April 20, owing to the delays experienced in securing from the manufacturers in New York the decorative woodwork, such as panelling, wainscoting, doorcases, etc., which forms an elaborate feature of the fashionable details of this new playhouse. While the work of completion must have been pushed through for the opening on April 13, the management felt that it was only to better advantage time and have the theatre thrown open to the public on April 20 with no traces of haste in any portion of the work apparent for the formal opening. The theatre will be known as the Edward Sheldon love drama, "Romance."

Rides But 3 Miles to Win 200 Races

Maude Parker of "In Old Kentucky" Has Unusual Experience.

Maude Parker, who plays the Madge Brierly in "In Old Kentucky" at the Boston Theatre, has won more than 200 races in the Fair Oaks stake events in the past two years, and has ridden only three miles during her career as a jockey.

The average space between stage walls is about five feet. Multiplied, the 3 are 3 times given 15,000 feet, or something like three miles.

The race has its hazards for Miss Parker, has twice been thrown to the ground, but escaped with only bruises and a shaking up. The other intelligent animals, friendly to racers, and as the time approaching for an entrance to the stage they become nervous and fidgety and occasionally give trouble to the rider.

Society in "Petticoat Ranch"

In the World of Society

"Petticoat Ranch," comprising a company of pretty maids who run a wild-west ranch and have [illegible] for their assistants, opens with clever dances, [illegible] at Jordan Hall April 16 (matinee and 17 (evening [illegible] under the auspices of the Junior Charity Club. The [illegible] raise funds for the different hospitals allied by the women of the organization.

Society will see many of its own [illegible] masquerading as men. Debutantes in short skirts, broad brimmed [illegible] and the "a la lariat" air, will kick their pretty heels and sing gay songs with the air of real cowboys.

As the name indicates the ranch is run by the "petticoats."

"Nancy" is the district attorney and also the head of the ranch. "Sue" is one of the girls on the ranch under Nancy, so is "Bob." He is hankering for the love of Sue. Then there is "Polly," in love with nobody in particular, and Ah Sing (Mrs. Robert Beckly), who does the "washee" around the ranch, and Lionel, the English earl, who arrives to finally discover that his elder brother, the legal earl, is none other than "Six-Shoot Pete" of the ranch, who is the father of Mabel. Lionel has in love with Nancy—on account of her cash chiefly. There are complications galore. Nip and Tuck, two cowboys, are funmakers.

The play was written by George B. C. Lord of Cambridge. It is sponsored by a long list of fashionable patronesses, including many of the leading society women of Boston and Brookline.

The World of Society

Among the most enjoyable of the private dancing classes which are still in progress, though the season is getting well over for such enjoyment, is that in which Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent of Dartmouth street and Mrs. H. Stanley Potter of Commonwealth avenue are alternating in the use of their town houses. Both ladies are members of the Saturday Germantown with Miss Annie Warren and Mrs. Spaulding Bryant, the latter a niece of Mrs. Potter, as well as a namesake, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Potter.

I learn from the best authority that the instructor is a young and energetic lad named Stanley Corbin, who is putting himself through Harvard College by this means and he is proving wonderfully successful in many Mrs. Snyder is by far one of the best amateurs of the city, her work being equal to that of many professionals.

Mrs. T. [illegible], a sister-in-law of Mrs. Alexander Cochrane of Commonwealth avenue, the latter a relative of the well-known writer, [illegible] in persevering [illegible] an inclement weather is concerned I happened to see her the other evening with Mr. Sullivan and a party of friends when, coming out in a frightfully drizzly night for their motor at the conclusion of a performance, she made her way in evening dress and sans chapeau to the corner of Huntington avenue and Gainsboro street, regardless of the night, endeavoring to find her chauffeur in spite of Mr. Sullivan's protestations. The party wandered on and into a cabby's vehicle, which though not so well appointed, was a decided luxury in the emergency.

Mrs. Sullivan looked especially well that evening. It seemed to me, and she wore a beautiful evening gown of silver gray satin charmeuse made up with silver sequins. The decolete corsage was outlined in soft folds of lace and the sequin bands.

Her wrap, which must have suffered from the effects of the dampness, was a stunning affair of dull bronze brown panne velvet reaching nearly to the hem of her gown and was trimmed in band of a lighter shade of the brown velvet in bias effect, while around the bottom of the garment was a passementerie of the shaded iridescent beading in the brown and gray color scheme. The gown was lined with white satin and had a warm wide collar of silver fox fur.

I saw Mrs. Arnold Lawson looking prettier than ever the other evening at the Copley-Plaza Hotel when her husband was giving a birthday "freedom" dinner to young Mr. Martin Mitchell in the corner dining room—on Monday evening, if I am not mistaken. There were some eight guests and the menus were entirely appropriate, with [illegible] for the occasion, which I understand came from the hostess' own [illegible]. Mrs. Lawson was in white which is very becoming to her style of coloring, and I understand is really took the form somewhat of a celebration for her, as she has been going out but little this Winter.

Mrs. Gardner, who is always doing something original or out of the ordinary as far as the mode of dressing is concerned, and at the same time doing it most successfully, was very stunning the other evening at a small dinner in honor of the departure of the opera stars who did or sail on the Lapland. She wore a gown that she has been wearing at the opera this season somewhat, but I hear that out of compliment to the opera as well—as, being tremendously fond of Farrar—that was the true cause of her wearing, draped over her dark purple satin gown, a superb black net shawl heavily done in silver, which was a direct importation from Egypt, where, as everyone knows, the first performance of Verdi's masterpiece was performed by order of the Khedive.

Be that as it may, the effect was a most brilliant one.

Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Bradbury, after a short visit in New York, will go to their beautiful Summer estate "Hillothea," at Manchester. They will not return to their Commonwealth avenue home until late in the Autumn.

Mrs. William L. Jackson and Miss Margaret T. Jackson of Cambridge have returned from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fiske of Commonwealth avenue have returned from abroad the greater part of last year, just returning in September.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ganson and their attractive debutante daughter, Miss Ruth Ganson, of Bay State road, who have been for several weeks at Palm Beach, are now at St. Augustine, Florida.

Miss Evelyn Converse of Park street, Newton, who has been travelling abroad with her aunt, Miss Lee, sailed yesterday on the Canopic from Genoa for Boston. Miss Converse has been abroad for the past seven months, during the first of which she studied in Paris, going from there to Switzerland for the holidays and later to Rome.

In Classic Robes, to Dance in Grassy Dell

Outdoor Players' Colony on 40-Acre Tract

Elvira Rhind, pupil of Marie Ware Laughton, founder of the players' outdoor colony at Petersboro, N. H. Miss Rhind is shown in the dance, "Greeting the Dawn"

An outdoor players' colony where Boston society leaders and women of fashion will gather to study the art of dancing in classic draperies, beneath the cool pine groves and over the grassy sward of the secluded dells of Petersboro, N. H., is the latest plan launched by a Boston woman for the revival of the interpretive dances among the members of the smart set.

Miss Marie Ware Laughton of No. 615 Pierce building is the originator and founder of the colony. Petersboro, N. H., is one of the most fashionable Summer colonies frequented by members of the exclusive set in Boston, New York and other large cities.

Miss Laughton, at the head of the School of English Speech and Expression on Huntington avenue, will preside over many acres of lawns and groves, sweeping down the sides of a beautiful plateau. On a level space will stand the central house, in bungalow effect, looking out across miles of woodland to the Connecook hills on one side, the towering heights, with giant Monadnock among them, in the other direction.

TO BUILD AMPHITHEATRE.

An amphitheatre ranged round with tall trees, recessed with vistas of green will be the centre of the outdoor plays and dances which are to be the chief interest of the colony.

The dancing and study classes will open the second week in July and will continue for six weeks. Miss Laughton will have those who come there produce at least one outdoor play and an outdoor pantomime, while the symphonic woodland dancing will continue all through the school term.

The chief dance which promises to draw hundreds of lovers of the terpsichorean art to this pastoral centre is the novel "shadow dance" esoteric, replete with pantomime, the classic and lyric movements, and an embodiment of the spirit of the Dawn, Spring and the Twilight, which is just being demonstrated by Miss Elvira Rhind of Dorchester, a pupil of Miss Laughton.

The "shadow dance" is danced in the classic robes.

It is the latest word in the poetry of motion.

It is considered the most grace-producing ensemble of movements yet developed. Society women seeking beauty of form and of movement have taken it up everywhere.

It is based upon the poem by Michael Field

"I dance, I dance, another Pyan,
A black one, dances on the lawn,
He grows with me and when I lift my hands,
His long lovely shift,
I can't out-dance him, though I try,
He dances slighter than I,
I bow my head, and so does he,
What tricks he does to play on me—
I touch the ivy in my hair,
Ivy he has and flaps there;
The spiteful thing to mock me so,
I will out-dance him, ha! ha! ho!"

REAL POETRY OF MOTION.

The shadow dance is a future ballroom novelty, in which society women beneath the shadow-throwing lights, in gracefully draped robes, will move through the fascinating measures of this entrancing movement.

To become an adept calls for continuous work and a schooling which demands the application of weeks of hard work. That is Miss Rhind's distinction in discussing the new steps.

"Grace of motion—you might say poetry—are gained by each dance of the shadow," She says: "Did you ever stand where the trees cast shadows as they waved upon the ground. Watch those motion reflections. There is motion, grace, harmony of movement.

"The human body can be trained to do the very same thing 'wave and drift' as it were, with the same soft lightness that is evidenced in the motions of the shadows.

"Into this dance the dancer must throw herself, her spirit, her mind, her body. It is an ensemble of grace when properly exemplified.

"Grace fulness — beauty — is what every woman desires. What will give it more than learning to dance in these loose classic costumes beneath the trees upon the cool grass. True grace is the art of being natural in every movement of the body. The shadow dance teaches harmony of motion before everything else. Lyric dancing, classic dancing, pantomimic dancing are all included in this wonderful dance."

Engagements

CLEMENT—BROWN.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Caroline Hinman Clement, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percival Clement of Rutland, Vt., to Horace Spalding Brown, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Thayer Brown of East Orange, N. J. Miss Clement is a sister of Mrs. John Appleton Knowles of the smart little Dover colony.

INGERSOLL—CUNNINGHAM.

An interesting engagement is that of Miss Theresa Ingersoll, eldest daughter of C. M. Ingersoll of New York, to John H. Cunningham Jr., of Gloucester street. Miss Ingersoll made her debut several years ago and has figured prominently in society ever since. Her sister Miss Caroline Ingersoll, was one of the interesting buds of the past Winter in New York. Dr. Cunningham was graduated from Harvard about twelve years ago. He is the son of Colonel and Mrs. John H. Cunningham and a brother of Mrs. Arthur Willis of Brookline.

HARDWICK—MORRISON.

Much interest is felt in the recently announced engagement of Miss Minnie Hardwick of Quincy and Lyman Howard Morrison of Braintree. Miss Hardwick was graduated from the Wood and Institute in 1906, next attending the Mansion School in Quincy and finishing her education at the Mt. Ida Seminary in Newton.

SHAW—DALTON.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Edith Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Shaw of Philadelphia, to Ensign John Dalton, U. S. N., who is attached to the training station at Newport. The wedding is to take place June 10.

KNGHT—DEPUE.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Knicht of West Roxbury have announced the engagement of their daughter, Grace May, to Chalmers Webster Depu of Ohio.

M'LEAN—FERNALD.

Among recent engagements is that of Miss Margaret Alva McLean, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Isaac McLean of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, to Walter Dana Fernald, Harvard '12, of Newark, N. J., a son of Dr. and Mrs. Walter E. Fernald of Waverley.

HOLMES—PARKER.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Etta H. Holmes of Quincy to William H. Parker of Athol.

GOODRICH—SMITH.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Professor Ernest K. Smith of Pekin, China, to Miss Grace Goodrich, daughter of the Rev. Chauncey Goodrich of Jamaica Plain. Professor Smith is the son of the Rev and Mrs. D. S. K. Smith of Marlboro.

CHATTER of SOCIETY

BY THE CHAPERONE

An interesting wedding on Easter Saturday, April 18, will be that of Miss Sarah Chase, second daughter of Mrs. William Lovering of Brookline, to Theophilus [illegible] Chandler, 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dupont Chandler of Washington street, Brookline. The ceremony will take place in St. Paul's Episcopal Church and will be followed by a reception at the Chase residence nearby. Miss Chase, who made her debut several seasons ago, has spent most of her time since in travelling abroad. She is one of the foremost heiresses of Brookline and is the second of the daughters to become a bride, the eldest Mrs. Flint, having married shortly after her debut. She is now living in Dresden, Germany. The youngest of the trio, Miss Lillian Chase, is devoted to art and cares but little for society. Mr. Chandler graduated from Harvard in 1910 and is a member of the Harvard Club and Light Battery A. Field Artillery, M. V. M. The engagement was announced early in the Winter. I saw Miss Chase the other morning when she was on her morning shopping round and was looking wonderfully fresh and attractive in a suit of dark blue cloth and one of the latest shapes of the new lacquered black straw hats.

The brides of Easter week include Miss Ethel Chandler, who has selected Easter Wednesday for her wedding day, and Miss Louisa Little's wedding to Marshall Elliott Whitelock and Katherine Amory, whose wedding to James R. Hooper, Jr., takes place in Trinity Church on Saturday, April 18. The Hooper-Amory wedding will be quite the most important of all the Easter affairs, for both families represent the very best that blue-blood can produce. Miss Chandler's wedding to Mr. Harriot is also to take place in Trinity, which seems the favored church with the smartest of Boston's brides.

Miss Little's wedding will be a very quiet, home affair, taking place at the residence of her father on Dartmouth street. The family is still in mourning for the bride's late mother, Mrs. John Mason Little.

An out-of-town wedding in which Boston, especially the North Shore contingent, is much interested, will be that of Miss Eleanor Roelker, daughter of Mr and Mrs. William G. Roelker, to Harrison Tweed of New York and the North Shore. Mr Tweed is the son of Charles H. Tweed and a graduate of Harvard. He was during his college course one of Harold Vanderbilt's chums, and he and Miss Sears have often been reported engaged. The wedding will be a June affair, taking place on the 24th at the country place of the Roelkers at East Greenwich, R. I. The wedding will be attended by only relatives and the more intimate friends. Miss Edith Roelker, who is now in Europe, will return in time to attend her sister at her wedding.

Invitations have been issued by Mr and Mrs. Arthur Comer of Brookline for the marriage of their daughter, Evelyn, to William Edward Smith, on Wednesday evening, April 15, at the Church of Our Saviour in Longwood.

The great problem which so many of our young society folk have been facing this season—that of not being able to dance with anyone but someone with whom they have practiced much—is about to be solved, for tonight there has been a meeting called by Mrs. Lydia Vilas Wyman of all the dancing teachers in Boston and a movement taken to standardize all the modern dances. The meeting takes place this evening in the balcony of the Palm Room of the Lenox at 8 o'clock.

Miss Eleanore Sears is evidently trying out every kind of automobile made, and her latest acquisition in that line is a large gray 80-horsepower one in which I saw her riding the other day. She was crouched so low in the seat that at first it was almost impossible to tell who she was. She alighted, however, on Boylston street, and was wearing a black riding habit, with russet riding boots and a derby hat, while her pretty blonde hair was thrown back without a suspicion of a fluff or curl, and if possible she looked even more mannish than ever.

Miss Grace Edwards was another prominent hostess of the week, her hospitality taking the form of a dance which she gave at her Beacon street house, and for which the whole lower floor was utilized. Before the dance Miss Edwards entertained at dinner at the University Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins, who have been at Palm Beach for some time, have just arrived at St. Augustine.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Talbot of Bay State road will spend their Summers at Marblehead hereafter, as they are building a beautiful home there which will be ready for occupancy the first of June. The Talbots have usually spent their Summers at Sharon.

Mrs. George Lee, who, recently, returned from Europe and has since been with her family at the Copley-Plaza, is now the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., at Beverly Farms.

Gowns and Gems Society Wears

Nobody could possibly look any happier than Miss Esther Foss the other afternoon when I happened to meet her walking with her fiance, Mr. Hickman, as she was just going into the Copley-Plaza for tea. Miss Foss, who has only just returned from Europe, easily bore the Paris hall mark on her modish costume. It was a gown of the dull French blue cloth so popular this Winter. The skirt, which was quite tight fitting, was very long, falling well over her feet and at the back the skirt was in plait effect, and as she walked the under skirt showed that of a wide pointed panel of black satin. The same idea was carried out on the front of the skirt. The bodice was of black satin with the loose kimono sleeves and had a wide loose flowing ruche of soft white chiffon which also forms the wide ruffs at the wrists.

The coat of the gown was of the same blue material and was made very loose. In fit, the back was in the long coatail effect, rounded off with a hem of the same closely stitched and at the high waistline which add the empire effect. Two buttons formed the trimming as they did on the front of the revers and the wide rolling collar.

With this creation Miss Foss wore a stole of muleskin and carried a muff of the same fur. The former was in a collarette effect finished in a point at the back of the coat nearly at the waistline, with a large silk tassel of the taupe shade.

Her hat was a small, close-fitting toque of black velvet, trimmed in the taupe shade of ostrich plumes. Her gloves were especially chic as they were of heavy white doeskin stitched very widely in black.

I could not help noticing the other evening at one of the large private dances the effect of Mrs. Robert D. Evans' diamond necklace. The design is certainly one of unusual workmanship as the tiny leaves of the single stones are exquisite, while the pendrops on them are of the large solitaire stones and the stems of platinum and smaller stones. This ornament is fully two inches in depth and is worn over a band of black velvet which sets it off admirably. In her gray hair, to match the neck jewels she wore, was a band of gold and diamond leaves with a single spray of the foliage in the same jewels, which stood fully four inches high. The workmanship on it was a work of art. The leaves were so entwined in the setting one could scarcely discern anything other than the scintillating diamonds unless at very close range. These were worn with a buttercup yellow satin gown, so the artistry in color was especially artistic.

Her wrap was one of the most beautiful baby lamb ones I have seen this Winter, and made in the full draped effect. This, being lined with satin, the identical shade of the gown, made the "ensemble" wonderfully effective.

Mrs. John L. Thorndike has conceived the idea most cleverly of having a shawl made into such a wrap that at first glance one would never suspect the garment had been anything but a wrap. I refer to one of the new mustard brown shades of crepe de chine which her modiste evidently spent many hours over in order not to cut the original. It comes very nearly to the hem of her evening gown and is finished in a broad band of the same shade of silk. The trimming is especially original as across the back of the shoulders the wide knotted part of the fringe forms a deep yoke to meet the large kimono sleeves. Just below the knees is a huge knot of the same shade in the brown heavy silk cord which catches up the draped wrap most ingeniously without any apparent discomfort or necessity of "pleats" to one of the most exquisite bits of embroidery imaginable.

The sleeves are finished at the elbow in the deep silk fringe which falls long enough to cover the arms and hands. The front has the wide fringe forming a heavy jabot effect and the entire affair is lined with heavy light brown charmeuse. I happened to see this worn over a deep bid rose creation which color scheme was unusually effective.

Miss Frances Howard, who is in California, will return East in time to welcome her mother, Mrs. William H Howard, on her return from Europe and they will go at once to their Summmer home at West Manchester. Mrs. Howard sailed last week for Europe, but has stay abroad is to be short.

VINCENT CLUB GIRLS RALLY FOR ANNUAL SHOW

BALLET GIRLS, FIFERS AND DRUMMERS SELECTED; MISS SALTONSTALL AS "WINGED MERCURY" TO FLY ONTO STAGE

Miss Mary Hemenway.

Miss Marie Ames.

Miss Charlotte Hemenway

Miss Alice [illegible]

Mrs. Grace Hall Roosevelt, the only matron in the Vincent Club show

While the "feature" girls of "A Modern Pandora," the Vincent Club show which takes place April 29, 30 and May 1 in Jordan hall, has been busy with the dances, ballet and military movements of the show the members of the cast have only recently begun work on their parts.

Last week the fifers and drummers for the corps were selected as follows: Fifers, Miss O. Ames, Miss P. Sears, Miss Alice Thorn Pierce, Miss M. Prescott, Miss D. Ball, Miss Anna Gardner, Miss E. Parker, Miss Rose Peabody, Miss Helen Winsor; drummers, Miss Violet Sawtelle, Miss M. Agassiz, Miss Margaret Thomas (base drum), Miss Helen Peabody, Miss M. C. Amery, Miss Barbara Burr and Miss Mary Thorndike.

The members of the drill have also been chosen as follows: Captain, Miss Josephine Rantoul; Miss B. Bowles, Mrs. Samuel Fellows, Miss Grace Brooks, Miss D. Mandell, Miss Margery Lee, Miss Helen Rice, Miss Ruth Gaston, Miss Gertrude Hunnewell, Miss C. Wharton, Miss Hope Norman and Miss Edith Foster.

Miss Edith Prescott has been selected to make the fourth in the dance with Miss Eleanor Wheeler, Miss Rosamond Elliot and Miss Katherine Doty.

The "big trouble" now for the show managers is the "box" from which the characters in the play come forth. Somebody suggested having a ladder inside a huge box. Then when Pandora or anybody else was to make a debut from the box she might climb up the ladder inside and jump down or climb down on the outside. But that ladder never would do—it wouldn't work, and now new plans are afoot. Another quandary is as to how Miss Rose Saltonstall, who as Mercury, shall make her entrance "flying through the air."

Of course wires can be strung and Miss Saltonstall can execute pirouetting down through space into the stage centre, kicking up her heels against the ozone, but it hasn't been quite worked out to the satisfaction of Miss Saltonstall.

Miss Edith Pitz, daughter of Mrs. Peninsula Barber (Clarke) of No. 18 Arlington street, is this year doing the publicity for the show.

In the World of Society

On Tuesday April 21, at 12 a. m., Mrs May Alden Ward will discuss Current Events at the Tuileries. The proceeds will be given to the Roxbury Notre Dame Alumnae fund.

The Tauets Society has issued cards for a dance to be held on Wednesday evening, April 15, from 8 until 12 o'clock, in Whitney Hall, Brookline. The matrons are Mrs Arthur Alden Ditchine, Mrs Carleton Hodgkinson, Mrs Daniel Edwards Kennedy and Mrs. Earle Reed Potter. The mistress of ceremonies will be Mrs Fannie Bryant Adams.

Among the delightful events of the early week was the evening dance given by Miss Lola Wilson Wyman at Jordan [illegible] for a large, interested and distinguished audience.

Another delightful event was the recital which Miss Katherine Foote gave Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph Marrill on Glen Ridge road, Dedham. Among those assisting Miss Foote were Miss Josephine Hewins and Miss Gladys Joyce. Miss Foote and Miss Hewins sang selections by Arthur Foote.

New Figures in Mother Goose

MRS. S. P. CLEMENS IN TITLE ROLE; MISS MULLER IN FINAL EXHIBITION

"Mother Goose," with a glittering array of children costumed carefully, schooled in their parts and on skates in the pageant which has already proved one of the season's much-discussed hits, will be the drawing feature tomorrow night at the Boston Arena. Mrs. Stanley P. Clemens of the Hotel Westminster, the manager of the pageant, will take the part of Mother Goose, and with cane and cloak will preside over the destinies of her children during the evening. "Mother Goose," fittingly, will wind up the season of Boston's popular skating rink. Heretofore Miss Elsbeth Muller will give their final exhibition during the pageant, the last before their departure for Australia. A hundred new features have been added to the nursery extravaganza that will make it a fitting climax of the skating season.

A cast of nearly two hundred characters will be on skates and all will join in a monster skating carnival at the close of the pageant after Mother Goose has replaced within her book for the last time and closed the covers behind her.

Showers of foliage, music from the balcony, streamers of light from hundreds of incandescent bulbs, fantastic costumes, an enthroned king and queen dispensing hospitality to the subjects of Old Mother Goose, and sharing with the fairies the evening's honors, are all to help feature the evening. Many new characters have been added to the original cast, which will include a host of youthful society maids. The pageant is under the patronage of a long list of Boston's most prominent society matrons.

One of the notable features will be the exhibition of Dr. Kingsley Field of London, whose skating has won him notable honors abroad.

Miss Clara Kingman and Miss Margaret Harris have written a song, the "Four and Twenty Blackbird" group, and Mistress Mary will this time be taken by Miss Elizabeth Brassel.

Many of the "Flowers" parts will be taken by new characters, including:

Greta Allen, Margaret and Rose Jacobs, Josephine Joyce, Muriel Reinhart, Lillian Gately, Ruth Senra, Marguerite Flood, Constance Flood, Margaret Sanders, Grace S. Mosher, Beatrice Varney, Grace Manning and Helen Merkoff.

Among the group of "Robin Red Breasts," another new feature, will appear Dorothy Blake, Mary Ewing, Oliver Hazan, George Blake, Hattie Swindlehurst, Marion Hayes and Lillian Drennan.

Among the new characters added to the cast are Ruth Alexander, Goldenlocks; Ina Hawkes, little girl who carries the roses to the queen; Brownell Hole, Humpty Dumpty; Frederick Woodworth, Dr. Foster; Charles L. Weeks, Deedle Deedle Dumpling; P. L. Ramsay, Dandy Dinky Ditty; Hazel Ramage, pretty little maid; Ernest Dutton, Jack B. Nimble; William Tonkens, Soloman Grundy; Frank Gately, Peter White; Burlen Hahn, Dr. Foster's son, who has a little man with the little wife in a wheelbarrow.

ROXBURY

At 7:45 o'clock this evening, in the Mission Church, Professor Francis Fasnacht, organist of the Mission Church, will produce Dubois' "Seven Last Words," with his accomplished choir of seventy-five voices. John McGreevy, the tenor, and Thomas Carry, the basso, for many years have been the soloists in the Mission Church. Miss Ursula M. O'Hare, of the New England Conservatory of Music, will be the soprano soloist on this occasion. This is the second time in eighteen years that this masterpiece has been produced in the same manner.

SOMERVILLE

A license recently received at City Hall tells of the marriage of Miss Winifred Wilder Yerks of No. 4 Park avenue, West Somerville, and George Richardson Pond, formerly of Chicago, and now a Boston newspaper man. The ceremony was performed at Taunton, Sunday, March 1, by the Rev. Dr. J. Vanor Garton, a former pastor of the West Somerville Baptist Church.

A musical program will be given at next Tuesday evening's meeting of the Old Powder House Club by Miss Virginia T. Rodney, violoncello, Rudolph Ringwall, violin, and Francis W. Snow, piano.

The annual meeting of the Somerville Visiting Nursing Association will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building on Wednesday afternoon, April 15. Miss Ida Cannon of the social service department of the Massachusetts General Hospital will be the speaker.

The Somerville Sons and Daughters of New Hampshire Club has reelected Water Commissioner Frank E. Merrill president for another year; Ex-Mayor Charles A. Burns, vice-president; Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson, secretary; George H. Stetson, treasurer, the officers and Fred G. Noyes, Charles M. Ambrose, Fred Elwarren, press secretary to the mayor of Somerville, Mrs. Clara K. Abbott, and Mrs. W. A. Bastman, executive committee.

Miss Faith H. Whittaker, teacher of domestic science at the Capen School, Northampton, is spending the Spring vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willis R. Whitaker, on Lycoming street.

Principal Assessor Harry Van Ideratine has been chosen president of the Union Square Merchants' Association to succeed E. E. Seiden. J. Robert Fenelon, also a principal assessor, is vice-president; J. C. McLeod, treasurer and Thomas M. Nolan, secretary.

Dr. Frederick N. Stephens of Winter Hill has gone to New York, where he will be engaged in professional study until July, when he will go to Europe to remain until September. Mrs. Stephens and daughter, Beatrice, will spend the Summer at St. John, N. B.

Miss Rebecca Jones, a student in the Capen School, Northampton, is spending the Spring vacation with Mr. and Mrs. William Preble Jones, No. 184 Maple avenue, Winter Hill.

Ramona Rebekah Lodge, No. 11, I. O. O. F., of West Somerville, will initiate sixteen candidates next Thursday night.

CAMBRIDGE

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. is arranging for a sale of domestic and useful articles at the building on April 21.

Mary Antin will lecture on "The Responsibility of American Citizenship" in Brattle Hall, Friday afternoon, May 1.

The affairs held by this popular club are always very enjoyable and largely attended. Miss Anna M. Meade, president, together with Miss Louise J. Carr, treasurer, and Miss Bertha Kelley, secretary, are planning to give their guests an evening of rare enjoyment.

Foresters to Meet

Preparations are being made by the members of the Massachusetts Order of Foresters in Western Massachusetts for the annual convention which will be held in the Municipal Auditorium, Springfield, May 27, and the committees are holding weekly meetings arranging for the details.

[illegible] will include a concert and reception in the auditorium, Monday evening, May 25, to delegates and their friends, who will be in the city for the annual session on the day following.

May 27 will be given over completely to the business of the convention, while the ladies are arranging for a sightseeing tour of Springfield in special electric cars and an auto tour will be made to Lake Side Park, where dinner will be served and the afternoon given over to games and sports. James H. Brown, High Inside Sentinel, is chairman of the committee of fifteen arranging for the reception.

The officers of the general committee include Timothy J. Collins, Past High Junior Councilor, chairman; Anna L. Driscoll, vice-chairman; Thomas H. Lovett, treasurer, and Kathryn C. Fitzgerald, secretary. Former Mayor William P. Hayes is chairman of an executive committee of fifty-five members, divided into eleven subsidiary committees of five each, for distribution of the work of the general committee.

K. C. K. CLUB TO MEET GUESTS AT MAY PARTY.

The K. C. K. Girls, one of the most popular clubs of girls in the Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury districts, are making arrangements for their annual May party. It will be held in Jamaica Plain on Monday evening, May 4. Many novel features will be introduced by the young girls. Miss Mary E. Mahoney, president; Miss Gertrude M. McCabe, secretary, and Miss Helen F. Murphy, treasurer, will be in charge. They will be assisted by some of the popular young men of the district together with the other members of the club.

John F. Hurley will be floor director; Michael J. McKay, assistant floor director, and Frank J. Dolan, chief of the following aids: Miss Mary Conway, Miss Alice Donovan, Miss Gertrude Kenney, Miss Ella Sheath McDonald and William Glynn, Ernest Dolan, Fred McCormick and George Sullivan.

When Madeline Made Up Her Mind

The low prices quoted in Montgomery Ward and Company's Catalogue, convinced her that even small savings and earnings are sufficient to make and suitably maintain a home.

It's Time to Show Suburban Real Estate!

During the Winter many prudent men have decided to buy their own homes. The same intent can be aroused in others. Those who almost bought a year ago will be in the market again. The call of the suburb is being heard. It will be heeded by thousands who are prepared to act.

Real Estate Men Should Realize These Facts

Today is the day to begin planning—to begin preparing for an aggressive advertising campaign in the Boston American. For the American is read by a class of home-loving people who want pure air and playgrounds for the children—who appreciate the comfort of roomy houses with all modern conveniences—who have schools and transportation facilities in mind.

This is the time for enterprising real estate firms to advertise their holdings—to argue the advantages of suburban residences—to educate the public regarding the desirability of their developments. Advertising will reveal the whereabouts of scores who are ready to invest, making direct returns possible.

But Immediate Action Is Necessary

The selling season is just beginning. This is the best period in which to do missionary work—in which to attract attention to particular offerings—in which to word-paint the exclusive features of different sections. Plant the seed now. Cultivate the American's fertile field of possible home-buyers and home-builders. Learn who they are—where they are. Get your maps and instructive literature into their hands. Convince them and sell them while the season is favorable.

Don't count the expense of preliminary advertising as soon as it appears. Spread the cost over the Spring months and see for how much less you will get results later on—advertising is cumulative. That's a good hint. And it's sound advertising sense, no matter what newspaper you use. So, if you want to break your best past record, get into action right away.

ATTRACTIVE COPY WILL CREATE BIG SALES

Tell your story completely and convincingly and your advertising will strengthen the desire to possess and will develop profitable sales. Only don't put off another moment. Today is opportunity time—this very now!

CHARLTON IN TERROR AS HIS TRIAL NEARS

American in Italian Prison Worried at Waning Interest in His Behalf.

FEARS SEVERITY OF PENALTY

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

Special Wireless to Boston American.

ROME, April 4.—Writing to a friend here from Como jail, where he is awaiting trial, Porter Charlton says that unless something is done to insure the appearance at his trial of some witnesses favorable to him and efforts are made to hire at least one allenist to fight the government experts as to mental condition at the time of the crime he committed, he is almost sure to get the longest sentence ever meted out to any assassin of the brigand type.

Since Deputy Forzio withdrew as one of counsel retained to defend him all preparations for Charlton's defence have been discontinued and today the young man is practically left without a legal adviser, with the exception of ex-Judge Palmieri, who is in New York and cannot be of much help to him.

At the same time the King's prosecutor at Como is preparing to aid Charlton in any way, except by assigning to him some lawyer to defend him when the trial begins. Apparently Charlton is under the impression that the prosecution, with nobody looking after his interests, will obtain the maximum penalty.

"DESERTED BY FRIENDS."

To his Roman friends Charlton makes no secret of the fact that his relatives and friends in the United States have all deserted him and that unless some one hastens to his help he will not be able to place before the court even the "extenuating circumstances" which is refused only to the most hardened criminals.

Explaining the latest developments in his case, Charlton says that for the last three months he has not received a single word from his father, who is now a practising attorney in Porto Rico. Warm as the appeals to him have been, Judge Charlton has not, for reasons yet undisclosed, deemed it opportune to take direct interest in his son's trial. This has made the young man extremely despondent.

Those Americans who considered it their patriotic duty to retain Deputy Forzio during the preliminary investigation, feel now that they have done more than their share of duty, and if the prisoner's father refuses to contribute to his son's defense fund they must withdraw.

Owing to the limitations imposed upon him by the stringent rules of Italian prisons, one of which forbids a prisoner to write more than two letters a month, Charlton has not yet been able to acquaint his friends with the actual status of his case. It is known, however, that of the long list of witnesses residing in the United States which the prisoner submitted to the authorities in order that their evidence might be taken through Italian consular agents, only a few have been considered important enough to be called to appear before the Italian Consuls in the various cities in which they reside.

HEALTH IS GOOD.

Among such witnesses are doctors who examined Charlton during his detention in the Trenton prison, but their testimony serves no practical purpose unless corroborated by an Italian alienist.

Deputy Forzio's defence was based on the theory that on the night of the crime, following a two months' debauch in course of which Charlton imbibed tremendous quantities of alcohol, the defendant was not morally responsible for his actions.

In course of long examinations by the investigator Judge, Charlton became convinced that so far not a single witness favorable to him has been heard. This has induced a state of melancholia which the prison physicians are trying to counteract by special treatment. He is allowed more freedom and more books than Italian prisoners and of late he has dropped into the study of Italian, which in the course of a few months he has mastered to the extent of reading and writing and making himself understood by an examining magistrate.

According to the story from the prison Charlton also is suffering from delusions. Recently while a wild storm was raging on Lake Como, the echoes of which Charlton distinctly could hear in his cell, he was suddenly seized by violent agitation and loudly exclaimed: "I heard the voice of Mary Scott."

His finally was quieted but since then a wild expression in his eyes as of a man hounded by ghosts is distinctly noticeable. Owing to delay caused by taking testimony in the United States, Charlton's trial is not expected to be called before the Fall term of Como assizes.

"Dummy" to Prison as Russian Editor

Newspapers Adopt Scheme to Protect Real Heads.

ODESSA, April 4.—A scheme by which Russian newspapers prevent their real editors from being imprisoned has come to light in the case of the "dummy" of the "Novosia Fracdal," who has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for an editorial article which appeared in the paper. The editor turned out to be an illiterate laborer of Riga, who was registered as the "responsible editor," according to the Russian law.

Husband's Diary Wins Her Divorce

PARIS, April 4.—A wife produced in Divorce Court the following entries in her husband's diary:

February 1—For a mistake which she recognized was mainj; here she called me an idiot. I replied with "scum."

April 3—She called me a lazy stupid. I insulted her until she was silent.

July 25—She began one of her curtain lectures. She got on my nerves, so I twisted her wrist.

The decree was granted.

Elsie Janis Assumes Role of a Manager

Makes Alfred Butt of the Palace Talk Terms for New Act.

LONDON, April 4.—Elsie Janis has become a "manager," according to Alfred Butt, proprietor of the Palace Theatre, where Miss Janis is to open in the new Revue in a fortnight.

"When Miss Janis was in London last Summer," Mr. Butt explained today, "I signed her to appear at the Palace. When she arrived back here a few weeks ago she informed me she had brought two other artistes and I must find places for them on the bill.

"I saw them today for the first time and asked them both to sign contracts. To my amazement they said they couldn't sign, that they already were under contract to Miss Janis. I asked her what it all meant and she told me she had both these music hall artistes tied up tight for twelve months. If I wanted their services I must negotiate with their manager—and I did."

West End Tailors Tinker with Styles

Startling Novelty in Men's Evening Dress Not Expected to Be Popular.

LONDON, April 4.—Some of the West End tailors are again making endeavors to introduce novelties of color and cut into evening dress.

Many men are wearing blue evening suits, but these are of so dark a hue that they look black under artificial light. Men's evening innerness cloaks are now frequently lined with silk, a fashion set by a conjurer in Gilbert Chesterton's play, "Magic," at the Little Theatre.

It is not thought, however, that many of the startling novelties which are being designed will catch on, although a number of men are having evening waistcoats cut from the silk which forms their dress coats.

The great objection to all these innovations is that the present system of rigid uniformity in men's evening dress is a great blessing to the poorer man, for he thus is always on an equality with the millionaire.

Paris Dancers Play a Prank in Masks

Young Society Men in Black Tights Originate a Carnival Surprise.

PARIS, April 4.—Parie is still talking about the Carnival Surprise invented by several young society men.

The Duchess de Mouchy was given a dinner party the other evening when suddenly the door opened and six men dressed solely in black tights with black masks entered and after dancing weird steps for five minutes, left again. The whole affair passed in perfect silence and took the hostess completely by surprise.

The uninvited dancers then went through the same pantomime at the Countess d'Haussonville's mansion. Next it was the turn of the Marquise de Indre to be visited, and finally the Countess de Rougement, who was Miss Edith Clapp, of New York. The names of the black dancers remain a mystery to every hostess and her guests.

Doctors Show Peril to Health in Styles

"Elastic Corsets Hygienic; Network Corsage Produces Pleurisy."

PARIS, April 4.—Warm, loose-fitting gowns, light hats and flat-bottomed shoes are ideal attire for women from a medical standpoint, according to leading Paris savants questioned this week concerning the present fashions.

"The present vogue for elastic corsets is hygienic," said Dr. Francis Heckel. "The network corsage, however, renders women liable to bronchitis and pleurisy. Their footwear styles are harmful. Louis XV. heels make women walk solely on their big toes."

"Hats ought never to weigh more than two ounces." Dr. Lucien Jacquet said. "The stifled shirt isn't injurious to health."

Professor Edmond Perrier said: "Don't use colored wigs or dye your hair. Both are conducive to baldness."

Russia Is Renewing Outrages Upon Jews

Thirty-Three Persons Arrested at Prayer on Trumped Charges.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 4.—The persecution of the Jews grows unremittingly. Each day is bringing news from all parts of Russia of fresh outrages.

During the recent Jewish holidays thirty-three persons were arrested in the town of Gitomir in Wohlynia, while assembled at prayer, on the charge that they belonged to the Zionist organisation.

The arrests caused great indignation throughout south west Russia, all the more so as this week the sentences of Gitomir imposed sentences of from one to three months' imprisonment without trial upon those arrested, which included a sick man over seventy years old and a little girl of ten years.

$60,000 Needed for German Art at Fair

Berlin Patrons Determined Upon Adequate Showing at San Francisco.

BERLIN, April 4.—The Society for the Promotion of German Art Abroad will solicit contributions for an additional $60,000 to defray the cost of sending exhibits to the Panama exposition.

Considerable sums have been raised from private sources, but the society, convinced of the vital necessity of making a really fine and comprehensive display, is broadening its plans.

It is predicted the German art exhibit will not only be of exceptionally high grade, containing works of such eminent artists as Max Liebermann, Louis Corinth and Leistikow, but will be very nearly as large as the French exhibit.

D'ANNUNZIO IN GALLERY FRAME TALK OF PARIS

Thousands Flock to Luxembourg to See Portrait by Miss Brooks, "American Hermitess."

Special Wireless to Boston American.

PARIS, April 4.—People flock to the Luxembourg Museum by thousands this week to see the portrait of Gabriella D'Annunzio by Miss Romaine Brooks, the American painter, which, as already has been cabled, the French government has just purchased.

The picture hangs in a prominent position in the main hall, not far from the painting of "A Little Boy" by Walter Dannot, president of the Society of American Painters in Paris, which the government acquired last December.

Miss Brooks' work bears all the vivid traits of portraiture which have shocked several continental society women who expected the conventional flattery in the portraits they commissioned the American artist to paint.

The d'Annunzio portrait was painted when the noted Italian playwright and poet was recovering from illness in the south of France a year or two ago. It is a striking three-quarter figure and face, bearing the stamp of mysticism and wearing the mask of tragedy. The poet is standing on the seashore and the waves are seen breaking in the background.

On account of her passionate devotion to her art, Miss Romaine Brooks is known in Europe as the "American hermitess." She was born in Rome, of American parents, was educated in the United States, and returned to Rome to study art. Later she went to Florence, where she did a remarkable copy of a painting which is considered as good as the original in the Uffizi gallery.

Afterwards she returned to Capri, where she lived in perfect seclusion, devoting all her waking hours to painting. She exhibited in the Paris Salon in 1910 and the London Academy in 1911, her portraits then creating a spirited controversy on account of their extreme faithfulness and the seeming crudity of her style.

After the d'Annunsio painting her best known work is a portrait of the Countess de Noailles, the famous French poetess. D'Annunzio's opinion of Miss Brooks' art is given in a recent magazine article:

"She is the cleverest color symphonist known in modern art. Her work reminds one strongly of Whistler."

Mrs. Pat Campbell's Wit Bests Shaw

Playwright's Boorish Interruption at Rehearsal Is Neatly Rebuked.

LONDON, April 4.—Theatrical London is chortling gleefully today over the "passage des mots" between Bernard Shaw and Mrs Pat Campbell in which Shaw came off second best.

It was during a rehearsal of "Pygmalion," which has its premiere on April 11 at His Majesty's Theatre, Shaw interrupted the rehearsal before the entire company, and left it, and called the attention of Mrs. Pat to the fact that she was playing a cockney role and that it might be well if she attempted a cockney dialect.

"Undoubtedly you are right," said Mrs. Campbell sweetly, "and if you will be so good as to read a few pages of my part I may be able to grasp the character as you wish it played."

For the remainder of the rehearsal Mrs. Campbell read the lines with her richest Irish brogue.

New Anaesthetic Is Tested at Cambridge

Combination of Urea and Alcohol Declared Better Than Ether.

LONDON, April 4.—Urethane, the new anaesthetic of immense interest in the scientific world. Various experiments from which great hopes are aroused have been made at Cambridge, with animals as the subjects. The drug is a combination of urea and alcohol, administered hypodermically.

After a period of drowsiness the subject passes into a state of deep unconsciousness, becomes insensible to pain, and therefore any operation may be carried out with perfect security.

The advantage claimed for urethane is that heart failure never occurs where it has been properly used. Another advantage is that its administration is not accompanied by the choking sensation experienced with ether and chloroform.

Amy Neil, Chicago Violinist, Triumphs

Protege of Late Joseph Fels Gives First Recital.

LONDON, April 4.—Miss Amy Merson Neil, a young Chicago violinist and protege of the late Joseph Fels of Philadelphia, gave her first recital at Steinway Hall Thursday afternoon, and won the approval of the critics.

Miss Neil played at a ship's concert two years ago while crossing the Atlantic. Mr Fels was a fellow passenger and was so delighted with her talent that he offered to double any sum the passengers would subscribe toward her musical education.

Coreys Plan Active Paris Social Season

PARIS, April 4.—Since their arrival at their Chateau de Villegenis, near Paris, after a stay of several months in the United States, Mr. and Mrs. William Ellis Corey have been making extensive changes in the chateau preparatory to a stirring social season. Mrs. Corey is one of the most prominent hostesses in the American colony and is a favorite in the diplomatic set.

HERE ARE THE CONTEST RULES

Read Carefully—Then Save for Reference

The Boston American $4,000 Picture Puzzle Competition is a contest of skill and judgment, open to all readers of the American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

One hundred and fifty-five cash prizes will be given, absolutely free, by the Boston American to the winners.

Every one of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participation in this contest.

The contest will consist of eighty-five puzzle pictures, to be printed, one each day, commencing Thursday, April 2, in the daily and Sunday American, first picture Thursday, April 2.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, will not debar any one from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two, three, four or five SETS of answers, but each SET must contain only FIVE answer to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded in any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written or typewritten on the official form ahead by the Boston American, or on a page of some back form to itself, according, and either to the name of the picture to be guessed, or the number of the picture to be guessed. Every answer must be clear and all answers must be numbered consecutively, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

Do NOT send your solutions in "list" form, i. e., do not write answers under one another, as in a column of figures.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the largest number of correct answers, according to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, duplicate awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy. Ties cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will be notified to that effect.

Under no circumstance should contestants send their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day, and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered to the Boston American Contest Headquarters, at No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, in the specified time limit. It is the contestant's duty to see that his answers are in before the close of the contest, to prepare their answers, so that they can be delivered, and to attend to the delivery.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Picture Puzzle Competition Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

As all answers will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rate, as mail of this character goes to the dead-files as first-class matter. The Boston American can not waive the right to refuse any mail of answers on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Only one set of answers will be counted from any one family.

A list of correct numbered answers will be printed in the Sunday American each week during the life of the contest. This list, appearing each Sunday, will contain among others, the titles of the pictures to be used during the week beginning with each Sunday following.

Contestants may desire further information about the puzzles or the contest. Address letters pertaining thereto to the "Picture Puzzle Competition Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass." Questions will be answered as far as practicable in the columns of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may call at the office in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any changes in, or additions to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the contest, and all the decisions of the American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the enterprise made of to be made.

Still waters are the deepest.
Such a father, such a son.
Success is never blamed.
Poverty hath pinched me.
No Ruling from fate.
Never mind a good offer.
Absence is to love.
A bird in the hand is glad to see it.
All are not saints that go.
All the fat is in the fire.
All's ill, all's well.
An ill wind that blows nobody good.
All goes where gold weighs.
A short horse is soon curried.
A still tongue, small thanks.
A wise man knows his own.
A word is enough to the wise.
A work well begun is half ended.
A good deed is never lost.
Fine words buy no barley.
Fine feathers make fine birds.
Be just to all, but trust not all.
Believe well, and have well.
Best to bend while a twig.
Better be safe than sorry.
Better be happy now wise.
Blood's thicker than water.
Fear is stronger than love.
Polish hides a flaw.
More afraid than hurt.
Never mind a good offer.
Few words are best.
Faults are not to be confessed.
Parting leaves the heart.
Truth is always such.
Good to please fellows.
Good heart, small cost.
Have a rose to pluck with you.
Hours of pleasure are short.
Hot love is soon cold.
I am both to charge me still.
I'll give my life to keep.
Last folks take the most pains.
Love and you are find.
Truth is a means, not an end.
Wedlock's a padlock.
Wee is that wee does.

PICTURE NO. 5 IN TOMORROW'S EVENING AMERICAN

EUROPE AN ARMED CAMP, TROUBLED BY MENACING SPECTRE OF GREAT WAR

Jean Finot Calls for the Application of the "American Remedy" to Take Load Off Backs of Nations Which Are Being Driven Into Bankruptcy and Despair—Peace Necessary for Common Good

Jean Finot, philosopher and pioneer of the new doctrine of optimism, who numbers among his intimate friends the leading statesmen of Europe, appeals to the United States in the following article, specially written for the AMERICAN, to save Europe from the cataclysm to which she is drifting, owing to the blind piling-up of armaments.

By JEAN FINOT.

The dramatists and novelists of Europe have often made use of that most agreeable theme in which a manufacturer or tiller of the soil is brought face to face with ruin owing to slavery to routine, when at the critical moment an American relative, close or distant, but always young and energetic, saves the situation.

To my mind it is high time we began to extend the application of the "American remedy" from the life of individuals to that of the nations of Europe.

The Old World is now in a lamentable situation. Her international politics are bankrupt; the alliances of the European peoples, made in the interests of peace, only sow the seeds of war and prepare the way for it.

Europe is transformed into an army camp, troubled always by the menacing spectre of battles near and imminent. She is ruining herself by the fruitless piling up of armaments and shattering her nerves in the demoralizing expectancy of perpetual conflicts.

BARRIER TO SOCIAL REFORM.

While the Fourth Estate—the workers and all the elements of discontent—is murmuring at her doors, whilst she is threatened with internal revolution compared with which foreign invasion is as nothing, Europe continues to drift aimlessly, the prey of the still-born coalitions.

The Old World is somewhat like a shipwrecked man without a compass. Some historian of the twenty-fifth century will find it difficult to understand how so-called civilized nations came to submit to a lingering death due to a kind of contagious hysteria.

And while the peoples of Europe no longer know whither they are being led, their leaders know still less where it is best to lead them.

With the spread of education and culture, the hunger of the poor and the disinherited of the earth has become more intense.

Statesmen have given to the masses political rights which confer on them the power to destroy the existing order of things without giving them the possibility of a dignified and human existence.

Meanwhile, parties in the principal countries are concerned only with finding means of bleeding the rich, without troubling how to feed the poor and make them happy.

WALKING BACKWARD

To an impartial observer we are living in a topsy-turvy world. We still walk, but we walk backward.

The vitality of humanitarian achievements — solidarity of the peoples, respect of individual rights and liberties—is weakening day by day. Brute force is the dream of today, with all the aggressive amenities it connotes. Suspicion is taking the place of confidence.

Great peoples eye one another with the hostility of china dogs; little people, in the fear of being devoured by the great, are making their own ruin by shouldering costly and perhaps futile sacrifices.

A small kingdom, very agreeable and highly civilized (Sweden) recently presented to the world the lugubrious spectacle of nearly every peasant in the country pleading with their King to place them under arms as quickly as possible, thus increasing their military taxation.

That young democracy, Switzerland, dreading the vultures, is increasing her armaments. In peace times she numbers 400,000 men!

Germany believes she is menaced by Russia, France by Germany, Italy by France, Austria by Russia—every country fears attack by her neighbor.

At present every nation is whetting its teeth for a big bone—Asia Minor.

The Balkan countries have been generously allowed to divide among themselves Turkey's European provinces. But the Great Powers are saving her provinces in Asia Minor, the most toothsome morsel, for themselves, the little states being warned to keep their hands off.

While Turkey is writhing in her supreme agony, the Great Powers gathered round the moribund body are quarrelling over her remains. In reality the present acute armament war and the fresh string of insults handled about between France, Germany, Italy, England and Russia arise only from the prospective division of the spoils.

HUGE COST OF ARMAMENTS.

Armaments, which seemed to have reached their limit a few years ago, are still growing daily.

It would seem that the international morale can survive no longer and that the peaceful aspirations of the people are in the throes of their last convulsions.

Christian white races, unbalanced by inside fears and troubled by real unsatiated hunger, have thus come down to the level of cannibals.

What must we expect tomorrow?

If all this ignitable material, the assembling of which is ruining the Old World, is one day to explode, what a terrible rebuff for the logic of our civilization!

Let us remember that the expenditure of armament in Europe during the past twenty years has increased by some two thousand million dollars. The taking of this vast sum from the prosperity of the people has rendered almost impossible a real betterment of the lot of the working classes and the realization of projects so dear to modern democracy.

But since the futility of these strivings must sooner or later become manifest, what discredit must fall on governments who in their powerlessness and lack of foresight were unable to prevent the development of such collective madness!

If, on the other hand, the friction of so many compressed forces should render the terrible explosion inevitable, it cannot but result in an age-long check to the finest conquests of the human mind in our time, if not in their complete destruction.

The mirage of "ententes" opposed to "alliances" is reassuring to no one. All these grotesque or gruesome coalitions only make bad worse, for they give no promise of good.

Therefore it is high time to sound the tocsin and cry to the rescuers.

But where is the troubled, appealing look of Europe to rest? Incontestably on the "American cousin." Grown great in their shelter from external dangers, the United States have the most liberal, the most humane international conceptions. Their youth and their energy have preserved them from a number of evils bound up with our old civilization.

We are in the position of an effete, decadent fruit which stands in need of new and revivifying blood.

And Brother Jonathan must come to the help of his tired, overworked old parent. He must come to Europe and take a keener interest in the preoccupations of the Old World.

The ocean which can now be crossed in five days links rather than separates the Old and the New Worlds. Americans and European interests have become and will become more and more identical. The financial and economic crisis which shake Europe reverberate in the United States, and vice versa.

A European war would involve the United States in irreparable losses. On the other hand, a settled state of peace in Europe would bring years of incalculable prosperity to America.

And what about the community of human culture which might transform the civilized world into one big family, were it not for the misunderstandings which now separate the European peoples?

Not only have the United States motives for intervening in European affairs, but it is also their duty to do so. They have, be it added, the right to intervene. Not one in Europe would nowadays attempt to enact Monroe.

As far as the principles of intervention go, the civil codes of all countries give to their wards the right to step in if your neighbor's behavior does you hurt.

The solidarity of the two hemispheres being indisputable, the right of the United States to take a hand in the world's political affairs is beyond doubt. From the very fact that they are less directly interested in European matters, the United States would bring to bear a clearer and more impartial view of our affairs.

On the other hand, Europe might be of not less valuable assistance in the evolution of the American people.

There is another consideration to take into account, the old conception of, Americans as very wealthy but fundamentally barbarian belongs to the past.

Nowadays we see in North America something different from merely a country of millionaires, trusts and unassailable snobs. Europe has begun justly to admire not only her business genius but also the profound and original thought of her writers, savants and men of action.

Meddling Women Cause British Army Revolt

MANY OF ITS LEADERS COULDN'T RUN A COAL YARD, DECLARES A CRITIC

English Lions Now Said to Be More Like Mice

VISCOUNTESS MASSEREENE (at left) and the Marchioness of Dufferin, who are among the fair women who are the real rulers of the British army. At the left is the Countess of Shaftesbury, who is another power behind the throne.

LONDON, April 4.—Women—that's the matter with the British army, which has made the world gasp by its decision to decide when and where it will obey orders.

Unofficially, there are too many young women associated with the army. Officially, there are too many old women meddling with it, both internally and externally.

It is now in very truth no longer "the army and the man." It is "army and the woman," and too much of the woman's arme.

The British army nowadays is practically a parlor game. It is to a great extent a social stunt. It is full of carpet knights.

These are in turn fooled about by the female element in their social circles and by the effete persons who are at the head of the administration of the War Department.

The social side of the matter. That is notorious.

The inadequacy of the British army is fully admitted. As a military power England ranks somewhere about on a level with Austria. About six years ago the territorial force, to take the place of the old volunteer system, was inaugurated with a great flourish of trumpets by Mr. Haldane. Since then he has been made a "lord." They have a habit in England of making "lords" out of plain misters who have shown themselves absolutely unfitted for their political duties. The operation is called raising them to the peerage, and in such a case as that mentioned does not come amiss. Less fortunate people have to pay as much as half a million dollars, when they can spare it. When they cannot, it is frequently done much more cheaply.

Immediately Mr. Haldane brought his Territorial Forces act before the British House of Parliament a writer dealt with it fully and showed that it must prove an utter failure. His main reasons for saying so were that the scheme was too voluntary, and that the length of service required each year was totally inadequate. Mr. Haldane proposed to make soldiers out of raw recruits by giving them a few drills during the year, and by having them in camp for a fortnight, provided that if they objected to the fortnight they could get off with a week.

It did not require a wonderful knowledge of military conditions to know that this would never get England very far ahead so far as regards what was then termed her "second line of defence."

The Englishman of the present day has no desire whatever to fight. He wants to be left alone, to go his comfortable way in peace. He has no sort of idea at all of encumbering himself with a heavy rifle, a knapsack and all kinds of what is to him weird "clobber." If the unfortunate truth must be confessed, most of the British lions of today bear a far stronger resemblance to domestic mice.

The British House of Parliament, like the British army, is more or less of "a social stunt," and it is infested by persons who in private life would not be able to run successfully a small coal yard.

It is impossible to exaggerate the evil of the feminine and political influences that work in the British army. We pulled through in spite of these in South Africa at an enormous and totally disproportionate expenditure of blood and money, and by the aid of the finest general in the British army, "General Luck."

There can be no doubt that in this war the British army did not show to very great advantage, and in the earlier stages of the war the conduct of many of the officers was, to put it quite mildly, extremely simple, and showed that they were utterly unfitted to engage in warfare of this nature. Lord Roberts, indeed, has said that had it not been for the assistance of the Colonial troops England would have cut a very sorry figure in this war.

The British army at the present time is, to a very great extent, a playground for rich, aristocratic idiots.

Really keen men, who take their profession with deadly seriousness, who desire to study and to advance themselves, are inbred with the proper sense of patriotism and an intense desire to serve their country, stand an excellent chance of being injured by their brother officers in some blackguardly raggings, and/or, if they should be fortunate enough to escape that, they are in danger of suffering social ostracism.

Military discipline is not wanted in the British army, and naturally it is not there. It is small wonder that they have neither time nor room to fight Kitchener in England. He would "stand for" the condition of affairs which now exists.

Many any England in war today would cut a poor figure without the assistance of her Imperial contingents. But of little ability is there in the English administration, that there is no attempt whatever made to organize this great power and to encourage the wonderful patriotism and affection for the mother country which unquestionably exists throughout the British Empire.

The Englishman is too blind and too conceited to be proud of his own great work, and he will not take advantage of it properly.

Three beautiful women, one of them born and reared near the Washington Square Arch in New York city, are leading the drawing room forces whose social influence are today charged with being responsible for the violent conflict between the army and the civil officers.

These three dashing types of the noblewoman, with the Marchioness of Londonderry, are openly charged with sowing the seed of discontent in army circles that resulted in many officers refusing further service with the colors if that service demanded that the covenanters of Ulster should be made marks for bullet and bayonet.

The trio of beauties is composed of Flora, Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava.

The Viscountess Massereene and Ferrard,

The Countess of Shaftesbury.

Soldier, Buried in Avalanche, Sleeps

MILAN, April 4.—The physical endurance of the Italian soldier is ably illustrated by the case of the Sicilian, Steffano Murat, who was caught in an avalanche and buried six feet in the snow, where he remained for forty hours before being rescued. He has suffered only slight frost bites.

He said he fell on his back in the deep snow and was unable to free himself from his heavy knapsack. He then went to sleep and slept well, dreaming that sappers had come to his rescue.

QUEEN MOTHER HELPS TO OPEN STEAD MEMORIAL

Secretary Thanks Hearst Newspapers for Aid in Establishing Home for Stage Women.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 4.—Queen Alexandra, unannounced, was among the throng of women who visited the opening of the late W. T. Stead hotel in London this week. The Queen mother was greatly interested in the movement, which is conducted by Major-General Brocklehurst, executive of the Stead memorial fund, and supported wholly by women of all nationalities in all parts of the world and is herself the donor of $500 for which one room in the hotel has been named after her.

The purpose of the fund is to provide comfortable, clean and respectable lodgings for working women, with as near a combination of the features of hotel and club as possible. This first Stead hotel is located on a corner of St. George's road, not far from Victoria station, and in a desirable neighborhood. The district is popular among stage folk and it is the desire of the management to attract chorus girls and "extra people" who cannot afford the prevailing rates for lodgings thereabouts.

There are accommodations now for twenty-five girls, but if the demand warrants it, room can be made for double this number.

Mrs. Josephine Marshall, secretary and the most active worker for the memorial fund, expressed much gratitude for "all that Mr. Hearst has done and is doing with his great newspapers for our cause."

Eventually it is the plan of the fund to have one hundred hotels scattered about the London districts, appealing to working women of every class.

Duke of Messari Has Marital Woes

Divorced in America, Fears Law in Italy.

PARIS, April 4. — Matrimonial troubles are embittering the life of the Duke of Messari, a member of the old Florentine nobility.

The Duke wished a divorce and had already decided upon a second union. Divorce not being permitted by the Italian law, he went to reside in Hungary long enough to become a naturalized Hungarian. This done, he presented his petition to the courts of his new country. It was, however, refused.

The Duke once more changed his nationality. He crossed to the United States and became an American citizen. The Duke was at last able to get a divorce and marry again. He then prepared to return to his ancestral home in Florence to settle down in peace. It is with intense chagrin that he now learns that if he returns to Italy, where his divorce is held to be invalid, he will be arrested and imprisoned for bigamy.

American Countess Is Noted Hostess

Spends $5,000 for Floral Decorations at Feast.

LONDON, April 4.—The recent dinner given by Cora, Countess of Stafford, at which Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck were the guests of honor, has been the talk of social London. The floral decorations alone cost more than $5,000, while the entertainment afterwards, which included the Queen's Hall Orchestra, must have cost a small fortune.

The Countess, whose invitations are among the most sought after in London, is an American woman, who, at the time she married the fourth Earl of Stafford in 1899, was the widow of Samuel Colgate of New York. The Countess has been married three times, her first husband being Martyn Kennard, although she still retains the title of Countess by courtesy.

Bird Cages for Matinee Guests

PARIS, April 4.—Novel social features are the rage in Parisian society, but so far the most sensational event is credited to Baroness Bernhard d'Armella, who gave a Japanese matinee.

The ground floor of her magnificient mansion was transformed into a Japanese village, every feature of which was faithfully reproduced. The guests came in Japanese costume and upon their arrival received a gift of a bird cage, decorated with apple blossoms and containing rare birds found only in Japan.

ENTER MISS PARBURY; SHE THINKS U. S. HORRID

British Authoress Summons Courage to Visit 'Hateful Americans," Who Lack Sense of Honor

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, April 4.—Not because she thinks it will give her pleasure—"I think Americans are hateful," she says—but because she wants to gather material for a book she is to write criticising America and Americans, Miss Florence Parbury, author, painter, musician and the first Englishwoman to fly, is now in Paris preparing a special wardrobe for her visit to New York.

She holds daily conferences with her dressmakers, milliners and jewelers, being especially anxious to hold her own with smart New York women, and she hopes to sail within a fortnight. Miss Parbury is a close friend of King George and Queen Mary.

"I don't like Americans personally, however. They lack a sense of honor, and you can never rely on their word.

"The men are arrogant snobs who think they are the salt of the earth, while the women are heartless and always aspiring to high social positions which they are incapable of filling. This causes them to neglect the proper bringing up of their children."

"I believe the example of American training and education of women," she said, "has had an immense influence for good on the emancipation of women in Europe and has forced upon the nations of the old world the necessity for their higher technical education.

SHORT SKIRTS WRECKING TRAINS IN THE FASHIONS

Meanwhile Paris Is Noting a Growing Daringness in the Scantiness of Gowns.

By MME. RENEE DUVANT.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, April 4.—Fashion has come to the point where it may be said with literal truth that it changes every minute—not on oftener. To be sure, the general scheme may remain the same throughout the greater part of a season, but there is a never-ending transformation of details.

Since the study of artistic lines and contours dominates the modern academies of fashion—as the great dressmaking and millinery ateliers in Paris may well be called—the impressionistic freedom that is allowed in producing given effects is more than ever remarkable. Provided that these effects are attained, who cares about the method?

It was said most authoritatively some time ago that the train was doomed. This may be the fact as to the near future, but there are many high exemplars of fashion who persist in wearing it, much curtailed and even attenuated, it is true, but conspicuous all the same.

Still the short skirt is gaining more and more in favor, the evening train showing a steady tendency to dwindle into a long, narrow appendage to the belt or the drapery of the back or shoulders. The most notable fact in this connection is that short skirts and narrow trains are frequently seen together.

Meanwhile the scantiness of fashionable dress is being more and more exaggerated. The corsage is sleeveless, with very large openings for the arms, exposing virtually the whole of each shoulder and sometimes a good deal of the flesh immediately below and around the armpit. Both in front and behind, the triangular-made space left by this daringly decollete corsage, reaches an apex considerably lower than heretofore.

In front the point is a short distance only from the relatively high waist-line; behind it is in many instances at the waist-line itself. The slight attachment of the corsage to the shoulders makes the wearing of it sometimes rather perilous in a society where any of the ancient canons of propriety in dress are still in a measure retained.

In the latest phase of the Spring styles skirts are tending towards a slightly greater amplitude. This may be a forewarning of what should be expected later in the year.

There is also a movement towards the general readoption of the short cape which was so much in vogue a few years ago. In velvet, lined with silk, and with a square-cut collar, it is likely to be much seen this Summer. One of its great advantages is that it can be worn over almost any costume, even one of white muslin.

$200,000 Will Buy Austrian Barony

LONDON, April 4—An old Austrian title is offered for sale through an "ad" in a morning newspaper. The price asked is $200,000, but any offer will be considered.

The title, which dates from the sixteenth century, is a barony of a family in impoverished circumstances. It does not convey any estate with it, but includes insignia and decorations.

NEW LEAGUE TO TEACH HOW TO SIT AND STAND

Seats in Schools, Offices and Parks Are Wrong, Say Boston Doctors.

DR. HARRINGTON'S "DON'TS"

Never stand with your heels together.

Don't sit in COMFORTABLE chairs.

The floor is the ideal seat.

Girls—stop wearing corsets.

Have your shoes fit your feet, not the feet your shoes.

Ad these faults and many others the new American Posture League, of which several Boston physicians, including Dr. Joel H. Goldthwaite of No. 372 Marlboro street, Dr. E. G. Brackett and Dr. Z. B. Adams of No. 166 Newbury street, are directors, is going to correct.

It, league has just been incorporated with the aim to make people sit and stand properly. Proper seats for schools, offices, shops, street cars and even the home will be widely advocated.

In Boston the crusade is already on in public schools. The teachers are now the censors of how children shall sit and stand in the school room. Visits by experts are paid to the different recitation rooms and reports as to posture indicated by "good," "fair" and "poor" are returned to the school committee headquarters.

If the word "poor" appears on a report the teacher is reprimanded.

DANGER IN COMFORT.

The posture league "don't" and "stops" will be likely to cause surprise to thousands of back aches who don't know the reason.

Dr. Thomas F. Harrington, director of hygiene in the Boston public schools, has set forth warnings similar to those of the Posture League crusade.

"The fault with out sitting posture is the comfortable chair," he says. "Everybody sits on their backbone. We have a series of charts that have come down through the generations which are almost too comfortable. We don't sit upright in them. We sit on the backbone.

"The result is that the muscles in the small of the back get no exercise. When we sit 'on the backbone' the two 'wings' (ischia bones) on either side of the spinal column are stretched apart, the ligaments are stretched unnaturally, the vertabrae slips forward out of normal position and backache ensues.

"The straight back chair—or better still chairs without backs, and best of all the floor—makes the best seat. The Arab sits on the ground. It is a gymnastic feat for us to get up from such a position, to the Arab it is easy.

BAN THE TIGHT SHOE.

"Everyone should sit squarely with the spinal column straight up and down. The day of the old military position with the heels together and toes fan-shape is here. We know that is wrong. 'At ease,' the command now when soldiers or children have to stand long, means spreading the feet slightly apart, and thus increasing the base upon which the body rests.

"A fault is to drop the shoulder to one side. The backbone is curved correspondingly, and in time deformity will occur. Sometimes it is possible to tell the occupation of a person from his faulty position. Physicians, for instance, too often have the tendency to let one shoulder drop, a posture acquired from listening to the patient, from sitting and bending over at the bedside of the sick.

"Your Posture League will be likely to ban the tight shoe, the corset, high heels, everything that causes or tends to prevent natural freedom of the muscles.

"Even our shoes are almost too comfortable—like our chairs. They do too much of the work which the muscles of the foot should be made to do."

Here are the correct standing and walking positions as they are now taught to the school children, Dr. Harrington states that they are equally applicable to all.

THE CORRECT METHOD.

Standing—Feet on the same line pointing forward with toe heels slightly separated or slightly divergent (turned out) but heels together. The straight line position gives the greatest strength and agility and prevents the dropping of the bones of the foot, the so-called knock ankle. High heels soon produce a deformity when the divergent foot position is practiced in standing.

The body should be held erect on the hips, inclined a little forward, shoulders square and falling equally, chest out, head held erect and not protuberant, head erect and square to the front, chin slightly drawn in, without constraint, eyes straight to front arms and hands hanging naturally, back of the hands outward, little fingers opposite the midsternal line of the body, elbows near the body. Rigidity is to be avoided.

Walking—The "erect" or "straight leg" gait is preferable. The trunk is held erect or with a slight inclination forward in walking. The leg is swung forward with the foot pointing straight forward or with a slight outward divergency. The heel should strike the ground first with the knee but little bent. As the foot behind the heel should be raised straight with a forward push, with the front of the foot at the same time that the foot of the leg in front is placed flat upon the ground. The arms should be allowed to swing naturally, but all side oscillations or twisting of the hips and shoulders are to be avoided.

Portable Hoisting Engineers' Union No. 4 will vote on a proposition to insure each member for at least $1,000, by the general union itself, at a specially notified meeting Tuesday night.

BOSTON TO HAVE TEXTILE WEEK CELEBRATION

Largest Gathering in History of the Industry to Open Here on April 27.

Boston is to have a "Textile Week."

Thousands of men who directly represent an investment of nearly $5,000,000,000 will participate in three big conventions of cotton and woolen manufacturers, which are to be held in connection with the fourth national textile exhibition in Mechanics Building April 27 to May 2.

It will be the largest gathering of textile men ever assembled and the exhibition will be by far the largest display of textile appliances ever made in the world.

To the average Bostonian the announcement that we are to have a "Textile Week" will not cause any great excitement, yet in every corner of the United States where there is a cotton, woolen or silk mill, the owners, overseers and superintendents are anticipating it with a lot of interest. About every person who is in Who's Who in the mill world is coming to Boston. In fact it will be quite the fashion among textile men to be seen in Boston during "Textile Week."

THE BANNER STATE.

Massachusetts is the banner State in the affairs of the textile world and it is fitting that this big affair should take place in Boston. More than one-fourth of textile manufacturing is done in the Bay State; nearly $300,000 wage earners are employed and nearly $500,000,000 is invested in this industry here. Massachusetts also boasts of having the two largest manufacturers of textile machinery.

From away down South 500 members of the Southern Textile Association will come here. The majority of them are from the Carolinas and Georgia, but there will be a few from other Southern States. The delegation from Dixie is of such importance to the men who have "Textile Week" in hand that they will designate a day as "Southern Textile Day."

"The three associations that will hold their conventions here are the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, the National Association of Woolen and Worsted Overseers, and the Southern Textile Association. The American Cotton Manufacturers' Association meets in New York but this organization has changed the date of its convention in order that the members may come to Boston for the exposition in Mechanics building. All of the meetings will take place in Paul Revere and other smaller halls in Mechanics Building. It is probable that the Southern New England Textile Club will also change the date and place of its meeting so as to be in with the big show during "Textile Week."

MACHINERY THE MAGNET.

To the experts in the industry the display of machinery in Mechanics building will be the magnet that will draw them to the Hub. About everything that is new and old in use for the economical production of cloth from cotton and wool and silk will be on exhibition. To the person outside of the industry the machinery ought to hold a big interest for some of the appliances seem almost human in their operations. Most of the machines on exhibition will be in operation turning out the finished product.

Chester I. Campbell, who has had remarkable success as manager of the automobile, industrial, motor boat and other big expositions, is the general manager of the exhibition. F. H. Bishop of the Universal Winding Company, of this city, is president of the Textile Exhibitors' Association under whose auspices the exposition and conventions are to be held. President Bishop and Vice-President E. F. Hathaway, of the American Warp Drawing Machine Company, of this city, have worked tirelessly with the directors of the association are: L. W. Campbell, Woonsocket, R. I.; G. A. Chase, Readville; George P. White, Whitinsville; L. E. Tracy, Boston; E. F. Hathaway, F. H. Bishop and Chester I. Campbell.

He Was a Bonehead on Legal Tactics

But Then the Lawyer Was Lacking in Tact.

An excited individual entered the office of James M. Keyes, the South Boston attorney, last week and informed him that he desired him to collect a bill of $7.50 from a person in New York City.

Mr. Keyes told him that it would cost several times the face of the bill. "Why, I though you could collect it for a two cent stamp" replied the caller. Mr. Keyes gave him the "once over" and replied: "that might be true my dear fellow if the man on the other end was as big a bonehead as you."

In telling the story, "Jim," said the man left his office in a huff and that he lost a promising client through his lack of tact.

Dedham to Have Hot Town Meeting

New High School and Motor Fire Trucks to Be Voted on.

The building of a new high school, the purchase of a motor fire apparatus and the granting of one day off in seven for firemen and policemen are a few of the sixty-eight articles on the town warrant which will be voted on at the annual town meeting at Dedham tomorrow night.

An appropriation of $10,000 to continue the work of the tree warden will be opposed as many citizens believe the town is wasting its money for this work. The money for exterminating brown tail and gypsy moths is expended as the State forestery department direct.

Admiral Mahan Answers Eliot

Refutes 20th Century Religion

"Merely a Slap Dash Opinion"

Declares Harvard Educator's Theory Puts Christianity Below Mohammedanism.

Rear Admiral A. T. Mahan, U. S. N., scores Dr. Charles W. Eliot's Twentieth Century Religion as a "mere slap dash, superficial opinion, formed on imperfect knowledge," in the current number of the North American Review.

Dr. Eliot's statement on the Twentieth Century Religion was read at the annual meeting of Unitarian churches in Buffalo four months ago and has since been printed and circulated through the United States by the American Unitarian Association.

Dr. Mahan says: "Dr. Eliot makes Christianity less than Mohammedanism.

"If we are to accept his comments upon the spirit of democracy as affecting men's conceptions of and their attitude toward the churches, it is a prediction that reverence for the Almighty, at least in spiritual matters, is undermined and about to fall."

Dr. Eliot says:

Twentieth century people recognize God chiefly in the wonderful energies of sound, light and electricity, in the vital processes of plants and animals.

Dr. Mahan replied:

Surely by this he does not imply that nineteenth or eighteenth century Christian people saw lesser gods than God in such activities.

The countries of the East do not want our Christianity as preached today in many pulpits. They want nothing to do with traditional Christianity. It is an absolute failure.

The enterprise of Protestant mission work is now represented by 24,002 foreign missionaries, 111,963 native workers, 2,644,170 adult communicants, a Christian community of 6,837,736, 86 colleges, 522 normal and theological schools.

Socrates is a teacher on a par with Christ.

We only have tepid admiration for Socrates, as he is a teacher long dead.

The Fatherhood of God is a scientific proposition.

Dr. Elliot's postulate of the Fatherhood of God cannot be substantiated as a scientific proposition. Apart from a revelation, the existence of God cannot receive that demonstration to the senses which science demands for acceptance as a fact.

Dr. Mahan concludes: "From the beginning the Christian faith has had one foundation, notwithstanding Dr. Eliot's claim, and that is this:

"Jesus Christ, who died; yea, rather who is risen again, who sitteth at the right hand of God."

'HOME WOMAN' TO BE BIG FEATURE IN SUFFRAGE PARADE

Pageants and Floats to Depict Feminine Influence in World of Today.

Pageantry typifying woman's power to mould child-life, her influence in the nursery, her surroundings in the kitchen and her present-day responsibilities in the world of business will play a prominent part in the big suffrage parade in this city on May 2 next.

This feature of the great demonstration, which will be participated in by representative women from every city and town in the State, with at least 10,000 in the line of march, is planned to show woman's power for good or evil and her right to equal suffrage.

To insure an effectual portrayal of woman's manifold duties in this way, Miss Virginia Tanner, pageant maker and dancer, assisted by Mrs. Thomas P. Gray, Jr., of Cambridge, is busily engaged in drilling several groups of women and children to appear.

More than a score of these features will be used, built upon huge automobile drays and operated by prominent society women, all of which are intended to represent some phase of woman's activity in the life of the State and the country.

Some of the feature floats will show happy young motherhood surrounded by equally happy child-life, symbolized by groups of dancers, while still others will depict women in the nursery, in the kitchen, in the professions and in the trades.

Girls at work in the different trades, with real wage-workers taking the different places filled by them in actual life, college girls, home girls, all will have a part to play in the great demonstration, of which Mrs. Thomas P. Curtis of this city will be chief marshal.

Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley will review the marching host of votes-for-women advocates, upon invitation of the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association, the officers of which assert that it will be the biggest and most artistic strictly outdoor event ever held in the State exclusively under the auspices of women.

ASTRONOMER WHO WARNS AGAINST MEN BORN IN FEBRUARY

Catherine H. Thompson, Ph. D., who says stars are against bachelors born in the second month of the year.

GIRLS WARNED NOT TO MARRY FEBRUARY MEN

Revelations of the Stars Against Them, Declares Catherine H. Thompson, Ph. D.

"Young woman, don't attempt to marry a man who was born in February," is the advice given by Catherine H. Thompson, Ph. D.

"All but three of Boston's Back Bay bachelors were born in February," she continues, "and that is one reason why they do not wed. There is something strange about the men born in this month. They really can't help remaining single. Pity them because the revelations of the stars are against them, but don't marry them.

WOMEN INTERESTED.

"It is surprising what astrology is doing to guide people and how much more they are depending upon it. Society women are giving it much attention.

"Back Bay people like the tango, for the stars tell us this is the age of happiness. We must not look upon these new dances as immoral.

"The planets are influencing us. We must have enjoyment. Don't misinterpret this desire to be pleased. Old men want to dance the tango because they can't help it. Moving picture shows are appealing to every one. Constant seeking for pleasure is abroad.

BACK TO CHILDHOOD.

"Some sedate people sit back and say the world is going backward. This isn't so. People are bound to have happiness. Those new dances are opportunities to express it. We are all getting back into a state of childhood and we want to be entertained more than ever.

"Ministers are turning their sermons into stories. If the churches would cater even more to the spirit of entertainment, they would draw larger crowds.

"Young people should be cautious about getting married. The teaching of the stars is against it, because of the signs of national disruption. Notwithstanding this, happiness has come to stay for the individual. There will be more scientific marriages in the future, for people will be more particular who they marry."

The Union of the Best Women's Shoe with the Busiest Women's Shoe Store

PATRICIAN Shoe for Women

The first week of our formal introduction of PATRICIAN shoes for women was a week of public endorsement of our faith in the style and value merits of this well-known shoe.

WOMEN who have always bought their shoes here because they like our service and appreciate our guarantee of "satisfaction or your money back," were delighted with our new PATRICIAN SHOES in their many new PATRICIAN styles.

WOMEN who have been wearing PATRICIAN SHOES for years found new charms in their favorite footwear here last week. They never saw so many new PATRICIAN styles because THERE NEVER WERE so many new PATRICIAN styles. Many of them never before knew the real PATRICIAN fit.

PATRICIAN SHOES are at their best HERE and NOW. The stocks could not be newer, for there is not a pair here that was not made by the PATRICIAN factory ON OUR SPECIAL ORDER placed by us after the styles for Spring had been decided upon.

Our shelves are replenished for the greatest shoe-selling week of the entire year—the six days before Easter Sunday.

PATRICIAN SHOES are made of PATRICIAN stock by PATRICIAN workmen in the PATRICIAN factory and are sold nowhere under any name other than PATRICIAN and are sold in Boston only at the MAGRANE HOUSTON CO.
